Oil Pickets Hit Airport

Court Halts Action

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia Supreme Court injunction halting picketing at Vancouver International Airport was granted the department of transport today.

Airport officials said pickets were dispersing.

Airport Manager W. L. Inglis said the pickets started to move off as soon as the injunction was served.

He said all airline workers were back on the job again and were trying to get things back to normal as quickly as possible.

The busy airport was thrown into confusion when the pickets, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, appeared in the early morning hours, forcing cancellation of several flights and delaying most of the others.

Long queues of passengers stretched across the floor inside the main terminal as the long wait started.

Flights of B.C. Airlines were cancelled and CP Air said passengers were being accepted as facilities permit. One CP Air flight left the airport this morning but other flight plans remained indefinite.

STAFF STAYED

There were delays to Air Canada flights and the company's overnight staff remained on the job, on overtime.

United Air Lines, with no union personnel at the airport, continued regular flights.

Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union said

B.C. TEL MONOPOLY ATTACKED BY TORY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Telephone Company should neither be taken over by government nor continue to operate as a private monopoly, John de Wolf, B.C. Progressive Conservative leader, said Friday.

"We want the monopoly franchise of the B.C. Tel ended forthwith," he said. "And we want the regulations governing rates and profits of the B.C. Tel ended forthwith."

Grits Besieging Phil's Jericho

By BOB MITCHELL, Times Staff

KAMLOOPS — It was the Battle of Jericho Friday night.

A Liberal army of some 2,000 supporters, in more than 350 vehicles, wound through the streets of downtown Kamloops beneath the hilltop residence of Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi.

The massive, horn-honking demonstration, which included provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer and four Interior Liberal candidates, brought closer to reality the party's hopes of toppling Gaglardi out of the Kamloops seat which he has held for 17 years.

Wackiest Political Event

"It's fairly obvious that Mr. Gaglardi is going to be defeated by a fairly wide margin," McGeer said as he marched through the city.

"It's game over—it's gotta be game over," said McGeer's ecstatic campaign manager Ray Torresan as he surveyed the five-mile cavalcade from a bridge over the North Thompson River.

It was the biggest and wackiest political event in the history of the town of 35,000. Credit for the parade's success and for Liberal enthusiasm generally must go to Yarl Whist, campaign manager for the Kamloops Liberal candidate Mac Bryson.

It was Whist who masterminded the Liberal defeat of Progressive Conservative Davie Fulton during the 1968 federal election and put Len Marchand into the House of Commons.

Since the election was announced four weeks ago, Liberal campaigners have distributed 11,000 Bryson bumper stickers, 8,000 Bryson buttons, 1,000 posters reading "Bryson Cares" and 4,000 four-by-eight plywood signs.

That's in a riding with some 22,800 eligible voters. Organizers said Friday they have 2,000 active workers involved in Bryson's campaign.

Young Liberals Abound

Many, including Bryson and his wife, were out on Kamloops roads at 6 a.m. every morning this week to hold up signs urging work-bound residents to "Vote Bryson."

The most noticeable feature of the parade was youthfulness. Children and teen-agers carried signs, rode on floats or played in one of three bands.

There was a remarkable number of girls, most of them too young to vote, clad in shorts or bikinis. A girl on horseback leading the parade held the bridle of a colt wearing a banner that read "Young Liberal."

There were clowns, cars decorated with Bryson posters, ribbons and balloons, and the racket of hundreds of honking horns.

Many of the cars in the parade came from neighboring ridings of Shuswap, Cariboo and Yale-Lillooet.

Victoria Street, the city's main thoroughfare, was lined with Friday night shoppers who sat on their parked cars, many apparently enjoying the demonstration.

McGeer darted periodically out of the parade to shake hands with spectators, some of whom did not realise who he was until after he had resumed his place in the parade.

Local Gaglardi supporters were few and far between but there was the occasional "Yea, Gaglardi" shout from children and adults. A biplane pulling a "Vote Gaglardi" slogan circled above Kamloops for two hours during the parade.

It would have been interesting to read the former highways minister's thoughts as he surveyed the noisy cavalcade passing beneath his hilltop residence.

'Get Gaglardi' Main Issue

The question of defeating Gaglardi at the polls next Wednesday makes all other issues in the Kamloops riding seem minor.

Gaglardi resigned his portfolio 18 months after questions arose about land deals in which his sons were involved. Earlier this week Premier Bennett announced he would give Gaglardi a portfolio if a Social Credit government is re-elected.

Kamloops Liberal supporters were incensed at the announcement, and while they generally concede their party doesn't stand a chance of forming the next government, they see the election as their chance to end the Socred's political career."

The parade ended with a rally in a North Kamloops shopping centre where McGeer and the four Liberal candidates made brief statements to the cheering crowd.

The candidates included Lloyd Askew from Shuswap, Dr. Lorne Ross from Yale-Lillooet, Dave Zirnhelt—UBC student president last year—from Cariboo, and Bryson.

Only Solution Force—Nasser

CAIRO (Reuters) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt said today the Al Aksah Mosque fire showed force is the only solution to the Middle East situation.

In a message to the Egyptian armed forces, the president said he had thought a great deal about this "horrible crime" and come to the conclusion that there is no alternative, hope or path other than force.

"I have long waited and reflected about the terrible crime which has been committed against the holy of holies of our religion, our history and our civilization," the president said.

"In the end I found nothing but a reaffirmation of the facts that were clear to us from the first day of our cruel experience, namely, that there is no substitute, no hope, no way but Arab force with all it could mobilize, all it could direct and all it could pressure with, until, with God's will, we emerge victorious."

Nasser told his armed forces they were facing "an enemy who has not challenged man, but, in his arrogance and foolhardiness has stretched his arrogance to the sanctities that God has chosen as his houses. . . ."

Meanwhile, the secretary-general of the Arab League, Abdel Khalek Hassouna, today invited foreign ministers of the 14 member states to meet here Monday to discuss the Al Aksah Mosque fire and other Arab issues.

League sources expect most member states to accept the invitation.

The agenda for the meeting Monday night would also cover latest developments in the conflict with Israel and a call by Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization for an Arab summit meeting, the sources said.

A hand grenade exploded today in a Gaza Strip vegetable market that remained open during a general strike over the fire at Islam's holy Al Aksah Mosque. Two Arabs were killed and 15 injured.

All other stores in the teeming Gaza Strip remained closed. The grenade exploded at a market in Rafiah, in the southern part of the Israeli-held strip.

Israeli paratroops and all security forces were on the alert and most Arabs remained indoors in the strip, in towns along the occupied West Bank and in Jerusalem.

Troops and police patrolled near the walls and in the narrow alleys of the Old City. No clashes were reported, but the entire area was tense.

Two units of paratroops were drafted into the occupied section

'Judge Our Record' WAC Tells Nanaimo

By JOHN DRISCOLL, Times Staff

NANAIMO — Tom Berger was only a stone's throw away here Friday but Premier Bennett was not in a stone-throwing mood.

Not a single wild charge.

Not one baleful hint of impending doom.

He just laid out the accomplishments of the last 17 years and said: "Judge."

Bennett told an overflow, friendly crowd at the 650-seat Capitol Theatre he was not going to knock any political party.

"We don't claim ourselves to be perfection," he said. "But with your help we'll strive toward perfection."

Earlier in the evening, Bennett had checked into a hotel room and napped while Mayor Frank Ney fretted in the lobby below.

Bennett slept through a scheduled meeting at an Indian reserve. He arrived at a Moose Lodge convention with Ney in time to shake hands before rushing away to the rally.

There were a few hecklers present but they found Bennett's positive style difficult to argue with.

"When I crossed the floor of the House we were the number one have-not province in the nation. Now we are the number one have province."

Bennett called the Columbia River Treaty with the United States "the best international deal ever made.

"Nobody but B.C. could have made such a deal with the Yankee traders. Isn't it nice to have the United States $600 million in debt to us?

"We took the money in advance at 4.5 per cent interest and we're now investing some of it at 8.2 per cent," he said.

Bennett listed the balanced budgets, surplus and the lowest tax rate in Canada as Socred achievements.

"It's not a question of where the money is coming from for new programs. It's where the money went before, my friend."

Bennett claimed his financial policy has saved the taxpayers "tens of millions of dollars. Seventeen years is a very short period of time," he said, pointing to Alberta where Social Credit has held sway for 34 years.

Bennett dropped the hint that the Nanaimo area would

Russians, The Pets Are Coming

SANTIAGO, Chile (Reuters) — The Soviet Embassy still was under police guard Friday — 24 hours after it was invaded by hundreds of dogs and cats.

Owners brought their pets to the embassy after finding leaflets carrying its address and offering good prices for dogs and cats for research.

Later, when it became apparent the leaflets — distributed in poor areas of the city — were a hoax, crowds outside the embassy began protesting the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Bennett, Berger Beaten by Bingo

By JIM HUME
Times Staff

NANAIMO—It was Berger, Bennett or Bingo in Nanaimo Friday night.

And bingo, with $2,500 riding on the final card of the night, outdrew the two political leaders four to one.

While W. A. C. Bennett jammed 650-plus into the Capital Theatre for a night of "the good life," and Tom Berger, leader of the New Democratic Party, led 650-plus into the Quennell School gymnasium, 2,300 gamblers clutching bingo cards swamped the civic arena.

Berger Backed by First Line

But if bingo won in the crowd, it lost in the big name and political promise game.

Berger, flanked by former provincial leader Bob Strachan, National Leader Tommy Douglas, and candidates Johnny Squire of Port Alberni, Harry Harris of Comox, and Dave Stupich of Nanaimo was at his best before the capacity crowd of the faithful.

While signs and banners flashed and cheers echoed through the old gym, Berger, not unexpectedly, promised a government car insurance plan if the NDP is elected Aug. 27.

It would, said Berger, be based on the Saskatchewan government auto insurance program, and save insurance purchasers up to 30 per cent in cost.

To back his promise, Berger said the Saskatchewan plan, fathered by Douglas, now was acknowledged as the best in North America — "even by the Wall Street Journal. And if it's good enough for the Wall Street Journal, it's good enough for me."

Berger said his insurance scheme would not force private companies out of business.

"They will," he said, "have the right to compete with the government scheme.

"Right now, B.C. has 188 auto insurance companies. But

Ulster Officials Put Ban On Paisley Protest Parade

BELFAST (CP)—The Northern Irish government today banned a Protestant extremist motorcade about an hour before the first cars were scheduled to leave the cathedral city of Armagh for riot-scarred Belfast.

The Ulster attorney-general ruled that the proposed motorcade, organized by militant Rev. Ian Paisley to protest the virtual disarming of the controversial B-Special police reserves, would be in defiance of a government ban on public meetings made after riots wracked the country last week.

Paisley, leader of the extreme Protestant Free Presbyterian Church, intended to lead his supporters to Stormont Castle, seat of the Northern Ireland Parliament, and hand in a petition to Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark.

The petition condemns a British military order Friday putting the police reservists' weapons under tighter control.

PAISLEY
. . . planned petition

Meanwhile the B-Specials, an almost wholly Protestant force hated and feared by Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority, today began handing in their guns to Belfast's central armories as they went off duty.

British troops were reported standing ready today along the 42-mile route of the parade which would have taken the Protestant cars through several parts of the province where more than half the population is Roman Catholic.

The British-appointed security head in Northern Ireland, Lt.-Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, said in his order Friday the B-Specials would get their guns back only on his command. Observers here said extreme Protestant factions saw the move as a direct threat to their safety.

FIRST TOTEM to be erected in more than 80 years at Masset in the Queen Charlottes was installed in a ritual Haida ceremony Friday. Carved from a 40-foot red cedar log, it is the work of Robert Davidson, a former native of Masset who now works as a craftsman in Vancouver.

U.S. Accedes to Thai Demands

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States agreed Friday to a request by Thailand to begin talks about reducing the 49,200 American military forces in that country, most of whom provide air support for the war in South Vietnam.

This development was an unexpected climax in the running dispute over the secret 1965 U.S.-Thai contingency plan for possible use of American combat troops in Thailand.

U.S. officials contended there was no direct cause and effect between the two chains of events. But they were unquestionably interrelated. Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman sharply told newsmen in Bangkok on Tuesday that the best way to end suspicions that Thailand wants Americans to fight for it is to "start the process of immediate evacuation" of forces now based there.

The next day, Wednesday, according to the American account, Thanat told Leonard Unger, U.S. ambassador in Bangkok, that Thailand wants to begin discussions about a "general reduction in the level of U.S. forces" in Thailand.

In disclosing that request, U.S. officials Friday put the whole subject of US. force reductions in Thailand in a considerably calmer context, resulting from President Nixon's talks in Bangkok last month.

Furthermore, White House sources said, "we're not talking about a significant reduction" of U.S. forces in Thailand, but only about "contacts" that "could lead to an adjustment which would be very small if it takes place."

In Bangkok, however, Thanat was reported to have said that Thailand has told the United States it wants to start talks about the withdrawal of all U.S. forces. Thai sources reportedly said the combination of congressional alarm about the American presence in Thailand, and statements Thursday by Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird, made Thai leaders resigned to fighting their own battles against internal Communists.

There was no precise information, however, on exactly what Thailand has in mind. Few American officials believe Thailand seeks a swift rundown in the level of U.S. forces there. That would have major repercussions on the war in Vietnam, and also on the semi-secret war in Laos, which is also supported from air bases in Thailand.

Some U.S. sources suggested that Thanat's objective is short range, to slap back at U.S. "Doves," and especially at Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright, whose views long have personally infuriated Thanat.

But other American sources concede that with the Nixon administration embarked on a policy of progressive military disengagement in Asia, Thailand is now anxious to pave the way for resuming its own historic fence-sitting position in Asia, reducing its American entanglements.

State Department Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey made the U.S. announcement about American-Thai troop reduction talks, after the news first broke in Bangkok Friday.

McCloskey said:

"The president, in his meetings with Thai leaders recently in Bangkok, agreed that at the appropriate time there should be consultations leading to a gradual reduction in the level of our forces in Thailand.

"The foreign minister of Thailand has now taken the initiative with our ambassador, suggesting discussions along these lines, and we for our part are willing to enter into such discussions."

What was contemplated in the president's talks in Bangkok, however, was a more graceful, more leisurely discussion of eventual phased reduction of U.S. troop levels there.

Such a reduction process, U.S. sources said, has been considered inevitable in the long run because the original main purpose for the huge buildup of American airpower in Thailand was to provide the bulk of U.S. capacity for bombing North Vietnam. The U.S. ceased that bombing last Nov. 1.

There are at present approximately 48,000 U.S. military personnel in Thailand, McCloskey told newsmen, about three-fourths of them air force and one-fourth army, with the latter providing logistical support for 'air operations in Vietnam." Additionally, said McCloskey, 1,200 other military personnel "provide training, assistance and advice to Thai forces."

Much of the U.S. air activity actually is carried out in Laos, against the so-called Ho Chi Minh infiltration trails running from North to South Vietnam, and also against Communist activity directed against the government of Laos.

There are six major U.S. air bases in Thailand: Udorn, U-Tapao, Ubon, Korat, Nakorn Phanom and Tak-Let.

Thailand holds legal title to all these bases, plus others from which U.S. forces operate. In the years between 1964 and 1967, Thailand refused to agree to have the United States say publicly that these bases even existed.

An attempt by Sen. Fullbright to hold hearings in 1966 to disclose the extent of the U.S. military involvement in Thailand aroused Thai indignation and administration pressure to head off the hearings. They were not held, but now a new set of hearings is scheduled by a foreign relations subcommittee for September in which the disputed 1965 military contingency plan is one of the targets.

What is fundamentally at issue is an attempt by the Senate to assert congressional power to prevent secret commitments of U.S. forces abroad.

The 1965 plan envisions the use of U.S. combat forces, under over-all Thai command, to help defend Thailand by checking any Communist thrust against it in Laos, across the Thai border.

Bernadette Wows Manhattan Irish

By COLMAN McCARTHY

NEW YORK (UP)—Coming from the mother country to have a run at the mother lode, Bernadette Devlin spent her first evening in America among 600 Irish-born and Irish-loving at the upper tip of Manhattan.

Packed into a hall under a bowling alley, the crowd roared and rocked with her, and had out the money purses long before the 22-year-old member of parliament and street-fighter finished her impassioned speech.

Only if she had recited the rosary in Gaelic would they have been likely to reach for their singles, fives and tens sooner.

The Inwood neighborhood boasts more bars per capita than any other equal-sized area in the world. With a population 40 per cent Jewish, 40 per cent Irish and the rest everything, the area is politically unpredictable.

STARTED JAVITS

It has sent an Irish assemblyman to Albany for the past 10 years, but in 1948 it started Jake Javits on his way when he defeated Paul O'Dwyer for Congress.

Her speech was scheduled for 9 p.m.

By 8, the hall was filled, the bowling noise above dinned out by bunched-in laughter and talk below. There were the young children, whom the Irish love to put on their shoulders and expose to heroes so the kids will have a lifetime brag-commodity of saying I saw so-and-so when I was four.

The young women, Kates, Eillens, Mavourneens, wore dresses that covered them from neck to knees with nothing suggestive in between.

Let's See It Clearly

NO POLITICAL PARTY CAN govern without end; it is beyond possibility for any human institution in our democratic system. This is particularly true when the party is almost entirely dependent on the leadership and ability of one man—as is the Social Credit Party of British Columbia. Thus the eventual passage of the present government from the scene is inevitable—it is a mathematical certainty.

Those who argue that every available vote must be cast for Social Credit in order to avoid the bogey of a socialist government in this province overlook the fact that through this policy they would eliminate the non-socialist opposition; they would ensure that there will be only the socialist organization to take over when the government is replaced.

The policy of voting for one political extreme merely to keep another extreme out of office has the seeds of its own defeat within it. Thus the argument that voting for Liberal candidates will only put the NDP into office is a timid one and a false one. Voting for a strong Liberal contingent in the Legislature is the only sure antidote to an eventual NDP regime, for the Social Credit government cannot last forever and the Liberals provide the only free-enterprise alternative.

In reality, of course, Mr. Bennet's attempt for campaign purposes to polarize the whole provincial political situation into two opposite ideological camps is contrived and distorted. Party politics in Canada has largely forsaken the traditional labels of a generation or two ago. Liberal, Conservative and Social Credit governments in federal and provincial theatres have over the years overtaken many of the CCF and NDP planks, and in effect rendered the leftist party almost redundant in Canadian politics.

Pension plans, welfare programs, compensation systems, housing and education policies of the old-line parties have made most so-called socialist proposals seem to be lagging. In addition, as Mr. Bennett has amply demonstrated, non-socialist governments have become owners of industry, transportation and other traditionally private sectors of the economy.

Mr. Berger's contribution to the British Columbia scene is political, not ideological. What he carries with him is the concept of the non-political bloc put to political use. In other words, he introduces into the political processes of this province the tactic of using trade unions —a social and economic phenomenon—as a political force. There are two major flaws in this line of thought. First, employees throughout Canada have traditionally rejected any attempt to coerce them into voting as a unit, labor or otherwise—they vote as individuals for the candidate of their choice irrespective of party affiliation. And secondly, any political leader who seeks power in British Columbia is unwise to do so with an implied obligation to any organized segment of the population whose purposes are wholly in the interests of that segment rather than of society as a whole.

Trade unions are a legitimate and necessary part of our economic and social structure. But there is no place for them behind the ministerial chair as a sort of grey eminence influencing the decisions of the head of the government. And no man should be the head of government who reaches office with even the suggestion of being under obligation to such interests.

Who Pays the Rescuer?

IT IS THE CODE OF THE SEAS that anyone able to give help shall go to the rescue of anyone in distress on or in the water. This is not merely a gallant gesture. It is a practical form of mutual aid. The one giving assistance today may be the one requiring it tomorrow.

There are occasions, however, when the principle loses some of its validity. This is the case when professional boatmen, operators of marinas and the like, are subject to far more than their share of calls and, though they are commercially involved in boating, receive no compensation for their efforts.

The complaint repeated by manager Bob Wright of the Oak Bay Marina illustrates the point. Because he has boats that can reach an accident in the general area of his operations quickly and efficiently, he is the first to receive an official summons when someone gets into trouble in the waters around the southeast coast of Greater Victoria. He goes out as a matter of conscience. But he makes the honest point that he shouldn't be expected to carry the rescue load within his territory without recompense.

He's in the boating business commercially. He burns gas on rescue missions, whether they be real emergencies or false alarms, and at times, undertakes risks to himself, his helper and his boat.

This is a situation, brought to local notice, that might be duplicated in a number of seaboard or lakeshore areas in Canada—and it can be expected to multiply with the explosive growth in boating popularity.

Mr. David Groos, Victoria's member of Parliament, has given assurance that he will take the question up with the department of transport and with the national defence department, which has jurisdiction over air-sea rescue, with a view to seeing that commercial operators are compensated for their rescue work. There is a responsibility to be discharged here. The representations by Mr. Groos should produce speedy results.

To Put 'Silver' Back in Goldstream

IT IS A MATTER OF PARTICULAR anxiety to sports fishermen, and their associations, that the coho run in Goldstream has been falling off seriously in recent seasons. The concern should be general because the fish which spawn at Goldstream are a natural resource of interest to tourists and to local citizens and because they provide one of the most accessible, most sheltered and most popular fisheries, for sportsmen only, on the lower Island. Apart from recreational considerations, that has important economic significance.

It is the conviction of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers Association, the body which has shown the most serious interest in the problem, that the decrease in stocks has resulted from uneven flow in the stream itself. Usually in the spawning season enough water runs in Goldstream to permit upstream migration of the fish only if the Greater Victoria Water District can release supplies from its holding ponds high above the spawning areas. A water shortage also leads to higher temperatures detrimental to the fishery. On the other hand, during periods of heavy run-off, the rushing waters tend to scour out the gravel in which eggs are buried and frequently the gravel itself is swept away.

Here is a situation which, without a very great outlay of money, could be remedied. A similar problem was solved on the mainland through installation of controls to protect the spawning beds and regulate the river flow. Provision of the new water board tunnel should greatly ease the supply problem for the Greater Victoria area and permit a larger flow in Goldstream at low-water periods. Co-operation between the governments involved and the sport fishing groups should provide an effective basis for action.

Election Harmony

Letter

Unfrightened

In my view there is an imperative reason why the government should not be voted in one more time; it is not good democracy. We might as well live under an openly declared dictatorship; if the public mindlessly opts for another mess of pottage dished up on the same old platitudes then one can only deduce it does not take much to satisfy the people of this province.

What is so unique about the building of roads and providing good transportation when the time is ripe and there are sufficient means to pay for these things? They do not come out of Premier Bennett's personal pocket. And how can anyone know what will happen in the future until it does indeed happen? I for one shall not be swayed by the dread figments of Premier Bennett's imagination. The promise of Mr. Gaglardi's return is enough to set me running in another direction.

The Buildings are in need of some fresh air and only the public can let it in. I'd love to know why Premier Bennett can promise so many increases "after the election" without an increase in taxation! If it is possible, why not now so that schools can be finished, to say nothing of the Pat Bay Highway, and a myriad of other things.

"IMPATIENT"

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

Something Happened to Change the Ministerial Mood

THE Trudeau government in its new concern with the inflationary peril, has now almost completely reversed policies quite recently defended by leading ministers. One of the more striking examples is to be found in the paper on expenditure guidelines put out last week. As the prime minister put it: "The aim is to get rid of the old idea that there has to be a 'normal' annual increase in costs and in numbers of employees to meet a 'normal' annual increase in population and in the government services provided to that population."

Western

It is certainly an old idea as anyone who has worked in Ottawa can testify. But old or not, it was considered highly respectable by no less a person than the present minister of finance as late as December 7, 1967. Speaking in the budget debate, Mr. Benson, after noting that the growth rate for the federal service was to be "drastically cut," went on to say:

"Contrary to the beliefs of many who think that the federal public service has grown abnormally over the years, statistics show that the growth of the service has remained remarkably constant in relation to population growth over the past 15 years . . . When viewed in relation to population growth, to growth in the total labor force, and to growth in the employed labor force, the federal public service has either remained constant or has actually declined slightly, percentage-wise, over the 15-year period."

Mr. Benson was sufficiently impressed with the importance of this argument, now gone by the board, that he filled four pages of Hansard with graphs and tables documenting it. These charts would serve, he believed, "to explode the myth that over recent years the federal service has been growing at an inordinately fast rate in relation to the growth of the nation as a whole."

What was reassuring then (with inflation already rampant) is alarming now. For, as Mr. Trudeau explained, without the latest cutbacks, spending during 1970-71 would go to $13.5 billion for a 14 per cent increase. Indeed, by 1974-75 the outlook would be for a colossal deficit of $1.75 billion.

Some 'Startling' Facts

The new set of polices results, as the prime minister explained, from a comprehensive review of expenditure plans for the next few years. Some "startling facts" have emerged.

Of these, the "most startling" is the revelation that "almost without exception, this decade has been characterized by yearly budgetary deficits exceeding $4 billion in total and requiring upwards of $300 million per annum to service." This cannot have required much digging since these very facts have been the burden of innumerable remonstrances addressed to not-very-interested ministers.

But startling they are and not only because of their significance for taxation. The strange fact, deserving of emphasis at this time, is that the Liberals, on coming to power, had no intention of compiling such a record. That the reverse was true is starkly evident from the very careful utterances of Mr. Pearson in the campaigns of 1962 and 1965. Even before that in urging certain emergency measures (in a speech to the Liberal rally of 1961), he said: "If they result — as they might — in a deficit, it will be a planned one for emergency purposes to be restored with a minimum of delay when the emergency is over and by the increased tax receipts from an expanding economy."

One could quote other pronouncements from the era of the "high and hard road." It is more relevant to observe that this cautious attitude, combined with notable optimism, continued into the early Liberal years. Thus, in February, 1965, Mr. Pearson told a party dinner in Toronto: "The years of large budget deficits have been ended. Confidence in monetary and business conditions has been renewed."

There was in fact some reason at the time (as the 1965 accounts were to show) to anticipate a return to ordered finances. But by 1966 the government was well into the huge spending splurge which was to produce the greatest deficit on record.

Plainly something happened to change the ministerial mood and the government's priorities. Time may show that the decisive consideration was Mr. Pearson's anxiety about national unity and, flowing from it, the great effort to make Ottawa the focus of national attention. In any case, the prime minister's once anxious references to inflation became notably philosophical. So did his comments on government expenditures.

As to the latter, Mr. Pearson reached a peak of sorts in a speech of March 29, 1967. This was largely devoted to the thesis that government is bound to get bigger. Speaking of increased expenditures, he said that a large part of them were due to higher payments to the provinces. He added: "These are, of course, merely the inevitable problems of a federal society. We shall have to live with them, come to terms with them, as we have managed to do successfully for a hundred years."

Thus, by centennial year, there had been quite a change in the government's outlook. Now there has been another change in the opposite direction. Mr. Trudeau is emphatically not prepared to live with some of the problems to which his predecessor has become more or less reconciled.

Must Show Fortitude

The point is that the threat of heavy budgetary deficits is not a transient phenomenon, as Mr. Trudeau recognized by making projections to 1974-75. If it is to be successfully countered the government will have to show fortitude not merely through the coming winter (which may be tough since rising unemployment is likely to generate new pressures against the expenditure ceilings) but for a considerable time to come. It will be politically tempting to relax the curbs at the earliest. But if the mood of government changes once again, as it did in the Pearson period, spending will be out of control with the prospect, clearly indicated by Mr. Trudeau's mathematics, of deficits very much larger than those which shook public confidence in the 1960s and brought the day of reckoning in Ottawa.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

The Strategy of Dublin's Call for a UN Force

IN DIPLOMACY, ALMOST NOTHING is ever wholly what it seems; and the call for a United Nations peace force to quiet religious fighting in Northern Ireland is an interesting case in point. There never was any real expectation that a UN force would be sent. It would have been stretching the Charter to discuss it seriously (domestic turmoil being beyond UN jurisdiction); the British would have vetoed it if it came to a vote; and Northern Ireland would never have agreed voluntarily to let it enter the territory.

Frye

What Dublin clearly had in mind in making the proposal was:

- To generate pressure on London and Belfast to speed reforms in the treatment of the Catholic minority in Northern Ireland. The threat of a UN airing represented such pressure.
- To satisfy domestic demands south of the border that Ireland "do something" for its beleaguered co-religionists to the north.
- To help establish the moral basis for a future military intervention by Ireland should events degenerate to the point where one was considered necessary. "We asked the UN to act, and it didn't" is an old and familiar tactic of self-justification.
- To re-ignite a 50-year-old drive for unification of Ireland.

At least the first two of these purposes were served before the Security Council ever sat down to consider adopting an agenda.

The British, under both domestic and international pressure, agreed to take physical charge of the crisis, but extracted in return from Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark a pledge of civil-rights reform in Northern Ireland.

The political purpose of the "peace force" which Britain agreed to send was, therefore, not to protect Chichester-Clark from the explosive wrath of a disaffected minority but to buy time in which the legitimate demands of the minority could be met. A UN force would have had much greater difficulty serving this purpose. Chichester-Clark would not have wanted it to come, and therefore — if forced by circumstanes to take it—would not have made any political concessions to get it.

Its function could only have been to keep the disputants physically apart, so far as possible, while their leaders sought, under conditions of unequal bargaining power, to negotiate their differences.

This would not have been likely to work. It has been, and is, a built-in handicap of UN peace armies that they tend to ease pressures for change and thus to perpetuate the status quo — even where the status quo is highly unstable and otherwise undesirable.

It is as if a police cordon, intending to be impartial and simply to maintain "law and order," were to be thrown around a factory whose workers were on strike, preventing picketing and violence and leaving union and management to negotiate a contract "without interference." This could be called impartial peace-keeping, but its effect would be that the bargaining power of the weaker party would be kept weak. The results would be likely to reflect that fact.

The real difficulty with UN peace actions is that peace-keeping is less than peace-making, and one does not always lead to the other. When it does, the results inevitably reflect an existing political balance, protected from external pressures and influences but not necessarily in equitable counterpoise.

UN intervention in Cyprus has followed this pattern of producing stability but not peaceful change. It has succeeded, much of the time, in keeping Greek and Turkish Cypriots from cutting each other's throats. Together with NATO, it has helped inhibit an invasion of the island by Turkey. But this has protected President Makarios from the necessity of major steps to ease the Turkish Cypriots' grievances. The Greek and Turkish factions are seeking to negotiate an accommodation, but it may prove to be one very largely on Makarios' terms.

Buying time, calming passions, reducing bloodshed and encouraging negotiation are useful functions. But in Ireland, to have protected Chichester-Clark from pressures by the Catholics and enabled him to impose a solution on his terms — or Ian Paisley's — would not have been widely accepted as justice, and it would scarcely have been what Dublin wanted in asking for UN intervention.

It is perhaps ironic, but true, that Britain is in a better position to encourage peaceful change in Northern Ireland than the UN, with its built-in requirement of impartiality.

It is simply a footnote to history that the Republic of Ireland, unwilling to see British sovereignty strengthened in the North, and eager to harness events to reunification of the island, resisted British intervention.

The Catholics in the North welcomed it, however, and the UN Security Council — though it embarrassed Britian by permitting a constitutionally-irregular preliminary discussion of the issue — acquiesced.

This left London and Belfast with one more chance to set their house in order. If they fail this time, it will be an entirely new ball game.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

We take for granted our Douglas fir in this province. Yet how many of us know what an incredible tree it is?

It has been, and still is, to a great extent, our "bread and butter", for it and its by-products have built our economy. It grows almost everywhere and anywhere — in the low lands, the high country, and on the steep, rocky, mountain slopes almost to the snowline.

Not only does it grow here in B.C. but as far south as California and Mexico and across the Pacific in Japan and Korea. It is the same tree but a slightly different species.

Thousands of seeds have been shipped to Europe. England, New Zealand and other countries are now growing the Douglas fir for their forest crops. In some instances they can grow larger girth trees in a shorter period of time than we can.

The tree is shallow-rooted and one wonders just how it stands the heavy wind storms, though the roots will penetrate deep down in the rock cracks and so provide a holdfast. Where the slopes are steep the growth will be sparse, but on the lower levels the stands will be heavy.

The foliage of the older trees spreads and forms a canopy which casts a shade so that the undercover is sparse. The bark is fire resistant and yet it makes an excellent fuel for the stove and open fireplace as well as the furnaces of the sawmills.

On the Island trees have been cut that were over 20 feet across and over 1,000 years old. There are some still to be found that are 10 feet across at the base and over 600 years old. Some of these can be seen at Francis Park, Goldstream Park, John Dean Park, and on the old Rithet property. They will stand for a long time yet if man will leave them alone.

The wood from this tree is perhaps the most versatile of all our woods. From it you get the large beams used in heavy construction. It is our greatest source of plywood, any type of building wood and the finest of finishing lumber.

The cones on the Douglas fir are always pendant and hang from the twigs all down the limbs. They have a distinguishing feature in that they have a three-pronged bract on the scales. This is the only tree that has this feature. From habitat to habitat there is a slight difference in the cone size. In the Interior the bracts will be longer, while the cone itself will be shorter.

Oil Pickets Hit Airport

Court Halts Action

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia Supreme Court injunction halting picketing at Vancouver International Airport was granted the department of transport today.

Airport officials said pickets were dispersing.

Airport Manager W. L. Inglis said the pickets started to move off as soon as the injunction was served.

He said all airline workers were back on the job again and were trying to get things back to normal as quickly as possible.

The busy airport was thrown into confusion when the pickets, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, appeared in the early morning hours, forcing cancellation of several flights and delaying most of the others.

Long queues of passengers stretched across the floor inside the main terminal as the long wait started.

Flights of B.C. Airlines were cancelled and CP Air said passengers were being accepted as facilities permit. One CP Air flight left the airport this morning but other flight plans remained indefinite.

STAFF STAYED

There were delays to Air Canada flights and the company's overnight staff remained on the job, on overtime.

United Air Lines, with no union personnel at the airport, continued regular flights.

Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union said

B.C. TEL MONOPOLY ATTACKED BY TORY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Telephone Company should neither be taken over by government nor continue to operate as a private monopoly, John de Wolf, B.C. Progressive Conservative leader, said Friday.

"We want the monopoly franchise of the B.C. Tel ended forthwith," he said. "And we want the regulations governing rates and profits of the B.C. Tel ended forthwith."

Grits Besieging Phil's Jericho

By BOB MITCHELL, Times Staff

KAMLOOPS — It was the Battle of Jericho Friday night.

A Liberal army of some 2,000 supporters, in more than 350 vehicles, wound through the streets of downtown Kamloops beneath the hilltop residence of Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi.

The massive, horn-honking demonstration, which included provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer and four Interior Liberal candidates, brought closer to reality the party's hopes of toppling Gaglardi out of the Kamloops seat which he has held for 17 years.

Wackiest Political Event

"It's fairly obvious that Mr. Gaglardi is going to be defeated by a fairly wide margin," McGeer said as he marched through the city.

"It's game over—it's gotta be game over," said McGeer's ecstatic campaign manager Ray Torresan as he surveyed the five-mile cavalcade from a bridge over the North Thompson River.

It was the biggest and wackiest political event in the history of the town of 35,000. Credit for the parade's success and for Liberal enthusiasm generally must go to Yarl Whist, campaign manager for the Kamloops Liberal candidate Mac Bryson.

It was Whist who masterminded the Liberal defeat of Progressive Conservative Davie Fulton during the 1968 federal election and put Len Marchand into the House of Commons.

Since the election was announced four weeks ago, Liberal campaigners have distributed 11,000 Bryson bumper stickers, 8,000 Bryson buttons, 1,000 posters reading "Bryson Cares" and 4,000 four-by-eight plywood signs.

That's in a riding with some 22,800 eligible voters. Organizers said Friday they have 2,000 active workers involved in Bryson's campaign.

Young Liberals Abound

Many, including Bryson and his wife, were out on Kamloops roads at 6 a.m. every morning this week to hold up signs urging work-bound residents to "Vote Bryson."

The most noticeable feature of the parade was youthfulness. Children and teen-agers carried signs, rode on floats or played in one of three bands.

There was a remarkable number of girls, most of them too young to vote, clad in shorts or bikinis. A girl on horseback leading the parade held the bridle of a colt wearing a banner that read "Young Liberal."

There were clowns, cars decorated with Bryson posters, ribbons and balloons, and the racket of hundreds of honking horns.

Many of the cars in the parade came from neighboring ridings of Shuswap, Cariboo and Yale-Lillooet.

Victoria Street, the city's main thoroughfare, was lined with Friday night shoppers who sat on their parked cars, many apparently enjoying the demonstration.

McGeer darted periodically out of the parade to shake hands with spectators, some of whom did not realize who he was until after he had resumed his place in the parade.

Local Gaglardi supporters were few and far between but there was the occasional "Yea, Gaglardi" shout from children and adults. A biplane pulling a "Vote Gaglardi" slogan circled above Kamloops for two hours during the parade.

It would have been interesting to read the former highways minister's thoughts as he surveyed the noisy cavalcade passing beneath his hilltop residence.

'Get Gaglardi' Main Issue

The question of defeating Gaglardi at the polls next Wednesday makes all other issues in the Kamloops riding seem minor.

Gaglardi resigned his portfolio 18 months after questions arose about land deals in which his sons were involved. Earlier this week Premier Bennett announced he would give Gaglardi a portfolio if a Social Credit government is re-elected.

Kamloops Liberal supporters were incensed at the announcement, and while they generally concede their party doesn't stand a chance of forming the next government, they see the election as their chance to end the Socred's political career."

The parade ended with a rally in a North Kamloops shopping centre where McGeer and the four Liberal candidates made brief statements to the cheering crowd.

The candidates included Lloyd Askew from Shuswap, Dr. Lorne Ross from Yale-Lillooet, Dave Zirnhelt—UBC student president last year—from Cariboo, and Bryson.

Only Solution Force—Nasser

CAIRO (Reuters) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt said today the Al Aksah Mosque fire showed force is the only solution to the Middle East situation.

In a message to the Egyptian armed forces, the president said he had thought a great deal about this "horrible crime" and come to the conclusion that there is no alternative, hope or path other than force.

"I have long waited and reflected about the terrible crime which has been committed against the holy of holies of our religion, our history and our civilization," the president said.

"In the end I found nothing but a reaffirmation of the facts that were clear to us from the first day of our cruel experience, namely, that there is no substitute, no hope, no way but Arab force with all it could mobilize, all it could direct and all it could pressure with, until, with God's will, we emerge victorious."

Nasser told his armed forces they were facing "an enemy who has not challenged man, but, in his arrogance and foolhardiness has stretched his arrogance to the sanctities that God has chosen as his houses. . . ."

Meanwhile, the secretary-general of the Arab League, Abdel Khalek Hassouna, today invited foreign ministers of the 14 member states to meet here Monday to discuss the Al Aksah Mosque fire and other Arab issues.

League sources expect most member states to accept the invitation.

The agenda for the meeting Monday night would also cover latest developments in the conflict with Israel and a call by Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization for an Arab summit meeting, the sources said.

A hand grenade exploded today in a Gaza Strip vegetable market that remained open during a general strike over the fire at Islam's holy Al Aksah Mosque. Two Arabs were killed and 15 injured.

All other stores in the teeming Gaza Strip remained closed. The grenade exploded at a market in Rafiah, in the southern part of the Israeli-held strip.

Israeli paratroops and all security forces were on the alert and most Arabs remained indoors in the strip, in towns along the occupied West Bank and in Jerusalem.

Troops and police patrolled near the walls and in the narrow alleys of the Old City. No clashes were reported, but the entire area was tense.

Two units of paratroops were drafted into the occupied section

'Judge Our Record' WAC Tells Nanaimo

By JOHN DRISCOLL, Times Staff

NANAIMO — Tom Berger was only a stone's throw away here Friday but Premier Bennett was not in a stone-throwing mood.

Not a single wild charge.

Not one baleful hint of impending doom.

He just laid out the accomplishments of the last 17 years and said: "Judge."

Bennett told an overflow, friendly crowd at the 650-seat Capitol Theatre he was not going to knock any political party.

"We don't claim ourselves to be perfection," he said. "But with your help we'll strive toward perfection."

Earlier in the evening, Bennett had checked into a hotel room and napped while Mayor Frank Ney fretted in the lobby below.

Bennett slept through a scheduled meeting at an Indian reserve. He arrived at a Moose Lodge convention with Ney in time to shake hands before rushing away to the rally.

There were a few hecklers present but they found Bennett's positive style difficult to argue with.

"When I crossed the floor of the House we were the number one have-not province in the nation. Now we are the number one have province."

Bennett called the Columbia River Treaty with the United States "the best international deal ever made.

"Nobody but B.C. could have made such a deal with the Yankee traders. Isn't it nice to have the United States $600 million in debt to us?

"We took the money in advance at 4.5 per cent interest and we're now investing some of it at 8.2 per cent," he said.

Bennett listed the balanced budgets, surplus and the lowest tax rate in Canada as Socred achievements.

"It's not a question of where the money is coming from for new programs. It's where the money went before, my friend."

Bennett claimed his financial policy has saved the taxpayers "tens of millions of dollars. Seventeen years is a very short period of time," he said, pointing to Alberta where Social Credit has held sway for 34 years.

Bennett dropped the hint that the Nanaimo area would

Russians, The Pets Are Coming

SANTIAGO, Chile (Reuters) — The Soviet Embassy still was under police guard Friday — 24 hours after it was invaded by hundreds of dogs and cats.

Bennett, Berger Beaten by Bingo

By JIM HUME
Times Staff

NANAIMO—It was Berger, Bennett or Bingo in Nanaimo Friday night.

And bingo, with $2,500 riding on the final card of the night, outdrew the two political leaders four to one.

While W. A. C. Bennett jammed 650-plus into the Capital Theatre for a night of "the good life," and Tom Berger, leader of the New Democratic Party, led 650-plus into the Quennell School gymnasium, 2,300 gamblers clutching bingo cards swamped the civic arena.

Berger Backed by First Line

But if bingo won in the crowd, it lost in the big name and political promise game.

Berger, flanked by former provincial leader Bob Strachan, National Leader Tommy Douglas, and candidates Johnny Squire of Port Alberni, Harry Harris of Comox, and Dave Stupich of Nanaimo was at his best before the capacity crowd of the faithful.

While signs and banners flashed and cheers echoed through the old gym, Berger, not unexpectedly, promised a government car insurance plan if the NDP is elected Aug. 27.

It would, said Berger, be based on the Saskatchewan government auto insurance program, and save insurance purchasers up to 30 per cent in cost.

To back his promise, Berger said the Saskatchewan plan, fathered by Douglas, now was acknowledged as the best in North America — "even by the Wall Street Journal. And if it's good enough for the Wall Street Journal, it's good enough for me."

Berger said his insurance scheme would not force private companies out of business.

"They will," he said, "have the right to compete with the government scheme.

"Right now, B.C. has 188 auto insurance companies. But

Ulster Officials Put Ban On Paisley Protest Parade

BELFAST (CP)—The Northern Irish government today banned a Protestant extremist motorcade about an hour before the first cars were scheduled to leave the cathedral city of Armagh for riot-scarred Belfast.

The Ulster attorney-general ruled that the proposed motorcade, organized by militant Rev. Ian Paisley to protest the virtual disarming of the controversial B-Special police reserves, would be in defiance of a government ban on public meetings made after riots wracked the country last week.

Paisley, leader of the extreme Protestant Free Presbyterian Church, intended to lead his supporters to Stormont Castle, seat of the Northern Ireland Parliament, and hand in a petition to Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark.

The petition condemns a British military order Friday putting the police reservists' weapons under tighter control.

PAISLEY
. . . planned petition

Meanwhile the B-Specials, an almost wholly Protestant force hated and feared by Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority, today began handing in their guns to Belfast's central armories as they went off duty.

British troops were reported standing ready today along the 42-mile route of the parade which would have taken the Protestant cars through several parts of the province where more than half the population is Roman Catholic.

The British-appointed security head in Northern Ireland, Lt.-Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, said in his order Friday the B-Specials would get their guns back only on his command. Observers here said extreme Protestant factions saw the move as a direct threat to their safety.

New Czech Laws To Stop Dissent

PRAGUE (AP) — The Czechoslovak government rammed through harsh new laws Friday night to curb anti-government and anti-Soviet disorders. The army and police crushed renewed rioting in Brno, the country's second-largest city.

The new laws provide prison terms, fines or loss of jobs for virtually any activity directed against communism or those in power. Prague Radio said the laws went into effect Friday night and would continue until the end of the year.

Two persons were reported killed and several injured in the second day of rioting in Brno, an industrial city of 350,900 about 130 miles east of Prague. Officials earlier reported two persons killed in Brno Thursday.

Sources said seven Czechoslovak army tanks moved into the downtown area to help riot police disperse some 5,000 demonstrators.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed after the rioters were dispersed.

The Czechoslovak Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo said today that 815 persons were arrested in Prague Thursday, including 66 foreigners—"a large part" of whom were said to be Americans and West Germans. Rude Pravo said two demonstrators were killed in the capital, and 313 persons were injured. It said that all but five of the injured were police, soldiers or militiamen.

The new law-and-order measures were adopted unanimously by the steering committee of the National Assembly at the demand of the Communist party. They were signed by President Ludvik Svoboda, Premier Oldrich Cernik and Assembly Chairman Alexander Dubcek. The full assembly is in recess.

END FREE ATMOSPHERE

The first reaction of Czechoslovaks to the new laws was that the government finally had the means to throttle the free atmosphere created during the 1968 reforms and maintained despite increasing pressure from the Soviet Union and the pro-Soviet regime that succeeded the reformists. Some said the new laws are as harsh as any during the Nazi or Stalinist eras.

The demonstrations marked the first anniversary of the Aug. 20-21 Soviet invasion that crushed the reform movement led by Dubcek. Official broadcasts and newspapers have not mentioned the anniversary.

The specific measures adopted provide that anyone participating in, calling for or supporting a disturbance may be jailed up to three months and fined up to $300.

The present maximum penalties for defaming the Czechoslovak state "or any state of the socialist system" or their representatives, now generally punishable by up to six months in jail, are increased to one year. Offenders also may be exiled from a city and sent to rural areas for five years.

Anyone who "violates the socialist order and loses the confidence needed to hold his position or job" can be fired. Students may be expelled from school, and professors and teachers can be dismissed if they "educate young people against the principles of socialist society."

The state also may disband any voluntary organization, including trade unions, scout groups and cultural societies, if it helps spread unrest.

New Smelter In Princeton Expected

Times Staff

KAMLOOPS — The federal government will announce plans soon for a copper smelter in the Princeton area, Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said here Friday.

McGeer made the statement at a press conference just after he arrived in Kamloops to kick off a Liberal mass demonstration.

He described the smelter as a "taste of what can be done with proper area incentive" but did not elaborate.

And in a statement obviously aimed at the New Democratic Party, he said he was "disturbed by the degree of domination of Canadian labor by American unions."

He said he is disturbed by what he called "sweetheart agreements" between large American unions and the construction inustry.

He defined a sweetheart agreement as one in which only members of a union which has signed an agreement with a construction company are allowed on a construction site.

BEFORE COURT

He referred to a case now before the B.C. Supreme Court that involves the Teamsters Union, the Building Trades Council and the construction industry.

"We want to be certain there is no validity to the sweetheart agreements being tested in court."

McGeer said he could not specify individual unions because of the Supreme Court case.

But he said there are two million Canadian union members and of these, 70 per cent are in American-dominated unions. He said from 1962 to 1966, $180 million in union funds went into the United States, with $130 million remaining in Canada.

McGeer spent the early part of Friday on a swing through the Yale-Lillooet riding, currently held by Bill Hartley of the NDP.

Hartley and supporters watched from the sidewalk in Merritt as the Liberal bus made a quick pass through the mining town.

McGeer and candidate Dr. Lorne Ross did not make speeches, but McGeer thanked the people who turned out for the 15-minute event.

"I wish more politicians would make speeches like that," muttered a woman resident as McGeer and his party boarded the bus for the trip to Kamloops.

Trudeau Charge Turned Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Ontario youth's attempt to bring Prime Minister Trudeau to court to face a common assault charge was turned down Friday by a justice of the peace who said evidence was "inconclusive."

Richard Bruce Jesmer, 17, of Niagara Falls, could still go to British Columbia Supreme Court and attempt to revive his charge. He told reporters Friday he had not reached a decision.

Don Stewart, 28, before whom Jesmer swore out his accusation Aug. 11, heard evidence at a preliminary hearing Tuesday and rejected Jesmer's bid in a brief judgment delivered Friday.

Jesmer, a laborer, testified Tuesday he called the prime minister "A . . . creep" during an anti-Vietnam war demonstration here Aug. 8 and that Mr. Trudeau then "turned and hit me."

only move ahead if Socred candidate Frank Ney is elected.

"I've watched this Ney you have as mayor," he said. "It won't hurt him a bit to be an MLA as well as mayor. He'll be a better mayor because he's an MLA."

Bennett predicted that the working people would vote Social Credit because "they have the best wages in Canada and they're not going to throw that away.

"Don't be taken in by propaganda," he said in his closest statement to an attack on the opposition.

"Why create chaos?"

Bennett again reviewed the election promises he has made: higher old age pensions, increased welfare benefits — and expansion of the homeowner grant.

"And it will all be done without an increase in taxes," he said.

There would be Socred wins in Vancouver Point Grey, where Liberal leader Pat McGeer is a candidate, and in Vancouver Burrard, where NDP leader Tom Berger is running, he said.

Bennett made a plea for four Vancouver Island candidates on stage with him: Ney (Nanaimo), Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell (Comox), Howard McDiarmid (Alberni) and Charles Ennals (Cowichan-Malahat).

The rally followed a parade through Nanaimo's downtown.

. . . BINGO WINS

they have failed to provide adequate coverage at reasonable rates. The present system is unsystematic, expensive, unfair and unjust.

"Our scheme will operate in competition with these companies. This will provide a good example of the NDP philosophy that free enterprise should be given the opportunity to do the job — but if it can't, then the government should take over."

Encouraged by the cheering crowd, Berger slashed at Bennett — speaking at the Socred rally four blocks away.

"Undaunted by the truth, he reveals the bankruptcy of Social Credit," Berger snapped. "He has no program this time. He's waging his campaign on negative issues.

"While we call for unity to face the problems before us, he calls for division."

Berger repeated his promise to take over B.C. Telephone if elected.

"In Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, the telephone is a public utility," he said.

"It will become a public utility in B.C.

"Premier Bennett says he's the champion of free enterprise. He's not. He's the champion of monopoly."

The signs waved again, and the cheers rang out.

Other goodies pulled from the Berger bag included the renewed promise that Hansard (a stenographic record of legislative debates) would be introduced to the B.C. parliament; that the Liquor Control Board and the Workmen's Compensation Board would be forced to introduce an open-file system; and that promise of a $3 million loan to Commonwealth Trust would be immediately cancelled.

"The law was suspended for Commonsealth Trust," he said. "Under Bennett, there is so such thing as fair administration of the law. As a party we protested, and are still protesting, the $3 million interest-free loan made that company.

CANCEL LOAN

"If the NDP is elected, that loan will be cancelled."

On the open-file system, Berger said he had long urged that men and women rejected by the compensation or liquor control boards, have a right to see the files on which rejection was based.

"As it is now," he said, "you can apply for a liquor license and be rejected, but you are never told why."

Douglas, who acted as the joking MC, introducing various speakers, said Bennett was running scared as he has never run before.

And he pleaded with the crowd to "send Dave Stupich back to the legislature with a bigger majority than ever before."

Stupich couldn't let that pass.

TWO ELECTIONS

He reminded the audience that in the two elections he's won in the past — one in 1963, the last in 1966 — his majorities were 19 and 45 votes respectively.

"I'd like a little more than 45 this time," he smiled.

At 10:15 p.m., it was all over.

Berger, the man who once beat Bennett in the Supreme Court of Canada, left for the late ferry to Vancouver; Douglas for his apartment-suite; Strachan for home at Cedar; Squire with 100 supporters for the Alberni Valley; Harris to Comox and Stupich for his Nanaimo residence.

And over at the Capitol Theatre, they were changing the sign on the marquee from "Premier Bennett and Frank Ney Tonight" to "That Cold Day in the Park."

The movie runs until Wednesday, election-day.

. . . PICKETS

the airport picketing would continue until a court injunction was obtained or executives of the union ordered it stopped.

Members of the Machinists Union refused to cross lines set up by the oil workers who have been on strike since May 23.

The 550 oil workers have been striking for higher wages against six oil companies in B.C.'s lower mainland.

The picket lines were set up during early morning darkness while the overnight shift was on duty at the airport. Some pilots and stewardesses crossed the lines.

Fuel trucks, driven by oil company supervisors, were escorted by police into the airport.

MUCH WORK HALTED

Oil workers during the last two weeks have tied up public transit in Vancouver and Victoria and construction work and railway operations by picketing. Normal operations were resumed after affected companies got Supreme Court injunctions banning the pickets.

The airport picketing started after talks broke down between the oil workers and oil companies under the auspices of the B.C. mediation commission.

The six companies involved are Imperial, Shell, Gulf, Texaco, Home and Standard Oil.

The union is seeking a pay increase of $1 an hour in a two-year contract on a current scale ranging from $2.95 to $4.05. It rejected one offer of from 51 cents to 53 cents an hour.

The picketing of Vancouver's airport had little effect on traffic into and out of Victoria's International Airport this morning.

And Air Canada spokesman said, apart from flight delays of about 10 minutes, everything was normal.

of this ancient holy city Friday to back up hard-pressed police and regular security forces facing continued demonstrations by infuriated Arabs.

Arab leaders also called for token general strikes in Jordan, Lebanon, occupied Gaza and the Israeli-held West Bank of the Jordan River.

The strike calls went out Friday before police announced the arrest of a 28-year-old Australian for the burning of the mosque. News of the arrest was expected to ease the tension but did little to alleviate sorrow and anger of Moslems around the world.

Governments Ignore News Of 10-for-1 Spy Swap

BONN (Reuters) — Reports that a top Soviet spy nabbed in South Africa was swapped for 10 captured West German agents were ignored by the government today.

There was no official comment either here or in South Africa after qualified sources in Bonn said Friday the spy swap deal was proposed by the Russians and took place last month somewhere in Europe.

The Soviet agent was identified as Yuri Nikolaievich Loginov, 36, who was arrested by South African security men in Johannesburg two years ago after he entered the country on a phoney Canadian passport.

Loginov was never brought to trial and was never seen in public after his capture. While holding him indefinitely under South African security laws, counter-espionage agents are reported to have persuaded Loginov to betray scores of comrades operating in other countries.

The Russian spy "sang like a canary," one source said.

The men for whom he was exchanged are reported to have all come from East German prisons and presumably were captured while operating in East Germany.

The sources who reported the swap said despite the apparent imbalance of the 10-to-one ratio, the Russians got the better of the deal since Loginov was a top agent and the West Germans were not.

SWAP FOLLOWS SPATE

The swap followed a spate of recent spy exchanges and one intelligence source commented Friday night: "The Russians seem to have got nearly all the cows back in the cowshed."

The Loginov deal came only a few weeks after the repatriation of British lecturer Gerald Brooke from Russia in exchange for Soviet spies Peter and Helen Kroger, now held in British prisons. They are scheduled to be released this fall. Brooke was serving a prison term for carrying equipment for an anti-Communist emigre organization into the Soviet Union.

Soviet double agent Heinz Felfe was released from West Germany and handed back to the Russians in February in return for three young West German students held for anti-Soviet activities.

It was not exactly clear what the South Africans gained in the deal. One possibility suggested was that the South Africans thought they had got all the information they could from the Russian spy and took the chance to improve relations with West Germany.

Loginov was held incommunicado for two years in South Africa and some observers thought the South Africans had no desire to have details of his mission aired in court.

Loginov is reported to have been sent to South Africa to find out how the country was co-operating with an unnamed Western country in atomic and rocket research.

East Germany has frequently said that West Germany and South Africa operate a program of co-operation in the development of atomic, chemical and bacteriological weapons.

Platinum Found

LONDON (Reuters) — The London-based Lohrho Mining Co. said Friday it has made a major discovery of new platinum deposits in the Restunberg area of the Transvaal in South Africa.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

My wife spreads feed for birds at the rate of about 100 pounds of scratch every two weeks. Consequently, they come by the hundreds to our huge old mesquite tree outside the dining-room window where we get a free show of close-up birdlife every evening even in the stormiest weather.

When the heat hangs on, the finches and sparrows cool off in the most delightful way. We have three birdbaths they drink from and hop into for wing-fluttering dips.

On the hottest evenings—sometimes 105 degrees—the birds hop from the water baths to the dust area 10 feet away, where each scratches out a hole and takes a dustbath. Then they skip to another area that is kept flooded with the garden hose. There they madly flutter their wings in the spreading pool of water. It is cooling to watch the birds stay cool.

U.S. Accedes to Thai Demands

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States agreed Friday to a request by Thailand to begin talks about reducing the 49,200 American military forces in that country, most of whom provide air support for the war in South Vietnam.

This development was an unexpected climax in the running dispute over the secret 1965 U.S.-Thai contingency plan for possible use of American combat troops in Thailand.

U.S. officials contended there was no direct cause and effect between the two chains of events. But they were unquestionably interrelated. Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman sharply told newsmen in Bangkok on Tuesday that the best way to end suspicions that Thailand wants Americans to fight for it is to "start the process of immediate evacuation" of forces now based there.

The next day, Wednesday, according to the American account, Thanat told Leonard Unger, U.S. ambassador in Bangkok, that Thailand wants to begin discussions about a "general reduction in the level of U.S. forces" in Thailand.

In disclosing that request, U.S. officials Friday put the whole subject of US. force reductions in Thailand in a considerably calmer context, resulting from President Nixon's talks in Bangkok last month.

Furthermore, White House sources said, "we're not talking about a significant reduction" of U.S. forces in Thailand, but only about "contacts" that "could lead to an adjustment which would be very small if it takes place."

In Bangkok, however, Thanat was reported to have said that Thailand has told the United States it wants to start talks about the withdrawal of all U.S. forces. Thai sources reportedly said the combination of congressional alarm about the American presence in Thailand, and statements Thursday by Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird, made Thai leaders resigned to fighting their own battles against internal Communists.

There was no precise information, however, on exactly what Thailand has in mind. Few American officials believe Thailand seeks a swift rundown in the level of U.S. forces there. That would have major repercussions on the war in Vietnam, and also on the semi-secret war in Laos, which is also supported from air bases in Thailand.

Some U.S. sources suggested that Thanat's objective is short range, to slap back at U.S. "Doves," and especially at Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright, whose views long have personally infuriated Thanat.

But other American sources concede that with the Nixon administration embarked on a policy of progressive military disengagement in Asia, Thailand is now anxious to pave the way for resuming its own historic fence-sitting position in Asia, reducing its American entanglements.

State Department Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey made the U.S. announcement about American-Thai troop reduction talks, after the news first broke in Bangkok Friday.

McCloskey said:

"The president, in his meetings with Thai leaders recently in Bangkok, agreed that at the appropriate time there should be consultations leading to a gradual reduction in the level of our forces in Thailand.

"The foreign minister of Thailand has now taken the initiative with our ambassador, suggesting discussions along these lines, and we for our part are willing to enter into such discussions."

What was contemplated in the president's talks in Bangkok, however, was a more graceful, more leisurely discussion of eventual phased reduction of U.S. troop levels there.

Such a reduction process, U.S. sources said, has been considered inevitable in the long run because the original main purpose for the huge buildup of American airpower in Thailand was to provide the bulk of U.S. capacity for bombing North Vietnam. The U.S. ceased that bombing last Nov. 1.

There are at present approximately 48,000 U.S. military personnel in Thailand, McCloskey told newsmen, about three-fourths of them air force and one-fourth army, with the latter providing logistical support for 'air operations in Vietnam." Additionally, said McCloskey, 1,200 other military personnel "provide training, assistance and advice to Thai forces."

Much of the U.S. air activity actually is carried out in Laos, against the so-called Ho Chi Minh infiltration trails running from North to South Vietnam, and also against Communist activity directed against the government of Laos.

There are six major U.S. air bases in Thailand: Udorn, U-Tapao, Ubon, Korat, Nakorn Phanom and Tak-Let.

Thailand holds legal title to all these bases, plus others from which U.S. forces operate. In the years between 1964 and 1967, Thailand refused to agree to have the United States say publicly that these bases even existed.

An attempt by Sen. Fullbright to hold hearings in 1966 to disclose the extent of the U.S. military involvement in Thailand aroused Thai indignation and administration pressure to head off the hearings. They were not held, but now a new set of hearings is scheduled by a foreign relations subcommittee for September in which the disputed 1965 military contingency plan is one of the targets.

What is fundamentally at issue is an attempt by the Senate to assert congressional power to prevent secret commitments of U.S. forces abroad.

The 1965 plan envisions the use of U.S. combat forces, under over-all Thai command, to help defend Thailand by checking any Communist thrust against it in Laos, across the Thai border.

Bernadette Wows Manhattan Irish

By COLMAN McCARTHY

NEW YORK (UP)—Coming from the mother country to have a run at the mother lode, Bernadette Devlin spent her first evening in America among 600 Irish-born and Irish-loving at the upper tip of Manhattan.

Packed into a hall under a bowling alley, the crowd roared and rocked with her, and had out the money purses long before the 22-year-old member of parliament and street-fighter finished her impassioned speech.

Only if she had recited the rosary in Gaelic would they have been likely to reach for their singles, fives and tens sooner.

The Inwood neighborhood boasts more bars per capita than any other equal-sized area in the world. With a population 40 per cent Jewish, 40 per cent Irish and the rest everything, the area is politically unpredictable.

STARTED JAVITS

It has sent an Irish assemblyman to Albany for the past 10 years, but in 1948 it started Jake Javits on his way when he defeated Paul O'Dwyer for Congress.

Her speech was scheduled for 9 p.m.

By 8, the hall was filled, the bowling noise above dinned out by bunched-in laughter and talk below. There were the young children, whom the Irish love to put on their shoulders and expose to heroes so the kids will have a lifetime brag-commodity of saying I saw so-and-so when I was four.

The young women, Kates, Eilleens, Mavourneens, wore dresses that covered them from neck to knees with nothing suggestive in between.

Murderess Back In Prison Cell

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP)—Winnie Ruth Judd, 64, was returned to Arizona State Prison Friday, more than 35 years after leaving because she had been judged insane.

Mrs. Judd was returned to the prison after seven years of freedom from Arizona State Hospital, where she had been sent just three days before her scheduled execution for the 1931 slaying of two girl-friends. She fled the hospital in 1962.

Let's See It Clearly

NO POLITICAL PARTY CAN govern without end; it is beyond possibility for any human institution in our democratic system. This is particularly true when the party is almost entirely dependent on the leadership and ability of one man—as is the Social Credit Party of British Columbia. Thus the eventual passage of the present government from the scene is inevitable—it is a mathematical certainty.

Those who argue that every available vote must be cast for Social Credit in order to avoid the bogey of a socialist government in this province overlook the fact that through this policy they would eliminate the non-socialist opposition; they would ensure that there will be only the socialist organization to take over when the government is replaced.

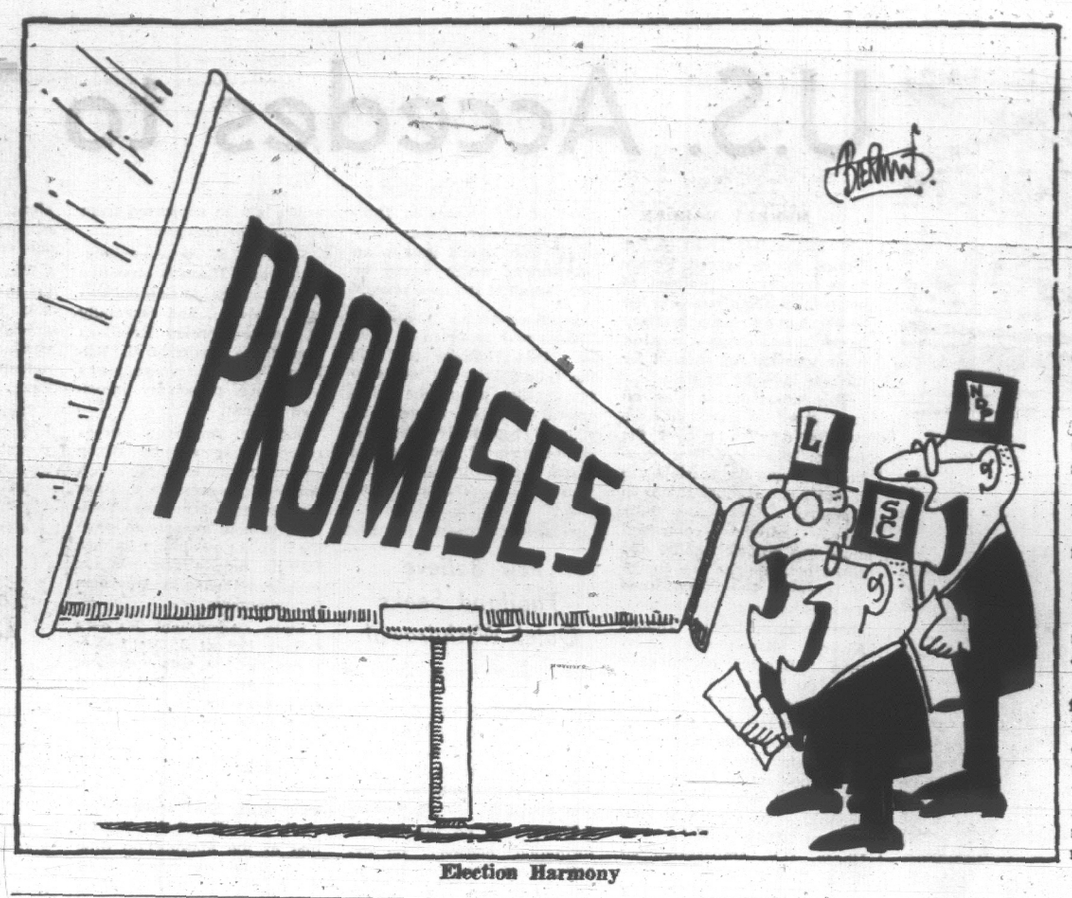

The policy of voting for one political extreme merely to keep another extreme out of office has the seeds of its own defeat within it. Thus the argument that voting for Liberal candidates will only put the NDP into office is a timid one and a false one. Voting for a strong Liberal contingent in the Legislature is the only sure antidote to an eventual NDP regime, for the Social Credit government cannot last forever and the Liberals provide the only free-enterprise alternative.

In reality, of course, Mr. Bennet's attempt for campaign purposes to polarize the whole provincial political situation into two opposite ideological camps is contrived and distorted. Party politics in Canada has largely forsaken the traditional labels of a generation or two ago. Liberal, Conservative and Social Credit governments in federal and provincial theatres have over the years overtaken many of the CCF and NDP planks, and in effect rendered the leftist party almost redundant in Canadian politics.

Pension plans, welfare programs, compensation systems, housing and education policies of the old-line parties have made most so-called socialist proposals seem to be lagging. In addition, as Mr. Bennett has amply demonstrated, non-socialist governments have become owners of industry, transportation and other traditionally private sectors of the economy.

Mr. Berger's contribution to the British Columbia scene is political, not ideological. What he carries with him is the concept of the non-political bloc put to political use. In other words, he introduces into the political processes of this province the tactic of using trade unions—a social and economic phenomenon—as a political force. There are two major flaws in this line of thought. First, employees throughout Canada have traditionally rejected any attempt to coerce them into voting as a unit, labor or otherwise—they vote as individuals for the candidate of their choice irrespective of party affiliation. And secondly, any political leader who seeks power in British Columbia is unwise to do so with an implied obligation to any organized segment of the population whose purposes are wholly in the interests of that segment rather than of society as a whole.

Trade unions are a legitimate and necessary part of our economic and social structure. But there is no place for them behind the ministerial chair as a sort of grey eminence influencing the decisions of the head of the government. And no man should be the head of government who reaches office with even the suggestion of being under obligation to such interests.

Election Harmony

Letter

Unfrightened

In my view there is an imperative reason why the government should not be voted in one more time; it is not good democracy. We might as well live under an openly declared dictatorship; if the public mindlessly opts for another mess of pottage dished up on the same old platitudes then one can only deduce it does not take much to satisfy the people of this province.

What is so unique about the building of roads and providing good transportation when the time is ripe and there are sufficient means to pay for these things? They do not come out of Premier Bennett's personal pocket. And how can anyone know what will happen in the future until it does indeed happen? I for one shall not be swayed by the dread figments of Premier Bennett's imagination. The promise of Mr. Gagliardi's return is enough to set me running in another direction.

The Buildings are in need of some fresh air and only the public can let it in. I'd love to know why Premier Bennett can promise so many increases "after the election" without an increase in taxation! If it is possible, why not now so that schools can be finished, to say nothing of the Pat Bay Highway, and a myriad of other things.

"IMPATIENT"

Who Pays the Rescuer?

IT IS THE CODE OF THE SEAS that anyone able to give help shall go to the rescue of anyone in distress on or in the water. This is not merely a gallant gesture. It is a practical form of mutual aid. The one giving assistance today may be the one requiring it tomorrow.

There are occasions, however, when the principle loses some of its validity. This is the case when professional boatmen, operators of marinas and the like, are subject to far more than their share of calls and, though they are commercially involved in boating, receive no compensation for their efforts.

The complaint repeated by manager Bob Wright of the Oak Bay Marina illustrates the point. Because he has boats that can reach an accident in the general area of his operations quickly and efficiently, he is the first to receive an official summons when someone gets into trouble in the waters around the southeast coast of Greater Victoria. He goes out as a matter of conscience. But he makes the honest point that he shouldn't be expected to carry the rescue load within his territory without recompense.

He's in the boating business commercially. He burns gas on rescue missions, whether they be real emergencies or false alarms, and at times, undertakes risks to himself, his helper and his boat.

This is a situation, brought to local notice, that might be duplicated in a number of seaboard or lakeshore areas in Canada—and it can be expected to multiply with the explosive growth in boating popularity.

Mr. David Groos, Victoria's member of Parliament, has given assurance that he will take the question up with the department of transport and with the national defence department, which has jurisdiction over air-sea rescue, with a view to seeing that commercial operators are compensated for their rescue work. There is a responsibility to be discharged here. The representations by Mr. Groos should produce speedy results.

To Put 'Silver' Back in Goldstream

IT IS A MATTER OF PARTICULAR anxiety to sports fishermen, and their associations, that the coho run in Goldstream has been falling off seriously in recent seasons. The concern should be general because the fish which spawn at Goldstream are a natural resource of interest to tourists and to local citizens and because they provide one of the most accessible, most sheltered and most popular fisheries, for sportsmen only, on the lower Island. Apart from recreational considerations, that has important economic significance.

It is the conviction of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers Association, the body which has shown the most serious interest in the problem, that the decrease in stocks has resulted from uneven flow in the stream itself. Usually in the spawning season enough water runs in Goldstream to permit upstream migration of the fish only if the Greater Victoria Water District can release supplies from its holding ponds high above the spawning areas. A water shortage also leads to higher temperatures detrimental to the fishery. On the other hand, during periods of heavy run-off, the rushing waters tend to scour out the gravel in which eggs are buried and frequently the gravel itself is swept away.

Here is a situation which, without a very great outlay of money, could be remedied. A similar problem was solved on the mainland through installation of controls to protect the spawning beds and regulate the river flow. Provision of the new water board tunnel should greatly ease the supply problem for the Greater Victoria area and permit a larger flow in Goldstream at low-water periods. Co-operation between the governments involved and the sport fishing groups should provide an effective basis for action.

Something Happened to Change the Ministerial Mood

THE Trudeau government in its new concern with the inflationary peril, has now almost completely reversed policies quite recently defended by leading ministers. One of the more striking examples is to be found in the paper on expenditure guidelines put out last week. As the prime minister put it: "The aim is to get rid of the old idea that there has to be a 'normal' annual increase in costs and in numbers of employees to meet a 'normal' annual increase in population and in the government services provided to that population."

Western

It is certainly an old idea as anyone who has worked in Ottawa can testify. But old or not, it was considered highly respectable by no less a person than the present minister of finance as late as December 7, 1967. Speaking in the budget debate, Mr. Benson, after noting that the growth rate for the federal service was to be "drastically cut," went on to say:

"Contrary to the beliefs of many who think that the federal public service has grown abnormally over the years, statistics show that the growth of the service has remained remarkably constant in relation to population growth over the past 15 years . . . When viewed in relation to population growth, to growth in the total labor force, and to growth in the employed labor force, the federal public service has either remained constant or has actually declined slightly, percentage-wise, over the 15-year period."

Mr. Benson was sufficiently impressed with the importance of this argument, now gone by the board, that he filled four pages of Hansard with graphs and tables documenting it. These charts would serve, he believed, "to explode the myth that over recent years the federal service has been growing at an inordinately fast rate in relation to the growth of the nation as a whole."

What was reassuring then (with inflation already rampant) is alarming now. For, as Mr. Trudeau explained, without the latest cutbacks, spending during 1970-71 would go to $13.5 billion for a 14 per cent increase. Indeed, by 1974-75 the outlook would be for a colossal deficit of $1.75 billion.

Some 'Startling' Facts

The new set of polices results, as the prime minister explained, from a comprehensive review of expenditure plans for the next few years. Some "startling facts" have emerged.

Of these, the "most startling" is the revelation that "almost without exception, this decade has been characterized by yearly budgetary deficits exceeding $4 billion in total and requiring upwards of $300 million per annum to service." This cannot have required much digging since these very facts have been the burden of innumerable remonstrances addressed to not-very-interested ministers.

But startling they are and not only because of their significance for taxation. The strange fact, deserving of emphasis at this time, is that the Liberals, on coming to power, had no intention of compiling such a record. That the reverse was true is starkly evident from the very careful utterances of Mr. Pearson in the campaigns of 1962 and 1965. Even before that in urging certain emergency measures (in a speech to the Liberal rally of 1961), he said: "If they result — as they might — in a deficit, it will be a planned one for emergency purposes to be restored with a minimum of delay when the emergency is over and by the increased tax receipts from an expanding economy."

One could quote other pronouncements from the era of the "high and hard road." It is more relevant to observe that this cautious attitude, combined with notable optimism, continued into the early Liberal years. Thus, in February, 1965, Mr. Pearson told a party dinner in Toronto: "The years of large budget deficits have been ended. Confidence in monetary and business conditions has been renewed."

There was in fact some reason at the time (as the 1965 accounts were to show) to anticipate a return to ordered finances. But by 1966 the government was well into the huge spending splurge which was to produce the greatest deficit on record.

Plainly something happened to change the ministerial mood and the government's priorities. Time may show that the decisive consideration was Mr. Pearson's anxiety about national unity and, flowing from it, the great effort to make Ottawa the focus of national attention. In any case, the prime minister's once anxious references to inflation became notably philosophical. So did his comments on government expenditures.

As to the latter, Mr. Pearson reached a peak of sorts in a speech of March 29, 1967. This was largely devoted to the thesis that government is bound to get bigger. Speaking of increased expenditures, he said that a large part of them were due to higher payments to the provinces. He added: "These are, of course, merely the inevitable problems of a federal society. We shall have to live with them, come to terms with them, as we have managed to do successfully for a hundred years."

Thus, by centennial year, there had been quite a change in the government's outlook. Now there has been another change in the opposite direction. Mr. Trudeau is emphatically not prepared to live with some of the problems to which his predecessor has become more or less reconciled.

Must Show Fortitude

The point is that the threat of heavy budgetary deficits is not a transient phenomenon, as Mr. Trudeau recognized by making projections to 1974-75. If it is to be successfully countered the government will have to show fortitude not merely through the coming winter (which may be tough since rising unemployment is likely to generate new pressures against the expenditure ceilings) but for a considerable time to come. It will be politically tempting to relax the curbs at the earliest. But if the mood of government changes once again, as it did in the Pearson period, spending will be out of control with the prospect, clearly indicated by Mr. Trudeau's mathematics, of deficits very much larger than those which shook public confidence in the 1960s and brought the day of reckoning in Ottawa.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

The Strategy of Dublin's Call for a UN Force

IN DIPLOMACY, ALMOST NOTHING is ever wholly what it seems; and the call for a United Nations peace force to quiet religious fighting in Northern Ireland is an interesting case in point. There never was any real expectation that a UN force would be sent. It would have been stretching the Charter to discuss it seriously (domestic turmoil being beyond UN jurisdiction); the British would have vetoed it if it came to a vote; and Northern Ireland would never have agreed voluntarily to let it enter the territory.

Frye

What Dublin clearly had in mind in making the proposal was:

- To generate pressure on London and Belfast to speed reforms in the treatment of the Catholic minority in Northern Ireland. The threat of a UN airing represented such pressure.
- To satisfy domestic demands south of the border that Ireland "do something" for its beleaguered co-religionists to the north.
- To help establish the moral basis for a future military intervention by Ireland should events degenerate to the point where one was considered necessary. "We asked the UN to act, and it didn't" is an old and familiar tactic of self-justification.
- To re-ignite a 50-year-old drive for unification of Ireland.

At least the first two of these purposes were served before the Security Council ever sat down to consider adopting an agenda.

The British, under both domestic and international pressure, agreed to take physical charge of the crisis, but extracted in return from Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark a pledge of civil-rights reform in Northern Ireland.

The political purpose of the "peace force" which Britain agreed to send was, therefore, not to protect Chichester-Clark from the explosive wrath of a disaffected minority but to buy time in which the legitimate demands of the minority could be met. A UN force would have had much greater difficulty serving this purpose. Chichester-Clark would not have wanted it to come, and therefore — if forced by circumstanes to take it—would not have made any political concessions to get it.

Its function could only have been to keep the disputants physically apart, so far as possible, while their leaders sought, under conditions of unequal bargaining power, to negotiate their differences.

This would not have been likely to work. It has been, and is, a built-in handicap of UN peace armies that they tend to ease pressures for change and thus to perpetuate the status quo — even where the status quo is highly unstable and otherwise undesirable.

It is as if a police cordon, intending to be impartial and simply to maintain "law and order," were to be thrown around a factory whose workers were on strike, preventing picketing and violence and leaving union and management to negotiate a contract "without interference." This could be called impartial peace-keeping, but its effect would be that the bargaining power of the weaker party would be kept weak. The results would be likely to reflect that fact.

The real difficulty with UN peace actions is that peace-keeping is less than peace-making, and one does not always lead to the other. When it does, the results inevitably reflect an existing political balance, protected from external pressures and influences but not necessarily in equitable counterpoise.

UN intervention in Cyprus has followed this pattern of producing stability but not peaceful change. It has succeeded, much of the time, in keeping Greek and Turkish Cypriots from cutting each other's throats. Together with NATO, it has helped inhibit an invasion of the island by Turkey. But this has protected President Makarios from the necessity of major steps to ease the Turkish Cypriots' grievances. The Greek and Turkish factions are seeking to negotiate an accommodation, but it may prove to be one very largely on Makarios' terms.

Buying time, calming passions, reducing bloodshed and encouraging negotiation are useful functions. But in Ireland, to have protected Chichester-Clark from pressures by the Catholics and enabled him to impose a solution on his terms — or Ian Paisley's — would not have been widely accepted as justice, and it would scarcely have been what Dublin wanted in asking for UN intervention.

It is perhaps ironic, but true, that Britain is in a better position to encourage peaceful change in Northern Ireland than the UN, with its built-in requirement of impartiality.

It is simply a footnote to history that the Republic of Ireland, unwilling to see British sovereignty strengthened in the North, and eager to harness events to reunification of the island, resisted British intervention.

The Catholics in the North welcomed it, however, and the UN Security Council — though it embarrassed Britian by permitting a constitutionally-irregular preliminary discussion of the issue — acquiesced.

This left London and Belfast with one more chance to set their house in order. If they fail this time, it will be an entirely new ball game.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

We take for granted our Douglas fir in this province. Yet how many of us know what an incredible tree it is?

It has been, and still is, to a great extent, our "bread and butter", for it and its by-products have built our economy. It grows almost everywhere and anywhere — in the low lands, the high country, and on the steep, rocky, mountain slopes almost to the snowline.

Not only does it grow here in B.C. but as far south as California and Mexico and across the Pacific in Japan and Korea. It is the same tree but a slightly different species.

Thousands of seeds have been shipped to Europe. England, New Zealand and other countries are now growing the Douglas fir for their forest crops. In some instances they can grow larger girth trees in a shorter period of time than we can.

The tree is shallow-rooted and one wonders just how it stands the heavy wind storms, though the roots will penetrate deep down in the rock cracks and so provide a holdfast. Where the slopes are steep the growth will be sparse, but on the lower levels the stands will be heavy.

The foliage of the older trees spreads and forms a canopy which casts a shade so that the undercover is sparse. The bark is fire resistant and yet it makes an excellent fuel for the stove and open fireplace as well as the furnaces of the sawmills.

On the Island trees have been cut that were over 20 feet across and over 1,000 years old. There are some still to be found that are 10 feet across at the base and over 600 years old. Some of these can be seen at Francis Park, Goldstream Park, John Dean Park, and on the old Rithet property. They will stand for a long time yet if man will leave them alone.

The wood from this tree is perhaps the most versatile of all our woods. From it you get the large beams used in heavy construction. It is our greatest source of plywood, any type of building wood and the finest of finishing lumber.

The cones on the Douglas fir are always pendant and hang from the twigs all down the limbs. They have a distinguishing feature in that they have a three-pronged bract on the scales. This is the only tree that has this feature. From habitat to habitat there is a slight difference in the cone size. In the interior the bracts will be longer, while the cone itself will be shorter.

Home, Home On the Beach

NIXON

SAN CLEMENTE, California — The Disneyland band played California Here I Come and the little clump of Navajo Indians brandished a board that read "Ya Ta Hey President Nixon" — meaning "welcome".

The 8,000-strong crowd cheered and waved mini-flags and no breath of protest stirred the bland blue air of San Clemente as President Richard Nixon arrived for his first stay at what he intends to make his permanent "Summer White House."

The president stood on a truck to thank everybody for giving him such a wonderful welcome home to California. He walked along a hurricane fence shaking hands. "There's nothing like coming home" he said. "That's one of the happiest things."

Home is a 10-roomed, 44-year-old Spanish-style mansion standing on a bluff above the Pacific Ocean in the resort town of San Clemente, 50 miles south of Los Angeles. It sits on 22 secluded acres, possesses a sheltered patio with a fountain, a 44-foot swimming pool, tropical gardens, flourishing trees and seven waterfront acres —the sort of place that anyone with $340,000 could buy.

Easily Protected

The president's choice has met almost universal approval. San Clemente's city fathers like it because of the striking effect it has had on real estate values. The Secret Service like it because, with the addition of 1,500 feet of walls and fences, it is easily protected. Nixon likes it because of the two-storey tower adjoining the house containing the semi-circular library he uses as his personal study.

But the president, who will remain here on a working holiday until September 7, has brought with him a turmoil of activity that has severely shaken sleepy San Clemente. Not long ago this town of 17,050 people did not appear on most local maps, now it is suddenly on the world map — and uncertain about how it likes it.

First, there is the security problem. A mile-long ocean security zone has been set up on Secret Service orders. Inside the area, which is marked by orange and white buoys, Coast Guard boats patrol. Now and again the long grey cigar-shape of a submarine appears on the surface.

The zone has been closed to all private vessels since Nixon's arrival and will stay that way throughout his month-long vacation. Searchlights spin beams out over the ocean from the cliffs by night.

Air approach is also difficult. The Federal Aviation Authority has forbidden aircraft to fly lower than 4,000 feet over the grounds — which accounts for the dismal obscurity of the mile-high aerial photographs of the estate currently appearing in the press.

Station On Hill

A radio station is going up on a nearby hill, which will link up with radar stations at a local Marine Corps base. Four new telephone cables carry 1,200 pairs of lines each into the presidential retreat.

Hexagonal, glass-walled lookout huts manned round the clock by Secret Servicemen have been erected at numerous points along the protecting wall. A private road has been built to allow the president to walk to his helicopter pad without using public roads.

And so on, and so forth. Even the Santa Fee railroad trains have been told not to hoot as they pass along the line running close by.

In spite of all this, Nixon and his wife have already been photographed by snooping cameras on their terrace, walking together along their vast, empty beach, and in the grounds. And one afternoon recently the president strolled over from his property to the public beach to spend 30 minutes chatting — "Hi' there! I'm Dick Nixon!" — with fellow Californians.

The Nixons are not San Clemente's first presidential visitors. The house was built by a leading California Democrat, Henry Hamilton Cotton, whose pleasure it was to play poker there with Franklin D. Roosevelt and other Democratic cronies. "Ham" Cotton's 1935 ranch barbecue for FDR (and 4,000 other guests) is still remembered by San Clemente's senior citizens.

Cotton's widow, now 90 years old and still living on the estate, helped direct the Mexican artisans who laid the villa's colorful tiles, imposing hand-carved wooden doors and wooden peg floors.

The Cotton Ranch has long been known among San Clemente's real estate brokers as "the fattest piece of land in town" and they are overjoyed by Nixon's decision to buy it.

"It's like you had a product, and you got the president's endorsement for it" says one realtor. "Now the world knows we've got the kind of weather, the kind of surroundings and the kind of people the president likes."

Actually, not all the people around San Clemente this summer are of the kind that Nixon likes. Organized demonstrations by anti-war groups began almost as soon as the president first visited the town last March. Pickets were at the gates again in June, when he called briefly before jetting onwards to Midway Island to meet South Vietnam's President Thieu.

Now the protesters are returning to this far-from accessible spot to demand an end to fighting in Vietnam. "No sanctuary for Nixon" is the campaign slogan of the Orange County Peace and Human Rights Council, who are joining forces with the Los Angeles Peace Action Council for the day. Together they have sent out 11,000 letters and posters to arouse support.

Military Precision

A large, bearded architect, Robert Bland of the Orange County PHRC, will run the demonstration. With military precision he outlines his plans: "If police intervene, we'll put swimmers in a series of inner tubes along the waterfront carrying slogans that will be raised into the air on balloons."

He is also toying with the idea of sending topless dancers bearing anti-war banners down the tracks of the Santa Fe railroad, plainly visible from the Nixon house. How would the police meet this challenge?

"Up to now," says police chief Clifford Murray," the demonstrators have acted with reasonable decorum." He clears his throat ruminatively. "So have we."

Newman View Of Pearson Winning Favor

By DOUGLAS FISHER

An important and unreported victory has been the delayed triumph in the universities of Peter Newman's study of Lester Pearson, "The Distemper of Our Times".

It now heads the reading lists in a great profusion of courses in Canadian politics, recent Canadian history, sociology and the social sciences in which the "current affairs" content is steadily increasing. Why a delayed recognition? Probably a reluctance on the part of academics to admit that a journalist can do a better job than they can, and that he can do it twice in a row.

His Renegade in Power has dominated the Diefenbaker literature from the date of its publication. And now Distemper. There are close to a hundred books, parts of books, academic articles and addresses on the Pearson years and the coming of Trudeau.

The more that comes out, the more Distemper stands up, and stands out.

Peter Newman concentrated on the inter-relationship between Diefenbaker and Pearson. Much of the new stuff is on Pearson and Trudeau: "The main difference between Pearson and Trudeau is Stanfield;" "Trudeau is Pearson with a majority."

The non-Newman interpretation of Pearson has tended to be that Diefenbaker and Pearson were essential to each other, that they were part of one Canadian event. And Pearson, the nice guy, the scholar, was every scholar's favorite in the inseparable duet.

But Newman examined the interplay between the two, isolated the Pearson content, and found it wanting. In short, he had more historical perspective than the historians and political scientists.

A professor of political science, active in the Liberal Party, has told us an interesting anecdote about the Newman book.

A group of honors students was discussing the CBC Pearson movie which they had just viewed. What struck them most was something many others have commented upon — the remarkable conversation between the Prime Minister and his minister of labor.

Allan MacEachen came into the room, and half-embarrassed, half-delighted, told his leader that solution for the Seafarers' International Union mess had just been proposed.

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, had let it be known in Washington that if the Canadian government would give him a finger in the maritime trusteeship in Canada, a phone call would be made and the violence along the waterfront would cease.

The Prime Minister said at once that he could not agree to any such deal. The students agreed that there was the essential, decent, constitutionally proper Pearson.

But the professor knew something about the SIU and the maritime trusteeship.

He told the students that while it was true that a wholly-Canadian trusteeship was set up, a deal was entered into with the Maritime Trades Department of the AFL-CIO, (the Hall-Millard deal), which conceded the demands of the American labor centre, and then the phone call was made, and the violence against Canadians in Great Lakes ports was turned off like a tap.

After a long pause, one of the students said, "Newman is right."

Here was the Pearson who "sought not to impose his own will but to placate the strong wills of those around him." Here was the Pearson who was determined quietly to accommodate the United States in response to any American pressure even if the "national psyche was damaged in the process."

Here was the Pearson obsessed with the marginal diplomatic content of a vital domestic issue, who saw the forms of sovereignty but not the contents. Here was Newman's Pearson, not the liberal academics'.

This picture was taken by The Globe and Mail correspondent in Peking, Colin McCullough, while out walking after a snowstorm earlier this year. He followed the column of about 2,000 young people to the Soviet Embassy, where they joined in a demonstration protesting Russian actions on Damansky Island in the Ussuri River, the first of a number of recent classics.

War Between Russia, China Unthinkable in Nuclear Age

By CHALMERS M. ROBERTS

Of all the horrors on today's horizon which fall into the realm of the possible, a Chinese-Soviet war must surely head the list.

An American attitude of "let you and them fight" after the fashion of the days when that was said about a possible conflict between Stalin's Russia and Hitler's Germany makes absolutely no sense in a nuclear world.

Last week's fighting on the Sino-Soviet border in remote central Asia adds a note of alarm to what must have been in the mind of Hungarian Communist leader Janos Kadar when he said in Moscow, after a similar June border battle, that "I believe and hope that there will not be a war" between the two Communist giants.

For such a top ranking Communist, then attending the world gathering of the party clan, to admit to the possibility of a war can be taken as the head of an iceberg.

Looking back over the history of the Sino-Soviet dispute one is struck by the time lag between key events in that rivalry and when the facts become known in Washington. From the record one must conclude that the current state of tension is far higher than what is actually being said out loud in Peking and Moscow.

After one June border incident, a Peking newspaper called on the Chinese "to prepare to wage both an ordinary and a great nuclear war with the Soviet revisionism."

Later that month the Soviet charge in Washington brought to Secretary of State Rogers a copy of a lengthy Soviet statement justifying Moscow's contention that its frontiers with China "remain inviolate" and that any attempt "to encroach" on the frontiers "will meet with a crushing rebuff."

This, incidentally, was an examination of Sino-Czarist treaties which set the frontiers with citations of such a remote item as an 1858 treaty between Costa Rica and Nicaragua to prove that international law accepts agreements on a boundary along one side of, rather than in the middle of, a river dividing two nations.

It appears from Soviet and Chinese accounts of incidents this year that border guards stand with mental chips on their shoulders asking their rivals to knock them off and see what happens.

Given Soviet armor and the slow boil which must be taking place in Moscow, it would not be surprising if the Kremlin let its military try to "teach" the Chinese a lesson.

A fascinating precedent for just such an action is recalled in the current issue of Interplay magazine by John Erickson of the University of Edinburgh.

In 1941, after Hitler invaded Russia and Stalin worried about the Japanese on his eastern flank, Tokyo, then Hitler's friend and in occupation of much of China, carried out "special manoeuvres," in Manchuria. Writes Erickson:

"What is held, by some at least, to have inhibited a possible Japanese thrust (at Soviet Siberia) was the spectacular Soviet sabotage operation carried out in eastern Manchuria on Aug. 2, 1941, when a giant Japanese fuel and ammunition dump was blown up, devastating an area more than seven miles across.

"This cautionary tale might apply as much to Lop Nor (the Chinese nuclear test area today) in Sinkiang as it once did to Tatutzuchuan in Manchuria: It implies fundamentally that on the Soviet eastern borders there are more ways than one of skinning a cat."

Just such a move, though more likely as a reconnaissance in force against some Chinese target rather than an act of sabotage, is what many American experts think is likely to happen if the border clashes continue.

Whether it would, or could, stop there with the effect the 1941 affair had on the Japanese is something else again. The Kremlin leaders know from the inside that the Chinese also know the art of dirty tricks and that they are fond of quoting a Mao axiom which says: "When facing a wild beast, one must not show the slightest timidity."

Publication, Research — Fine, But Who Does the Teaching?

By ART STOTT

Paul Woodring, of Western Washington State College, who has built a continental reputation by talking sense about schools, has cocked a critical eye at the dictum "publish or perish" which guides so many ambitious young university professors, and at the concentration on research which absorbs others. Dr. Woodring does not discount the importance either of publication or research. But if these are to be the overriding concerns of young people who want to get ahead in the higher strata of education, he wonders what the universities will do for competent and effective teachers.

Stott

"Today," says Dr. Woodring, "the typical American university is only secondarily an educational organization; primarily, it is a vast and complex research institute staffed by scientists and scholars so preoccupied with some narrow segment of a discipline that they have little interest in teaching. Most of them emphatically deny that they are educators; yet these are the men who set the standards for the academic world, decide what shall be taught, and establish procedures for promotion up through the faculty ranks.

"Because of this preference among the tenured faculty for research," he adds, "the system is rigged against those who like to teach undergraduates and do it well.

"A young instructor quickly discovers that the way to get ahead in the academic world is to find a position with the lightest possible teaching load in order to devote his major energies to research. His publications may give him a national reputation which will cause him to be sought by other universities as well as by industry and government. But if he devotes his energies to teaching, and becomes an excellent teacher, he will gain only a local reputation. Since such a reputation will be with students rather than with faculty colleagues, he is not likely to be offered new appointments and may be denied tenure and promotion within his own institution."

Dr. Woodring is discussing American universities. Who will argue that Canadian universities differ significantly in this particular?

A university staff member devoted to research or publication should have time for that work. But if he is devoted to teaching — and has strength in that field —then he may have no, or minimal, time for research and publication while he's doing a first class job as a teacher. If achievement as a teacher is to be ignored in promotion and wide-ranging recognition, he's going to be low man on the academic totem. He's going to live in the smaller house, drink beer instead of Napoleon brandy, drive the less status-symbolized car. He could become embittered in his job.

That's one side of the picture. The other discloses the position of the undergraduate. He benefits eventually from research and publication by university staff members — as does society in general — if the research and publication are any good. But his immediate concern is what he derives from attending class in university and what he gets depends substantially on the capability of his teacher as a teacher.

The issue is linked with another problem of universities in recent years. Because of mass education and public acceptance of the advantages of a university degree, young people are flowing into the halls of higher learning in volume which not only bulges their sides but creates a demand for teacher's beyond the quality supply. So, runs the thesis, more and more freshmen and sophomores are being directed and given lectures by inferior instructors because there aren't enough good ones to go around. That, combined with the questionable university calibre of many students brought in by the flood, lowers standards.

If this is the case, the need for good teachers in higher education is emphasized. And while good teaching is not solely a matter of scholarship, if the bright people on staff skimp on teaching in favor of research and publication because the latter give them a higher market value, the undergraduates could wind up with either less able instructors or embittered, though competent, men. That could, and probably does, short-change the undergraduates.

Dr. Woodring calls for balance on staff, meaning more recognition for good teaching, more status, and, inevitably, greater material rewards. He supports his case with a suggested system for assessing good teachers.

The straight-thinking Western Washington State author and education editor (eight years on The Saturday Review) continues to talk sense about schools.

Poor Losers Still Seek Swim Pool Anti-Support

By JIM HUME

Victoria city council's poorest losers are still trying to drum up anti-support for the new swimming pool now in the working drawing stage.

Hume

Although approved by city council the pool could still be forced to referendum if the dissidents can entice 1,000 signatures to a petition.

And they are trying hard.

Ald. Clyde Savage is one of the chief mutterers against the new pool. He thinks it too expensive at $1.6 million.

That's the same alderman who a few months ago was trying to persuade the people that $2.4 million for a convention centre was a good deal.

It's time he got over his sulks and accepted the fact that the majority of his fellow councilmen, in their wisdom, want to see the new pool built.

Another grouchy voice came a few days ago in the form of a letter from a visitor to Victoria from Bath, England. He wants to see the good old Crystal saved and he's convinced that it can be.

Maybe it can, but not as a swimming pool. For the last time let it be said THE CONCRETE TANK FORMING THE POOL IS SINKING, SINKING, SINKING. It can't be jacked-up and it can't be stopped.

Memo to Police Chief Jack Gregory: the young police officers attending the Davie Street fire a couple of Sundays ago need a quick course in public relations.

Three press photographers were at the scene, all veterans of more fires, disasters and catastrophes than the rookie policemen will ever see. All three knew how to get the shots they were assigned to get while staying out of the way of firefighters.

All three were hassled and hindered by the men in blue.

The news photographer assigned to a Sunday fire isn't exactly delighted with his job. He, too, likes his Sunday's at home. He gets where he has to as quickly as possible, shoots with a minimum of delay and gets home as soon as he can.

And, because he is a veteran, he knows better than to impede either firemen or police as they execute their duties.

The same applies to reporters assigned to such news-worthy events.

They have a job to do and should be able to do it without hindrance.

Memo for the record: the rather flamboyant announcement by an unnamed city alderman earlier this week that city manager Dennis Young was now paid $25,000 a year revealed only a weakness of memory in the utterer and recorder of the statement.

It's little more than two years ago that council, in open committee session, agreed to two pay raises of $2,500 each to bring the manager pay up to the $25,000 bracket.

There was some debate at the time, we suspect with the same alderman, asking how much the top man in Vancouver received. The answer was that there are two top administrators on staff in Vancouver, both are paid $25,000 a year — or $50,000 if arithmetic isn't a long suit.

As for the department heads, with 1½ years between raises they were due for the same average raise — and "average" is the key word — other employees got.

And a memo to the kids who jammed Centennial Square Wednesday night:

As a creaky and rapidly greying almost traditional "square," my compliments go to the quartet beating out the sound and to the thousand or more youngsters on the receiving end.

It was noisy and, for these old ears, a little too repetitive. But it was also obviously a fun night for the younger folks, and a well behaved fun night at that.

The organizers of the event — it was part of the Youth Week program — deserve a pat on the head. Not only did they show the other generation how Centennial Square can be used, they also showed the organizer of an earlier rock-pop concert how to put on a show without running afoul of city officials or the older generation.

School Bids Studied

All five bids which were over the estimate when Greater Victoria School Board opened them Thursday are being studied.

The planned work includes renovations and alterations to the administration, laboratory and workshop areas and three new rooms at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School.

Maximum amount sharable with the government is $144,140 but the lowest bid, by Herb Bate Construction Limited, was $151,820 and the other four ranged as high as $166,547.

The tenders were referred to the school board's buildings and grounds committee for study and consultation with the education department.

FREIGHT RATE HIKE EYED IN MARITIMES

MONTREAL (CP)—Canadian National and CP Rail are filing tariff changes with the Canadian Transport Commission which would increase freight rates in the Martimes by 11 per cent, it was announced Friday.

A spokesman for the both railways said in a statement the new rates would be effective Sept. 23, when the government freight rate freeze expires.

The federal government announced Friday the rate freeze would be lifted on that date.

Death Toll Likely 400

Hurricane Camille is dead, but the awesome task of searching for its victims turned today to the sea off the Mississippi coast and the mountainous areas of Virginia.

The toll stood at nearly 400 dead, with hundreds missing and feared dead.

Property damages soared into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Nap Cassibry, Civil Defence co-ordinator for the Mississippi coastal strip, estimated that 315 persons perished. He said it is believed that "more bodies are buried in the beach sand — buried deep where they'll never be found.

MORE ABOUT POLLUTION

The most pressing pollution problem in our area is sewage disposal, and the simple reason why the Capital Region authorities have not been able to solve it is Mr. Loffmark, the Minister of Health, and a Socred Government more interested in other things. While Loffmark and his cabinet colleagues have been fighting among themselves, local government has been prevented from getting on with the job.

The Liberal party recognizes that the cost of sewage treatment is beyond the capacity of the homeowner faced with ever-mounting taxes, and a Liberal Government is committed to pay 50% of the cost of primary treatment plants, 75% of the secondary treatment and 90% of tertiary treatment as they are needed.

The next time some personnel manager says you're too old,

Fight back.

You can, you know.

Pity is,
Too many folks accept discrimination.
Too many expect their age or sex to lose them job opportunities and fair pay.
Too many expect their ancestry or skin colour to deny them common privileges and decent consideration.

It's time to fight back.

In British Columbia, you have rights.
And your government protects those rights.

In June, 1969, the Province of British Columbia proclaimed The Human Rights Act for the promotion and protection of the fundamental rights of every individual in this province.

The Act makes it unlawful to:

Discriminate in hiring, continuing employment, membership in a trade union, because of race, religion, sex, colour, nationality, ancestry, place of origin, or because of age if between 45 and 65.

Discriminate in seeking or advertising for employees.

Discriminate in renting or selling houses or commercial property.

Discriminate in providing accomodation, services, or facilities where the public is customarily admitted.

Discriminate by paying women lower wages than men for substantially the same work, done in the same establishment.

Leslie Peterson introduced this much-needed legislation because, as Minister of Labour, he saw it his duty to make sure every British Columbian gets a fair shake.

The Act has teeth. Now that it is passed, the provincial government has appointed a Human Rights Director to handle complaints, and a Human Rights Commission to enforce the Act and deal with offenders.

If you'd like to know more about Human Rights in British Columbia or if you have a complaint, Les Peterson wants to hear from you. Write him through The Director, Human Rights Branch, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C., and help us keep British Columbia free of discrimination.

KHIEM TO FORM SAIGON CABINET

SAIGON (Reuters) — President Nguyen Van Thieu has asked Deputy Premier Gen. Tran Thien Khiem to form a new government, the official Saigon radio announced today.

The radio, quoting the president's office, said Thieu summoned the army general today and invited him to form a government.

It also said that Premier Tran Van Huong has been asked to remain in office until Khiem's cabinet is formed.

Hill 102 Captured After Hard Fight

SAIGON (AP) — United States troops today captured a rocky knoll south of Da Nang from North Vietnamese forces who for four days had blocked all efforts to reach a downed American helicopter.

Four companies of the U.S. American Division, totalling about 250 men, occupied the hill at dusk against little resistance. From their vantage point, they were in position to advance to the site of the crash about 1,000 yards away, presumably Sunday.

The four companies began moving up the north slope of the knoll, known as Hill 102, earlier in the day. They had sought to drive up the west slope of the hill, 31 miles southwest of Da Nang, but pulled back after running into strong North Vietnamese fire.

Marine units were in blocking positions hoping to cut off North Vietnamese troops which might try to pull off the hill and escape.

The assault began with waves of air force bombers pounding an estimated 100 steel-reinforced bunkers. Artillery also hammered the positions.

Military spokesmen said the object of the assault is to seize the hill from which North Vietnamese troops have been blocking American efforts since Wednesday to push ahead to the crash site, about 1,000 yards south of the hill.

Among those reported missing aboard the downed helicopter the U.S. forces are trying to reach are a battalion commander, six other army men and Associated Press photographer Oliver Noonan.

U.S. headquarters reported that troops of the 196th Brigade clashed twice Friday with North Vietnamese soldiers near the crash site. At least 22 North Vietnamese and one American soldier were reported killed and 14 Americans wounded.

Military spokesmen say more than 500 North Vietnamese soldiers have been killed since Sunday in the fighting west of Tam Ky.

There is no firm count on American casualties, but field reports put them at 35 to 40 killed, more than 160 wounded and 10 missing, including the seven army men aboard the helicopter downed by North Vietnamese anti-aircraft fire Tuesday.

About 70 miles south of this action, North Vietnamese troops ambushed U.S. Army engineers clearing National Highway 1 of mines. One American was killed and nine wounded.

North Vietnamese losses were not immediately known, headquarters said.

Two sharp fights flared 15 miles apart along the demilitarized zone 200 miles north of Da Nang.

Hearing Aids On Trial

VICTORIA: In the past a great deal of criticism has been leveled against the hearing aid industry. This has been due primarily to high prices, poor service and the fact that a free trial period was practically non-existent. In many cases a person dissatisfied with the hearing aid was unable to obtain either satisfaction or refund.

This situation has now been corrected by a company manufacturing hearing aids in Victoria.

By dealing directly with the manufacturer a saving of fifty per cent is realized on a high quality hearing aid with two weeks free trial, thus eliminating cause for dissatisfaction.

New Cash Flows Into Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market got off to a running start this week and even though it paused to catch its breath at the midway point the early strength it had built up carried it across the finish line with a solid gain.

For the week, the Dow industrial average gained 16.37 to 837.25. The week before it closed down 3.58. It picked up nearly 13 of the points in its first two sessions. The weekly showing was the best for the average since it rose 33.17 in the week ended May 2.

GAINS LEAD LOSSES

Gains also ran up a good lead over losses. Of 1,721 issues traded on the Big Board, 1,061 advanced and 520 declined, compared with 719 advances and 851 declines the week earlier. There were 52 new highs and 149 new lows for the year, compared with 25 new highs and 234 new lows the previous week.

Turnover on the New York Exchange totalled 50,301,030 shares, compared with 44,384,690 the week before.

The market's ability to keep on rolling after its Monday advance attracted new buying.

Some of the institutional cash that had been sitting on the sidelines got back into the action and did some selective buying Tuesday as the market rolled to another gain. The market also drew some encouragement from a report that the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers said he was opposed to wage and price controls.

ENCOURAGED BY NEWS

Also giving some encouragement were remarks by State Secretary William P. Rogers that the United States was prepared to take sensible risks for peace in deciding on new troop withdrawals from Vietnam.

The five most active stocks on the Big Board during the week were:

Natomas, up 5⅝ at 101⅝; Texaco, down ¾ at 32⅞; Brunswick, down ⅝ at 17⅛; Benguet, down ¼ at 22, and General Instrument, down ⅜.

The week's five most active stocks on the American Stock Exchange were: Asamera Oil, up 1⅜ at 26⅞; National General warrants new, up 1 at 9¼; AMK warrants, up 1½ at 8⅝; Macrodyne Chatillon, up 5 at 14⅛, and Telex Corp., up 3½ at 50⅜.

1,000-A-MONTH CUT IN BOEING EMPLOYEES

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. says it expects an average 1,000-employee-per-month reduction in its work force to continue through the remainder of the year, rather than end in September, as it predicted in June.

The forecast was in a company publication Thursday.

A company official said present Boeing employment in the Puget Sound area is about 86,000, compared with 95,600 at the beginning of the year.

He said employment was reduced by 1,750 persons last month.

U.S. Living Costs Continue to Rise

WASHINGTON (WP) — The consumer price index rose 0.5 per cent in July on the basis of higher costs for foods and nation's rapid rate of inflation services, indicating that the nation's rapid rate of inflation has yet to decelerate significantly.

Goods and services which would The index increased to 128.2. have cost $100 in the period from 1957 to 1959 are now priced at $128.20, against $127.60 in June and 121.50 in July, 1968.

The rate of inflation between July 1968 and last month was 5.5 per cent, with two-thirds of the increase coming in 1969. At the present rate, the full increase for 1969 would be 6 per cent.

Although July's advance in the index, was slightly smaller than June's (0.6 per cent), officials cautioned against exaggerating the difference.

"I don't see any significant change in the direction of prices from the data for July," Arnold E. Chase, assistant commissioner of the labor department office of prices and living conditions, said Friday in announcing the figures.

Food prices maintained their rapid advance, rising one per cent during July. The biggest increases came in meat and poultry, up 1.8 per cent from June and 11.9 per cent from July 1968. Vegetable and fruit prices climbed less steeply — 1.1 per cent, slightly under the normal seasonal rate for July — and were at almost the same level they were a year ago.

The only significant national price declines occurred in used cars and gasoline. The gasoline reductions reflected price competition among oil companies and were confined primarily to the west and mid-west.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Investors Continue to Show Caution

By STEPHEN BARNETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

After running themselves ragged, the Canadian stock markets paused to catch their breath in late trading this week as many investors were reported to be doing careful financial soul-searching.

This week saw the finish of a four-day rally which brought the markets out of the June-July slump, and saw the beginning of a consolidation period.

Many analysts say the markets could be in a base-building phase which, if extended, would be able to support higher levels.

They say indications are favorable for more gains, but suggest further consolidation of previous advances is desirable.

However, the markets may have too quickly stopped the consolidation as moderate advances were made in late-week trading. The uptrend now has left most analysts and investors in a quandary as to whether the market can maintain gains on such a shallow base.

One reason for market strength comes from some renewed investor confidence in the North American economy as well as the markets.

SOUNDER JUDGMENT

Investors now appear to be using sounder judgment about buying and selling and, because of tight money and high interest rates, are not jumping in and out of the market as quickly.

The light volume in recent weeks tends to reflect investor caution, with many professional traders taking profits after heavy fluctuations.

Some analysts call this period the calm after the storm, which saw each of the major indexes taking turns in the spotlight while they reacted to their own special situations.

Western oils helped pull the market ahead late last week following news by several companies of good finds, and some favorable reaction in the United States government on the suggestion of removing the quota system on imported oil.

Analysts say that as the market reversed itself into an upward pattern, stocks which are interlisted on both the Canadian and American stock exchanges tended to gain the most strength and drove the oil index up.

Since France's devaluation of the franc and the immediate jump of the gold index by more than 29 points, golds have lost about half their gain as favorable acceptance to the devaluation has been achieved.

Golds have traditionally been a hedge against devaluation, and Canadian gold stocks tend to attract foreign investors during periods of economic uncertainty.

RUMOR SPURS BUYING

Base metals came under heavy buying pressure as the rumor of a copper price rise for Canada continued to circulate. Devaluation of the franc combined with the proposed nationalization of Zambian copper put the domestic price of copper at the lower end of the world structure.

The base metal index sagged in mid-week trading as profit-taking by professional traders seemed to overcome the news of the rising price and world metal shortages, but by the close base metals had regained strength.

The industrial index continued to rise during the markets' rally as it posted solid advances in three of the four sessions of the uptrend.

The industrial index now has climbed to the lower levels of the June-July slump, and some analysts expect selling from investors who bought just before the prolonged slump began.

Falconbridge Nickel and International Nickel both closed higher. Some 3,200 workers of Falconbridge began a strike Thursday which brought nickel production in Ontario to a standstill. The strike is the first in the company's history.

Workers at Inco walked off their jobs July 10, causing a work stoppage of 18,000 employees.

STRIKES DRAW INVESTORS

Analysts usually recommend buying on strike news on the theory that labor settlements often are followed by higher product prices and increased profit margins.

Nickel prices on the free market have risen sharply since the strike at Inco began, and one London dealer said the second strike could be disastrous.

Statistically, on index at Toronto, industrials were up 3.53 to 174.45, base metals 2.40 to 106.30 and western oils 8.23 to 245.33. Golds slipped 9.00 to 181.80.

Volume was 8,875,000 shares compared with 8,215,000 last week. Advances outnumbered declines 413 to 321 with 237 issues unchanged.

Curbs Studied By Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — Control of credit purchase plans, somewhat similar to the strict regulation employed in the United Kingdom, may be recommended this fall by the Commons finance committee.

An influential member of the committee said this week he would press for such a recommendation when the members gather for meetings in October, prior to the resumption of the parliamentary session.

The committee opened an inquiry late in June into high interest rates and, after hearing Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, adjourned the hearings for the summer months. They are not likely to be resumed until October.

Rasminsky, among other things, told the committee that if machinery had been available on a standby basis to control consumer credit spending, it might have been used to good advantage last spring.

He pictured high interest rates as not a cause of inflation but rather a reflection of it.

The United Kingdom has had controls for many years on the minimum down payments required for purchases on credit and limits on the period within which an account has to be paid.

Such controls cannot be exercised by the federal government here in peacetime, because constitutional responsibility for conditional sales contracts rests with the provinces.

Mineral Production Rises

OTTAWA (CP)—Production of 20 of Canada's leading minerals, including copper, nickel, petroleum and natural gas, rose during the first half of this year over the same period last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Friday.

Production of gold, iron ore, and six other minerals was down.

Gold production fell in June to 208,427 troy ounces from 214,473 in June last year, bringing half-year production to 1,271,361 troy ounces compared with 1,366,007 last year.

The value of gold production in June, calculated at the average price paid by the Royal Canadian Mint, was $7,874,524.

Copper production rose to 52,646 tons in June, bringing the half-year total to 316,936 tons compared with 301,168 in six months last year. Nickel production rose to 26,482 tons in June and 144,930 tons in the January-June period, compared with 130,941 tons in six months last year.

Silver production in June came to 3,587,486 troy ounces, slightly higher than in June last year, but six-months production was down to 21,071,717 troy ounces this year, compared with 21,453,854 last year.

LEAD OUTPUT OFF

Refined lead production fell to 15,393 tons in June and to 99,971 tons in six months, from 17,424 in June last year and 106,348 tons in the first half of 1968.

Refined production of zinc rose to 39,530 tons in June from 37,689 last year, and to 232,879 tons in six months this year from 208,883 last year.

Production of other leading minerals for six months this year, with comparable figures for six months last year, was:

Asbestos 679,790 tons, 669,581; cement 3,372,796 tons, 3,437,685; coal 5,512,588 tons, 5,699,024; gypsum 2,746,150 tons, 2,594,842; iron ore 12,930,351 tons, 19,226,315; lime 770,692 tons, 691,574; molybdenum 13,814,615 pounds, 12,968,162; natural gas 979,885,218 thousand cubic feet, 854,033,798; petroleum 513,582,233 barrels, 198,327,855; potash 2,812,494 tons, 2,385,788; uranium 3,612,968 pounds, 3,656,549.

WATERFRONT

SATELLITE CHANNEL

Just over 120 feet of very attractive waterfront on Land's End Road with spectacular views of Cowichan Bay, also Mount Tuam on Salt Spring Island. The beach is especially desirable since it is mainly white sand and fine shell. The nearly one acre of land is well treed with fir, arbutus, dogwood, and Douglas maple. Partial road access already exists, to be extended to the building site, while power and piped water are available on Land's End Road. This combination of very good beach, with ranging views and excellent building location, make this property one of the most attractive in this area.

Wealth Tax Recommended In Britain

LONDON (Reuters) — New guidelines calling for a wealth tax and curbs on foreign investment came this week from Labor government policy experts.

In a 30,000-word report that may furnish ammunition for the general election, expected in the fall of next year, the planners also recommended a workers' charter, a code from company mergers and an idea borrowed from Europe for workers to share in rising assets values through investment pay plans.

Noting the swift growth of United States investment in Britain, the document proposed a mandatory public stake in any new firm brought under foreign control. As a condition of investment, the report suggests, international companies might be required to include government-appointed directors on their boards.

"American investment is rising at such a rate that by 1981 some 20 to 25 per cent of British manufacturing may be supplied by American-controlled companies," the report said.

For the proposed wealth tax, the planners propose a starting floor of £50,000 ($120,000) in total personal wealth, less debts. Tax would start at one per cent rising to five per cent on wealth above £400,000 ($1,040,000.)

Dome Babine

A second, enlarge drilling program for its Dome Mountain gold prospect in the Smithers area is forecast by Dome Babine Mines Ltd., which is expected to have results of the first survey soon.

President W. D. Yorke-Hardy said assays are being correlated after the 2,500-foot drill program covering 35 claims.

The program likely will be continued on an enlarged scale, the company said. Surface survey work also is being done on a copper-silver prospect near Smithers.

Portcomm

Shares of Portcomm Communications Corp. Ltd. were listed this week at Vancouver Stock Exchange, a result of reorganizing Western Beaverlodge Mines Ltd.

The new company has 2 million class A shares authorized, of which 768,918 are issued.

Its main concept is a portable telephone designed to be used anywhere in the world. Financing netting $300,000 was recently completed.

Hart River

A feasibility study of its silver-base metals property northeast of Dawson City, Yukon, will be done for Hart River Mines Ltd., by Kaiser Engineers, of Vancouver.

Full evaluation of exploration and underground development work will be carried out in the four-month period the study is expected to require. It also will include design of a metallurgical process, reports president H. A. Bruhn.

Surface exploration will continue to mid-September freeze-up, after which underground development will continue.

Guaranty

Net profits of Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada increased 13 per cent to $1.5 million in the first six months of 1969 from $1.3 million last year, chairman J. Wilson Berry reports.

Earnings per share were 39 cents vs. 38 cents with 388,890 more shares outstanding than a year ago. Pre-tax profits at $2.6 million were $314,000 higher.

Guaranteed funds comprising demand and term deposits of $563.86 million at June 30 were well above $486.96 million a year ago.

I.T.L.

I.T.L. Industries Ltd. has a $1.5 million expansion program for its Windsor operations. Construction add 20,000 square feet to subsidiary Photometric Specialties Ltd., and erect a three-storey, 12,000 square foot corporate headquarters for the I.T.L. group.

United

The first two prototypes of the JT15D Turbofan engine, to power light jet aircraft of the 1970s, have been delivered by United Aircraft of Canada Ltd.

They will be used by the Fanjet 500 of Cessna Aircraft, whose maiden flight of the twin-engine Fanjet 500 is set for September.

The engines were shipped last week to Wichita from the United Aircraft plant at Longueuil, near Montreal.

Silver Standard

Silver Standard Mines reports a net loss of $135,213 for the fiscal year ended March 31, compared to a $135,322 loss for the corresponding period of 1968.

President R. W. Wilson told the annual meeting total assets for 1969 at March 31 were $1.88 million.

Wilson said it would cost about $2.5 million for exploration and feasibility studies of the company's copper and molybdenum holdings at its Laird property 70 miles north of Stewart. This will take one or two years, he said.

Early Bird

Early Bird Mines Ltd. of Vancouver says it will have its placer gold property in Peru in operation by about Oct. 15.

At capacity, the company expects to process 1,000 cubic yards of gold-bearing gravel daily.

The company also said it will soon start underground development work on another copper, gold and silver prospect it holds in Peru.

San Jacinto

H. Herb Shear, president of San Jacinto Explorations Ltd., reports negotiations are proceeding with a major mining company for proving a group of claims south of Lornex property in the Highland Valley.

The company is engaged in exploring its own property adjoining that of Granby Mining Co. Ltd. at the former Phoenix mine site, and with diamond drilling to map an ore zone at San Jacinto's Deadwood claims.

CAE

CAE Industries Ltd. will supply a $2.8 million Boeing 747 flight simulator to Air India in 1971.

The machine, which can duplicate almost every movement of the actual craft, will be developed and manufactured by CAE's electronics division in Montreal.

Two similar simulators are on order for other airlines.

Suspend Dealings In Pergamon Press

LONDON (Reuters) — The London stock exchange council Friday ordered the suspension of all dealings in the shares of Pergamon Press, a London publishing company headed by Robert Maxwell, a millionaire labor member of Parliament.

The announcement was made a few hours after an American company, Leasco Data Processing, said it had decided not to go ahead with its £25,000,000 ($61,000,000) offer to buy the Pergamon company.

Panarctic Oil Barges Victims of Ice Floes

CALGARY (CP) — Panarctic Oils Ltd. announced Friday that two barges, including one equipped with an alexbow, have been severely damaged while carrying supplies near Bathurst Island.

The tug Irving Birch was not damaged but the dry cargo barge L. A. Learmonth and the fuel barge Johnny Norberg are both expected to be lost.

The company said preliminary reports were sketchy but shifting winds apparently caused ice floes to move unexpectedly, puncturing the sides of the barges.

The cargo, about 30 per cent of the total being transported to the site by sea this year, is mostly covered by insurance.

The barges were destined for Melville Island, where the rigs are located, and were testing the alexbow on the way. They were accompanied by department of transport icebreakers.

The alexbow is a recently developed form of ice breaker that works on a principle similar to that of a snowplow. It pushes under the ice, lifts it up then throws it to the side rather than ride over and crush it beneath like a normal icebreaker.

Credit Remains Tight

OTTAWA (CP) — After taking in another reef in the public money supply last week, the Bank of Canada reported Thursday the credit remained tight and the interest rate high.

Currency in circulation and demand deposits in the chartered banks totaled $8,887,000 on Aug. 13, down $76,000,000 for the week and only $215,000,000 more than a year earlier.

The bank's regular statistical bulletin said personal savings deposits and non-personal term and notice deposits in the chartered banks totalled $18,758,000,000 on the same date, down $11,000,000 for the week but up $1,318,000,000 for the year.

These less-readily available funds brought the total money supply to $27,645,000,000, down $87,000,000 for the week but up $1,533,000,000 for the year.

Holders of Canada Savings Bonds redeemed $29,000,000 worth for cash this week, net of new purchases, leaving the amount of all issues still outstanding at $5,731,000,000, up $89,000,000 from a year ago.

The Bank of Canada's average of yields on seven government bonds at market prices prevailing this week was 7.5 per cent, compared with 7.49 last week and 7.5 two weeks ago.

CN Plans Cargo-Flo Terminals

TORONTO (CP) — Large- and small-scale producers will be introduced to what the CNR calls a more economical and efficient means of transporting goods to market here next month.

CNR's first full-scale Cargo-Flo terminal, the start of a planned cross-Canada chain of transfer depots, opens Sept. 16.

By combining low cost railway transportation with a flexible highway delivery system, CN hopes to encourage smaller industries to penetrate high population areas with large shipments.

The terminals will be used as transfer points for bulk commodities hauled from production point by rail, put into tank trucks and carried by road to local destinations.

TWO PLANS

The railway will offer two plans.

The first provides transportation from production point to the user and the second transportation from plant to the terminal. The latter is primarily for customers who own and operate their own trucks.

"With Cargo-Flo, shippers can reduce transportation costs by up to 30 per cent and that applies to the small industry seeking new markets as well as the giant producers shipping to several small consumers," S. S. Wier, CN's regional sales manager said.

Advantages to the shipper will be the elimination of expensive packaging and reduced loading and handling costs. In addition the terminal will provide a flexible distribution outlet to new market areas.

Advantages to the receiver will be reduced handling charges and a lower risk of breakage, theft or damage.

Time Only Solution To West Grain Glut

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's record wheat surplus threatens to get worse before it improves, unless export shipments perk up much more than expected.

Time seems the most practical solution to a serious economic problem with social and political implications.

No easy alternatives are visible, say Ottawa sources.

The Canadian wheat board, selling agent for Prairie-grown wheat, oats and barley, has a record backlog of 848,284,000 bushels of wheat as of July 31.

Commercial storage facilities are bulging. So 372,200,000 bushels of this unprecedented carryover are still stored on farms. Another 500,000,000 bushels at least is being harvested now in the new crop.

Officials in the trade department's grains division, to which the wheat board reports, say the wheat will be put into safe storage somehow.

Ten years ago, before Soviet and Chinese demand drove Canadian exports to a record annual peak of 594,500,000 bushels in 1963-64, Canada's storage system held wheat 10 years old.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson says no thought has been given to federal aid for expanded storage facilities, although farmer purchases of additional space are reported brisk.

The problem of selling the wheat remains, even if storage has yet to emerge as a problem.

EXPORTS DOWN

Exports fell to 336,000,000 bushels in 1967-68, will be lower than that for the year ended last July 31 and probably will be still lower in this new year.

"The question without any satisfactory short-term answer is how to get by when the world grain glut has plugged many export outlets.

Grain officials say Canada lacks the resources for a cut-throat competitive wheat export war. United States farmers can stand firesale international prices because of the government subsidies they collect.

What about diverting Prairie output to feed grains, livestock or oil seeds?

David Kirk, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture sees some hope in feed-grain production. In an interview Friday, he said the world feed-grain market is expanding, but farmers would still need federal assistance to meet U.S. price competition.

Grain officials report sizeable stocks of oats and barley now and say most expansion in the feed grain market will be in corn and sorghums.

Officials say a switch to beef would be a slow and difficult process, despite the attraction of current high beef prices.

Mr. Kirk estimates a newcomer would need to invest $60,000 and would receive no returns for three years.

BEEF MAY IMPROVE

An agriculture department spokesman forecast a gradual and limited increase in the beef industry, but said the change-over would be expensive. And it would not be profitable to devote high-priced wheat land to cattle.

Improvement in marketing oi seeds such as rapeseed is seen by grain officials. But only a small part of surplus acreage could be diverted to this at the present limited demand.

Rapeseed also faces a storage pinch, with a crop of 35,000,000 bushels being harvested from 2,000,000 Prairie acres and commercial storage full.

The picture therefore emerges of almost as many problems as benefits arising from diversified farm output in the wheat belt.

The danger always exists that farmers, after costly adjustment assistance, would end up with insufficient markets for their new product, officials say.

Another possible solution would be to take land out of production. The agriculture study group reporting last May estimated that even by 1980 only 20,000,000 acres would be needed to produce the wheat that could be sold.

At present the Prairies has 29,570,000 acres planted in wheat. It is doubtful, however, whether any government would accept the social, economic and financial cost of taking so many acres out of production.

There are possibilities mentioned for improvement in wheat sales, primarily if other countries have crop failures.

STIFFER FINES URGED BY DAVIS

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP)—Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said here Canada will have to increase the maximum penalty for foreign fishboats which violate Canada's 12-mile fishing limit.

"We'll have to make the penalty much stiffer for a second or third offence," he said at commissioning ceremonies for the Canadian naval acoustic research vessel, Quest.

Stores Target of One Gang?

Thieves broke into six stores in Greater Victoria late this week and stole more than $300 in cash and goods.

City police believe the break-ins and thefts were committed by the same gang which broke into four stores on Fort Street earlier in the week by removing skylights on the roofs of the buildings.

In Oak Bay, $75 was stolen from Morgan's Grocery, 1175 Newport, and some cartons of cigarettes from Henderson's Food Market, 2253 Oak Bay Avenue.

Oak Bay Avenue Lockers was also broken into, but it is not yet known if anything was stolen.

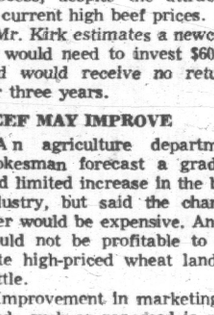

In Saanich, Raynor's Grocery, Blenkinsop Road, was broken into and $160 in cash stolen, but nothing was taken from Seven Oaks Grocery on Carey Road.

About $100 was stolen from Swain's Grocery, 422 Craigflower Road.

No Closure Yet For Saturna School

Saturna Island free school's Aug. 1 "clean-up or close" deadline from the Metropolitan Board of Health has passed with no further word from the board, director Tom Durrie said today.

The free school appealed the health board ultimatum to the county court in the middle of June and applied for an extension on the deadline to September.

"I think our appeal has definitely been accepted," said Durrie.

"We've had no communication at all with any department since June. Our lawyer has been in consultation with the attorney general's office and as I understand from him no decisions have been made."

One of the main points in the school's appeal concerned the Board of Health ruling that sleeping accommodation at the free school is overcrowded.

The space allotted to each bed is in fact, somewhat in excess of health rules set down for boarding houses, said Durrie.

He referred to "elaborate structure changes" made in the kitchen and one bathroom in the last month and continuing progress on the school's sewage system.

"It looks as if we may have our sewage system completed by September," he said.

The system has been slow in completion because of problems with the standard of gravel available on Saturna Island.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, AUGUST 23, 1969 —PAGE 13

To Roger Foley: Skydiving Cup of Tea

Skydiving: It Awes the Trash-Filled Mind

By ED GOULD

"Don't let your mind wander and allow it to dwell on inconsequential things, like your parachute not opening, or you'll end up a quivering jellyfish in the back of the plane by the time you're ready to jump."

Roger Foley was speaking to six students and one reporter at a classroom demonstration of parachute jumping.

The reporter, who was considering taking the course, was suffering airsickness at the thought of hurling himself out the open side of an airplane.

"Just remember, it only takes about 10 minutes to get from the ground to 2,200 feet so put all your mental effort into remaining positive. Concentrate and don't let any trash creep into your mind."

The reporter tried to stop the raw, naked, unreasoning fear that was creeping into his trash-filled mind.

"Now that you've attained this mental attitude, I can do nothing more for you. The rest is up to you and the equipment."

Foley, who recently broke his right ankle while trying for the world's record in parachute jumps in one day, is a firm believer in the old adage that you can't keep a good man down.

"Especially when he has to get up to make a livng," he said.

Although he cannot jump yet and is not able to pilot his Cessna 180, Foley is continuing classroom sessions at a hall on Quadra and accompanies his students to Duncan airport for their moment of truth.

While the reporter with the trashy mind tried to get rid of his quivering jellyfish, Foley directed the rest of the students into the next step: a classroom free fall into space.

He held his arms out to demonstrate how the body should fall from the airplane.

"Just as an airplane is controlled by air passing over its surfaces, so your body can be guided by the same rules of aerodynamics."

He spoke of full turns, 180-degrees turns, 45-degree turns, cross-country motions, loops and rolls. The newsman was no longer airsick. He was seasick.

The class rose as one to take part in the exercises. Body bends, back bends, arm bends.

"Stomach out, head back," Foley said.

The overweight reporter who had risen with the class found for once his protruding waist-line was in fashion. He could tell people he was practising his free falls.

"Countdown to the moment you open your parachute is important," Foley said. "People are often misled by the length of time they have actually been floating through the air.

"Some misjudge and pull their ripcord too soon; others think it is not time at all and find themselves looking tinto frightened upturned faces."

That frightened upturned face belonged to the reporter.

"Get up off the floor," Foley said.

"There are no telephone poles to whiz by like on the ground to let you have a rough idea of how fast you are going. Count 1,000, 2,000, 3,000, 4,000, 5,000—pull."

The reporter wanted to know what if your parachute still hadn't opened when you finished counting to 5,000.

"You do not count to 5,000," Foley said, sitting down and trying to shut out the memory of it all.

"You count to five, but you say 1,000, 2,000, and so on. If you count to 5,000 you have reached China the hard way. Through a hole in the earth."

Foley stood up and patted an auxiliary chute in the bundle he had packed around one of the shapelier female students.

"If, after waiting a decent length of time, you see nothing flapping around above you, don't wait, open this reserve chute."

Especially if you see chickens running towards you yelling: "The sky is falling, the sky is falling."

"Some people don't wait long enough before they open that second chute and end up coming down with two chutes."

Silly, silly. On the other hand, the reporter thought he'd rather look silly with two chutes flapping than with no chutes flapping.

"Mistakes rarely happen, that's why parachute jumping is the safest aerial sport and much safer than skiing or many other land sports," Foley said.

"Besides, you are not going to be asked to jump until you feel you are ready for it."

The reporter felt a warm glow of confidence. He knew he would never be really ready. Never. But he was interested in why the other students, who looked remarkably sane in other respects, wanted to throw themselves into space.

The students, all from Victoria, gave these reasons:

Vic Wood: "I have always been interested in aircraft and skydiving. This was my first opportunity to take a class and here I am."

Rick Nicholson: "I have never been in the air before. Not even in a plane. This will be a double thrill for me."

Martha Sutherland: "A girlfriend of mine does it. It seemed like a good idea. If she can to it, why can't I?"

Henry Skriety: "I fly with the Victoria Flying Club. You never know when knowing how to jump properly might come in handy."

Mrs. Ferne Downey: "My son Gary dives. I'm getting old so it's almost too late for me to do anything as exciting."

Jim Bartlett: "I have a couple of friends who took this course. There's a certain element of danger but that doesn't appeal to me. It's the floating sensation. It's also the least expensive air sport."

"This is a sport anyone can enjoy," Foley said. The age limit at the low end of the sky is 17 but the sky's the limit at the other.

The reporter decided to take a few more lessons to get his mental attitude just right. To get in the mood he went straight home, turned the thermostat up to 90, assumed the fetal position and pulled a typewriter cover over his head.

Old Saanichton Fair Fares Far From Foul

B.C. fairs fare foul, except Saanichton Fair, which fares fair. In fact, better than fair. It thrives.

While the number of country fair in B.C., boasts slowly, the Saanichton Fair levels on. It's the biggest fountry fair in B.C., boasts president Bud Michell, and the oldest continuous one in Canada west of Halifax.

When it swings into action next Saturday it will be for the 101st time — livelier than ever, and with more features and entertainment than it's ever had in its more-than-a-century of existence, Michell predicts.

Creativity of all kinds will find an outlet in competitions at the fair. Home cooking, sewing and knitting, flowers and art are just a few of the areas of competition.

Applications will be acceptable as late as Monday afternoon for most classes of competition for the fair, and it looks like it's going to be a bumper year for just about everything, Michell said.

With Nanaimo and Luxton fairs closed up for good, interest is bound to be greater all over the Island in the Saanichton Fair, the organizers reason.

Determined to be prepared, they've anticipated even larger crowds than last year's 100th anniversary fair drew.

The parking-lot problem will be solved by a free bus shuttle service from a parking lot at East Saanich Road and Mount Newton Cross Road, about a quarter-mile from the fair grounds. Parking at the lot will be free, but parking at the fairgrounds will cost 25 cents.

Midway rides, pony rides and a host of small active animals will provide an attraction for small children at the fair. Food will be available at breakfast, lunch, tea and dinner time all three days, in the newly-built dining room in the basement of the main hall.

A popular feature of the fair is the auction of livestock at 5 p.m. Monday, Aug. 1. Steers and lambs, and some piglets, are the principal animals to be auctioned.

A purse of $400 will be put up for cutting horse competitions which will run Saturday and Sunday with entries from as far away as Edmonton, Washington and Oregon.

Sunday afternoon patrons of the fair will have their ears tickled by music for all ages by the 55-piece Delta Municipal Band, starting at 2 p.m.

VICTORIA GIRL DASHES TO GAMES GOLD MEDAL

A pretty 17-year-old Victoria girl ran the fastest 200 metres of her life Friday afternoon to defeat two Olympic veterans and win a gold medal at the Canada Summer Games in Halifax.

Anne Langdale, a graduate of Mt. Douglas High School this year, pulled off a spectacular upset of 28-year-old Irene Piotrowski, the reigning Canadian champion at the distance, and second fastest woman in world history over the hundred.

The same afternoon, Penny May, a curvaceous blonde, 19-year-old classmate of Miss Langdale, won a silver medal in the 100-metre hurdles and a bronze in the women's pentathlon.

See story, Page 14, for further details.

Advance Poll Tally Increases Slightly

Victoria advance polling figures continued just slightly higher than the average for previous years in the Victoria area ridings.

In Victoria, advance polling on Thursday, the first day, reached about 400, and Friday's votes brought the total to about 850.

With advance polls open until 9 p.m. tonight, the total in Victoria is expected to top the figures from the 1966 provincial election of about 1,000 in three days.

Advance poll for the four Greater Victoria ridings is at 930 North Park Street.

Oak Bay's figures showed a total of about 600 advance polls for the first two days of voting, compared to 600 votes for the first day alone in the 1968 Oak Bay by-election.

In Esquimalt, 165 votes were cast Thursday compared to 153 for the whole three days of polling in the 1966 election. Fugures for Friday were unavailable at press time.

About 100 voters cast ballots in Saanich and the Islands advance polling station in Sidney, at the Anglican Church Hall, on 4th Street.

No Start For Lecture

Youth conferences shouldn't start before noon.

The Victoria Youth Council organizers of the first Vancouver Island Youth Conference found out the hard way today.

Clearly printed in the conference schedule was the information: Saturday, 10 a.m., YMCA, keynote speaker to be announced.

By 10:10 a.m. the speaker, Dick Martin, a lecturer in the philosophy department at the University of Victoria and six young people had arrived.

Martin, it seemed, was to speak on "society as an organism" as soon as enough people had arrived.

"Everyone must have slept in," apologized Victoria Youth Council worker at 10:30. Three more had joined the small audience.

Sometime between 10:30 and 11 a.m. the keynote speaker slipped away, unnoticed.

Pensioners Wary Of Promises

Peter Peterson, a 66-year-old Victoria pensioner, believes New Democratic Party Leader Tom Berger will make good his promise to give Victoria's pensioners free bus transportation.

A "CCF supporter from way back," he also believes in the NDP and the efficacy of politicking.

He was the only one of a number of pensioners interviewed in Centennial Square this morning who wasn't skeptical about the whole campaign-promises routine.

"I'm getting about $107 a month and that's not enough. I have to take odd jobs sometimes to fill that out.

"I'm just not satisfied with the present government."

EAGERLY AWAITING

He's predicting and eagerly awaiting an NDP win and he said: "I think a lot of young fellas feel the same way as I do this time."

A 75-year-old man who has watched the election "with some interest" said Berger's promise is just another example of the "promise-them-anything" brand of politics.

"The government's doing all right," he said, but indicated distaste for the fuss which surrounds campaigning. He said he's been a Social Credit supporter since the party started in Alberta.

Two elderly women with curly silver hair and lined faces who are visiting from Vancouver said they are annoyed that Premier Bennett is blamed for everything.

As for Berger's party: "If the NDP can give us free bus rides all the more power to them," said one.

Both doubted this would ever happen.

ON RIGHT TRACK

"Besides we have good privileges here and good roads and the government is doing well. What we need the most is a good opposition to keep them on the right track."

They'd been following the election they said but, "not as much as we used to."

One 84-year-old man reacted energetically to Berger's promise of free transportation.

"What!" he exclaimed, gesturing with his cane," Is someone giving us an extra 60 cents a month. We won't know what to do with it."

His 73-year-old friend laughed.

"We're both NDP supporters," he said. "We're rabid socialists from way back."

Worried Chamber Issues Call to Vote

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce is urging its members not to be complacent about their vote.

People in Manitoba were complacent, especially those who supported the Conservatives, and the New Democratic Party swept into power, President Clare Copeland said today.

"We can't be partisan, but we can be concerned," he said. The Chamber of Commerce charter does not allow them to favor any political party.

DEPTH REQUIRED

Copeland said a memo made to all chamber members Friday does not attack any particular party when it says British Columbia is "a multi-billion-dollar organization which demands a depth of administrative competence."

It doesn't matter which party wins the election, he said, as long as they have the business skill to run the province.

"A business should be run by people who are experienced. We're concerned about handing over a business to people who aren't responsible enough to run it."

MIDDLE GROUP

It's important that the middle group of people, those who are too busy to take an active interest in politics, got out and vote, he said.

These people "are enjoying the fruits of the economy," and expect it will continue.

In Manitoba, before the NDP won the provincial election, "everyone thought things would continue. But they didn't. They were shocked."

The Chamber's legislative chairman, Dave Fraser, who wrote the memo, termed this "a most important and critical election."

'COMMON SENSE'

He said "we in the chamber should encourage all to vote according to our dictates and common sense." Most of all, they should "get out and vote."

"People should consider the impact and consequences of their vote this time," Fraser said, noting that many "impractical statements" had been made by candidates of all three parties.

He urged all election promises be viewed in perspective and it would be seen that some are incompatible with what can be done.

Alaskan Governor To Speak

The Alaskan view of Pacific Northwest trade, tourist and transportation development will be presented here next month at the 1969 convention of Pacific Northwest Trade Association.

Governor Keith Miller will be one of five featured speakers that include former attorney-general of B.C. Robert Bonner, now executive vice-president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.

Keynote speaker will be William Lane, publisher of Sunset Magazine, while John D. Gray, president of Omark Industries, Portland, Ore., will talk on trade, and H. A. Carter, assistant to the vice-president of Boeing Company's commercial airplane division, will deal with transportation.

Official theme of the conference, expected to be attended by 300 delegates at the Empress Hotel, is Tourism, Transportation and Trade — Everybody's Business.

Cars, Garage Wrecked; Driver Fined

Pleading guilty to impaired driving, Reggie S. Mushansky, CFB Esquimalt, was fined $400 in provincial court today. He was also prohibited from driving for an indefinite period.

"Do you realize you are lucky to be alive," Judge William Ostler told the accused.

Mushansky lost control of his car and caused damages totalling $5,000 to two cars and a carport.

He was driving south in the 400 block Beach Drive when he mounted the curb, sideswiped a car on the left side of the road, smashed into a carport at 488 Beach Drive, knocking down the roof pillars, and wrecking the car inside.

Mushansky suffered cuts to his face and neck.

"You came close to entering the house," Judge Ostler said. "You were extremely lucky."

Area Candidates Planning Final Pre-Election Push

Area candidates in Wednesday's election are tapering off meetings and appearances, but most will make at least one more showing before voting day.

Biggest shows will be the Liberal Party's Central Park salmon barbecue for party leader Pat McGeer Sunday, beginning at 5 p.m. and the New Democratic Party's rally, Sunday at 8 p.m. in Oak Bay Junior High.

Besides NDP Leader Tom Berger, rally speakers will include former leader Robert Strachan and welfare critic Dave Barrett. All area NDP candidates will make appearances.

ALL COMERS

National NDP leader T. C. Douglas will assist Victoria candidates Peter Bunn and Phil Fawcett and Oak Bay candidate Jack McKenzie Monday. The group will visit Kiwanis Village, where they will have tea and discuss voting and polling station problems with village dwellers.

Douglas will take on all comers in Centennial Square Monday noon and at 7:30 p.m. he will talk to campaign workers at Victoria constituency headquarters at 1018 Blanshard.

Victoria NDP candidates Bunn and Fawcett will address a meeting of the Gyro Club Monday at 2:10 p.m. in the Empress.

NDP candidate for Esquimalt James Gorst will attend a coffee party at the home of Tom Money, 5577 Medberry Close, Sunday at 2 p.m.

Saanich and the Islands candidate for the NDP Don Johannessen will attend a coffee party tonight at the home of A. E. Richardson, 1950 Hovey Road.

All candidates for Saanich and the Islands are expected to appear at a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the Sidney Hotel, sponsored by the Sidney Chamber of Commerce.

Liberal party candidates for the Victoria ridings will attend the free salmon barbeque at Central Park.

GRASSROOTS TOUR

Victoria Liberal candidates Ian Stewart and Mel Couvelier will attend a coffee party Monday evening at the Colonial Inn on Government Street. They were to make a grassroots tour of Royal Athletic Park during the Mounties baseball game this afternoon.

Fred Phillips, Esquimalt Liberal candidate, will meet 12 Sooke residents Monday night to discuss water and fire hazard problems.

Allan Cox, Oak Bay Liberal candidate, will attend an informal neighborhood meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in St. George's Church Hall.

Victoria Social Credit candidates Waldo Skillings and William N. Chant planned short addresses at a youth rally at Kinsmen Park today at 2:30 p.m. A car caravan to suburban shopping centres will be followed by a youth rally and dance at youth headquarters at 900 Fort tonight.

Other Socred candidates, Dr. G. Scott Wallace of Oak Bay and Herb Bruch of Esquimalt will attend no more public meetings before the election, confining themselves to personal canvassing.

Reg. Pring, Victoria Socred campaign manager, said he did not know Premier Bennett's plans for the next few days but did not expect the premier to visit Victoria.

Arthur Mayse . . .

GO NORTH, GO SOUTH, go practically anywhere in Greater Victoria these fair blue days, and you will come on an all too familiar scene. Its components are a mound of earth, a gaping hole, a slalom course marked by red cones, and a hard-hatted toiler with circular paddle in hand. One side reads 'Stop', and I've heard a rumor that 'Go' is lettered on the other.

Since spring, the municipalities have been picking up their streets and laying them down again, and if you are lucky enough to miss Little Thermopylae in Saanich, they'll trap you in Oak Bay.

It's summer-time, when the blacktoppin's easy, and the driver without a gravel peck or tar stain on his chariot is as rare as a provincial Conservative candidate.

Since much of the digging and filling will lead to smoother-flowing traffic, patience is the watchword.

Only, once in a while, as I wait patiently for my turn to run red-cone narrows, I spare a thought for the Roman road-builders of old . . . and I don't mean Philipus Gaglardius, either.

No blacktop for Caesar's road crews. They built with stone, and they built 'em to last until Doomsday!

A SCOUT IN THE SEETHing heart of our city tells me that a strange bird-call has been creating mystery and even suspicion down around Douglas and Johnson.

The sound, says he, seems to come from everywhere and nowhere. He insists that it is the mating cry of the travelling crane, but adds that it could be mistaken for a brisk, appreciative wolf whistle.

"I'm not a girl-watcher," our informant goes on, "but I like to keep track of what's passing. When that whistle cuts loose, I see them give the least little start, and maybe turn their heads after a few steps . . . You know the way they do."

He then enlarged his possibly exaggerated account by saying one party had enquired about the whistle at City Hall, and been told it might be the cry of the wuffle-bird.

"Well, I asked him, what makes it?"

"The crane," he said. "The one working on the new bank. I never heard a signal like that before."

I dropped down to confirm, and can report that sure enough a yellow crane is perched a fair hike above street level on the bank-building.

But, though any number of well-shaped stems passed by, it didn't once whistle.

NO RENTAL OFFERS FOR the woman who must find another place for herself and her three children by the end of the month; but a call from hard-working Saanich Alderman Mrs. Edith Gunning.

When the mother in question mentioned "low income rental," the alderman explained, she was referring to the Housing Registry. This service is located at Spencer House, and has been operated since last Dec. 1 by a staff of two men who came out of retirement to take on a very hard job indeed.

This is to find quarters for just such people in trouble as Mrs. X if they can.

It's frustrating work, and a score to date of one applicant placed from each five applications underscores a national distress story. Too many old houses being torn down to make room for apartments, and ever fewer roofs for low income renters.

The situation is rotten bad now, and getting worse.

Coming up for the victims, one hell of a winter.

Bill WALKER

The other day when the telephone rang in the press room at Uplands Golf Club, the man on the other end of the line said: "Can you tell me how Bill Wakeham is doing?"

"Rather nicely," was the answer, "he's five under at 12 and five strokes up on Bob Cox."

"Cripes. He should shoot a 61," the caller said. "I'm on my way."

Bill didn't shoot a 61 that day, but he shot a 66, which is four under par and he won his second straight B.C. Open golf tournament, which is more to the point.

And he won it by defeating the same Bob Cox who a week earlier had won the CPGA crown in Vancouver, and who held a three-stroke edge at the outset of the day's play.

"Yes, I thought, too, I might have a shot at a 61," Wakeham said afterwards. "I had the tough holes behind me and birdie alley in front. Then I missed a tiddler (it was about two feet) for a birdie on 13, took a bogey six on 14, and all hope was gone."

But now where, with almost a year on golf's golden trail behind him, plus a victory in the Northern Ontario Open, and a berth in the Canadian tour championship ahead?

Where indeed, but back to work, to the work he likes best, and the work in which he feels he can make a place for himself, the same professional golf trail.

"I definitely feel I'm playing well enough to have a run at it," Bill said, "and next month I start again at the Michigan Classic in Detroit."

After that will come the Canadian Professional tour championship in Quebec which is restricted to the top 12 on tour and has a pot of $15,000.

Then it's home for a short holiday, with practice, and off to California for three tournaments which more or less wind up the U.S. circuit for the season. "And then maybe Hawaii," he added, "if all goes well."

But what about the U.S. tour, the qualifying and requalifying bit, the pressure of each week, is it that tough, does it turn you inside out?

Bill was philosophical and forthright.

"I suppose it could get to you," he said. "But to me it's simply a matter of playing well, playing well enough to make the cut, and then you're in."

The qualifying works this way. Once you have your playing card you must qualify on Monday for that weeks' event, unless of course you are previously qualified. Qualifying on Monday means in essence finishing in the top 25 to 45 or thereabouts out of about 250 players, depending on the number of places open. Then you must make the 36-hole cut in the tournament in order to qualify for the next event. If you don't it's back to the drawing board on Monday, all over again.

But as Bill puts it:

"If you can get in, can make that cut, you make that money, and you don't have to go to work on Monday.

'I think this is where you can get to play better," he suggested.

But what does it take to win, or come close consistently, which is what you must do?

'Driving and putting," not necessarily in that order. "Putting," said Bill, "is probably the most important."

It has been said you're not long enough off the tee to compete with the power hitters.

"I'll admit I'm not that long," Bill replied, "but I feel that I'm straight enough off to the tee to offset any loss of length and I wasn't that far behind Cox here, and he is one of the long hitters in Canada. And as long as I'm straight, I'm really not losing anything.

"And also, you have to not let them (the power hitters) bother you. I think that helps," he added.

"And really the matter of being there or not being there at the finish is just one or two shots a round. They can make such a vital difference."

Bill cited Orville Moody as a case in point. "He was the same as the rest of us a year ago. We all thought we had the potential, trying to qualify each week, or missing the cut, and being disappointed. Suddenly Moody makes it, and wins it all, the U.S. Open."

Bill continued:

"The crowds? No they don't bother me. As a matter of fact I believe I play better. I seem to enjoy the challenge. I concentrate more, I want to play better, to hit the ball a little longer, to keep it straight, not to waste a shot. Yes, I honestly believe it helps my game."

"And more important, it gives me confidence."

And that to Bill is probably the key that could open the door to better things.

"I really can't say," he summarized, "if I am playing that much better now than I was before, but I know I am playing with that much more confidence. And this, to me, is all important. Because if you haven't got that confidence, those putts aren't going to drop, and if they don't drop, you're back on that first tee on Monday."

The potential he spoke of is there for Bill to fall back on.

He started as a junior at Uplands at age 13, won the Canadian junior in 1957 when he was 16, won the Island Open in 1959 and 1963, was Canadian Amateur medallist in 1961, played on the world team in 1962, the Americas Cup and Commonwealth teams in 1963, won the B.C. Amateur in 1962 and 1963, the Canadian bursary tournament at Calgary in 1965, his first year as a pro, has grabbed off a 28th place in the Azalea Open and this year was 30th in the Canadian Open, besides his most recent accomplishments.

So there it is, the golden road to a big payoff.

Driving, putting, and make the cut.

Make the cut,

Make the cut,

And you make money.

This is what Victoria's touring pro, Bill Wakeham, 28, is all about.

ANNE LANGDALE . . . upsets sprint queen

Anne and Penny Collect Medals in Right Colors

Victoria Athletes Sparkle In Track Events at Games

HALIFAX—Gold, silver, bronze—they may not make a rainbow, but for track athletes they are the only colors that count.

A pair of winsome Victoria lassies couldn't be resisted Friday as they ranged through the whole spectrum of colors in track and field competition at the Canada Summer Games.

It all added up to a gold for Anne Langdale in the 200-metre dash, and a silver and bronze for Penny May in the 100-metre hurdles and the pentathlon.

The two girls, co-captains of Mount Douglas High Schools' city, Island and provincial championship team, netted the first individual medals for Victoria at the games.

Jill Boyd ,a player at Norfolk House, and Sue Moilliet of Oak Bay both had earlier claimed gold medals in the B.C. women's field hockey team's tournament win.

Miss Langdale, a 17-year-old sprint sensation, flashed through her 200 metres in a personal best of 24.1 seconds to defeat Canadian record holder and Olympic veteran Irene Piotrowski of Vancouver. Another Olympic veteran, Joan Hendry of St. Laurent, Quebec, was third.

It was a satisfactory day for Miss Langdale, who finished a disappointing fourth in the 400-metre run the day before.

The 24.1 clocking indicates Miss Langdale is the girl to beat at the Canadian track and field championships in Victoria Aug. 30-31.

PENNY MAY
. . . two medals

Wendy Recovered After Stumbling

Miss May, a slim, blonde 19-year-old, had a disappointment in the 100-metre hurdles when she lost narrowly to Wendy Taylor of Vancouver, who has been running with an injury for several months.

The injury forced Miss May's arch rival to switch her lead-off foot in the event, and Friday when the 18-year-old had trouble with her new style and stumbled on the eighth hurdle it looked like she had lost.

But she recovered in time to squeak Miss May at the wire.

While it was a disappointing loss for the Victoria runner, it was extremely impressive in that she was simultaneously competing in the gruelling pantathlon, where she won her bronze. The 100-metre hurdles is also a pentathon event.

THREE RECORDS

Joan Pavelich of Vancouver was the other B.C. athlete to pick up a gold medal when she heaved the shot 44 feet seven and three-quarter inches.

Meanwhile, the war on records turned into a light skirmish at the games, with track and field athletes writing a meagre three in the Nova Scotia books.

Provincial open records fell in the men's hammer throw, women's 100-metre hurdles and men's long jump, but it was a long day for those waiting for Canadian records to tumble.

Today, finals take place in the men's 20,000-metre walk, pole vault, 800 metres, 5,000 metres, shot putt, discuss as well as in the 100-metre, long jump and high jump segments of the decathlon.

In women's competition, medals will be awarded for javelin and 800 metres.

The Ontario team continued to hold the balance of power Friday, striking gold in four of the nine medal events—men's long jump, 3,000-metre steeplechase, 110-metre hurdles and 200-metres.

SETS HAMMER MARK

Mike Cairns of Calgary threw the hammer 179 feet, three inches to win and set a Nova Scotia record in that event.

It was far off the mark of 205 feet he threw earlier this year and which awaits ratification as a Canadian native record. Cairns groped for words to explain the lacklustre performance.

"It has been a fairly good year up to now. Actually this is my worst meet so far. But this is a difficult, precise sport and when your form is off it's really off. I should have worked harder."

TAKES LONG JUMP

Mike Mason of Toronto won the men's long jump with 24 feet, two inches that was good enough for the third Nova Scotia record.

Tony Powell of Dundas, Ont., sped to a 21.4-second victory in the men's 200-metre sprint for his second gold medal. He won the 400-metre event in 47.5 Thursday.

Other Ontario track and field goals were collected Friday by Grant McLaren of Guelph, who won the steeplechase by a wide margin in 9:04.6; and George Neeland of Thornhill in the 110-metre hurdles in 14.3 seconds.

LACROSSE JUST ISN'T THEIR GAME

HALIFAX (CQ)—New Brunswick doesn't claim to be the birthplace of Canada's national sports—lacrosse—but the eastern province must rate as the game's most avid embassador.

In its three Canada Games starts to date, all against western clubs, the combined score reads: New Brunswick 7, opposition 119.

The latest assault was a 40-0 trouncing Friday night by British Columbia. This followed earlier 43-3 setback to Alberta and a 36-4 score against Manitoba.

Seventh Spot For Canucks

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (CP) —Williamsport, Pa., captured fifth place and Valleyfield, Que., took seventh in the Little League World Series Friday in a pair of consolation division game victories.

Williamsport scored two runs in the last of the third and hung on a 2-1 victory over Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, Valleyfield topped Wiesbaden, Germany, 3-1.

Pierre Rochefort, who was also the winning pitcher, socked a two-run homer for Canada.

Americans Lead

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The U.S. Walker Cup team, spurred by two remarkable comebacks by amateur champion Bruce Fleisher, took a 7-3 lead over their British rivals Friday in the first day of the 22nd international golf match.

Roughies Roll On Home Field

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders, undefeated at home since Oct. 22, 1967, in regular-season play, kept their record intact Friday night with a 24-9 win over Edmonton Eskimos in a Western Football Conference game before 17,055 fans.

The victory, Saskatchewan's fourth in succession this season, extended the Roughriders' first-place margin to four points over Calgary Stampeders.

The Stampeders were the last team to beat the Roughriders in Taylor Field, 19-11. Since then the Roughriders have won 12 straight.

"It took us awhile to get going, particularly in the second half," Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys said in the dressing room. "Our defence came up strong again, and we put good pressure on their passer.

"Our deep backs played tougher than they have in any other game. They intercepted a couple of passes, and must have dropped three others."

Trailing 2-0 after halftime, the Roughriders erupted for 14 points in the third quarter and added 10 in the final 15 minutes for their second win of the year over the Eskimos. The Roughriders won 21-20 Aug. 11 in Edmonton.

TWO TD PASSES

Friday, quarterback Ron Lancaster threw touchdown passes to Al Ford and Hugh Campbell and ran 48 yards himself for another touchdown. Jack Abendschan kicked a 29-yard field goal and three converts.

Charlie Fulton, who took over at quarterback from Corey Colehour late in the game, engineered the lone Edmonton touchdown. The Eskimos marched 85 yards in eight plays, ending with a short pass from Fulton to Thermus Butler in the end zone at 13:57 of the fourth quarter.

Dave Cutler, who got two points on wide field goal tries in the first half, kicked the Edmonton convert.

"They came at us pretty good in the second half," said Edmonton coach Neill Armstrong.

"We checked their inside running pretty well but when they started (George) Reed going wide, we didn't seem able to adjust . . . and then there was Lancaster.

'We knew he was an excellent quarterback and we knew that he is most dangerous when he scrambles. Tonight he was exceptionally sharp."

COMPLETES 11 PASSES

Lancaster completed 11 of 16 passes for 165 yards, including his last seven in succession. Top pass-receiver for the Roughriders was Bobby Thompson with 62 yards on three catches.

Colehour completed 16 of 28 passes and Fulton four of six. The Eskimos had 200 yards passing and 111 yards rushing for a net offence of 304, compared with Saskatchewan's 444.

Toronto Girls Nip Eldorados

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Joane Moore gave up only one hit as Fort Erie Atwoods whipped St. John's, Nfld., 19-0 in opening competition of the senior ladies' softball tournament Friday night before 2,000 fans.

In the only other game Toronto Carpetland edged Vancouver Eldorados 1-0 when a hit by Maureen Harris scored Sheri Parnell.

Pitcher Helen Doberstein of Toronto gave up two hits, while Vancouver's Gale Archibald allowed only one.

Gaels Leading

TORONTO (CP)—Oshawa Green Gaels had little trouble defeating Toronto Lakeshore Maple Leafs 15-8 Friday night to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven final of the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A series.

Canada Loses

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Ellis Slack of Pittsford, N.Y., and Richard Sorlein, of King of Prussia, Pa., handed the United States a 3-0 victory over Canada in the Stevens Cup team tennis competition for senior players with a double win Friday.

Ten Pros Named For Hockey Tour

WINNIPEG (CP)—Canada's national hockey team Friday named 10 professionals and 10 amateurs, the latter mostly holdovers from last year's team, for next month's three-country European exhibition tour.

The pros belong to the farm systems of Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, both of whom have promised maximum support this season to the Nats.

Only rookie to the amateur ranks is Larry Wright, 17, who started last year with Regina Pats of the Saskatchewan Junior League.

The current squad is being assembled only for next month's exhibition tour and is not necessarily the crew that will represent Canada in next year's world championship rounds in Montreal and Winnipeg.

The nationals leave Monday for a five-game tournament in Moscow. After that, they play in Helsinki and Tampere, Finland, and in Geneva and Le Chaux de Fonds, Switzerland.

The team:

Goal — Wayne Stephenson and Ken Dryden.

Defence — Holdover amateurs Bob Murdoch, Steve Cariyle and Jean Gauthier; professionals Jim McKenny, Al MacNeil and Guy LaPointe.

Forwards — Holdover amateurs Morris Mott, Fran Huck, Bob Berry, Chuck Lefley, Steve King and newcomer Larry Wright; professionals Wayne Carleton, Phil Roberto, Gary Marsh, Andre Hinse, Danny Johnson and Chuck Hamilton.

Cowichan Pitcher Slams Two Homers

Lake Cowichan Lakers grabbed a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Stuffy McGinnis Softball League final Friday when pitcher Art Watson virtually won his own ball game in a one-man effort against Denford Electric.

Watson got things rolling from the mound with a display of four-hit pitching, and added the supreme topping by blasting out two of the Lakers three home runs on the way to a 4-2 win.

He cracked out his first homer at Heywood Avenue Park in the third inning, smacked out his second in the fourth, and watched Wayne Forland tag one for a Denford homer in the fifth.

Earl LaForge's homer for Lakers drove in a run after Lou Shreenan tripled in the third.

Fourth game is set for 6:15 p.m. Tuesday at Heywood.

Denford Electric	000 110 0	2	4	3
Lake Cowichan	003 100 x	4	6	1

Barry Wilkin, Eric Peterson (3) and Paul Morrison; Art Watson and Lou Shreenan. Home runs: Denford—Wayne Forland; Lake Cowichan—Watson (2), Earl baforge.

Big Powers Grab Junior Net Titles

OTTAWA (CP) — Tennis-rich Australia and the United States reaped another bumper crop Friday as rising stars won the major titles at the Canadian junior open championships.

Ross Case, 17, of Brisbane became the second Australian to win the boys under-18 title when he defeated Venezuela's Jorge Andrew 6-2, 8-6, 6-2.

The world's No. 1 player, Rod Laver, captured this same event in 1956.

Case was joined in the under-18 winner's circle by Chris (Plums) Bartkowicz of Hamtramck, Mich., who defeated Lourdes Diaz of Mexico City 6-2, 6-3.

Miss Bartkowicz also won the under-16 crown by stopping Susan Goodwin of Winchester, Conn., 6-3, 6-4.

In Friday's other final match, the girls' under-14 championship went to Donna Stockton of Garden City, N.Y., who overcame the Canadian closed winner, Janet Hall of Vancouver, 6-2, 6-0.

Case's victory was his third in a row on his current tour. He took the British Columbia junior clay court championships and an open tournament in Washington State within the last month.

STILLMAN'S GYMNASIUM . . . . . WAS THICK WITH FIGHTERS

Lou Quit As Tough Guys Left

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Lou Stillman, 82, former owner of the famed Stillman's Gymnasium in New York City, died this week in a nursing home here.

Stillman's dingy gym, located near the old Madison Square Garden on Eighth Ave., between 54th and 55th streets, was the training ground for some 35,000 boxers during its 38 years of existance.

Some won championships; most collected only broken noses and crushed ears.

During its heyday, the gloomy gym catered to some 300 fighters, who paid $6 a month for sparring privileges and small lockers.

"The joint was so thick with fighters," Stillman liked to recall, "they used to knock each other down shadow boxing."

Stillman said the gym was organized because some millionaires wanted to do something "for the downtrodden guy, and figured that if criminals knew how to use their fists in a sportsmanlike way, they wouldn't use knives and guns."

Daymon Runyon, the writer, once described the gym as an "open sesame to low society in any part of the world."

Stillman sold the gym in 1959, saying:

"There's no more tough guys around, not enough slums. That's why I'm getting out of the business. The racket's dead. These fighters today are all sissies."

Pirate Pair Steals Part of Reds' Lead

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati Reds are still holding the brass ring on the National League's Western Division merry-go-round, but a couple of kids from the other block — Roberto Clemente and Al Oliver of Eastern Division Pittsburgh Pirates—have made the hold shaky.

Clemente got only one hit but drove in four runs as the Pirates beat Cincinnati 8-2 in the first game of a doubleheader Friday night, then Oliver gave the Pirates a 5-3 victory in the nightcap with a two-run, two-out homer in the ninth inning.

EXPOS BOUNCED

Cincinnati remained one percentage point ahead of Los Angeles Dodgers who lost 5-3 to New York Mets; one game up on San Francisco Giants, who swept Montreal Expos 7-5 and 10-2; 1½ games in front of Atlanta Braves, who lost 4-2 to St. Louis Cardinals, and just two games ahead of fifth-place Houston Astros, who beat Chicago Cubs 8-2.

The first-place Cubs' lead over the Mets was reduced to 5½ games in the Eastern Division, which also is tightening up, with St. Louis and Pittsburgh making threatening gestures.

In the only other National League action Friday night, Philadelphia Phillies trounced San Diego Padres 10-0.

Clemente's only hit in five at-bats in the first game was a two-run triple, but he also drove in two runs with a groundout and a forceout.

The National League batting leader, at .357, sat out the second game, but Oliver took over and lifted the Pirates to a sixth straight victory that left them nine games behind the Cubs.

Ron Swoboda's two-run homer gave the Mets a 2-0 lead, three singles and catcher Jeff Torborg's passed ball made it 4-0 in the third and New York held on to beat Los Angeles.

San Francisco got two homers from Willie McCovey in the first game and took advantage of 11 walks in the second game to sweep Montreal. McCovey drew an intentional walk in each game and now has 35 for the season, breaking a major league record of 33 set by Ted Williams of Boston in 1957.

McLAIN WINS 20TH

In the American League Denny McLain is winning less but he may be enjoying it more.

The ace right-hander of Detroit Tigers is winning less than he did last year when he became the major leagues' first 30-game winner in 34 years with a 31-6 record. But he's still winning more than any other pitcher.

McLain became the first 20-game winner of 1969 Friday night when he stopped California Angels 3-1 with a seven-hitter. He's lost six, but has won five in a row and 12 of his last 13 decisions. No other pitcher in either league has won more than 17 games.

In other American League action, Minnesota Twins blanked New York Yankees 6-0 and took a 2½-game lead over Oakland Athletics in the West when Curt Motton's pinch homer in the 10th inning gave Baltimore Orioles a 4-3 triumph. Elsewhere, Chicago White Sox tripped Boston Red Sox 4-1, Kansas City Royals nipped Washington Senators 3-2 and Cleveland Indians outlasted Seattle Pilots 9-8.

HORTON SUPPLIES RUNS

Willie Horton got McLain all the runs he needed with a three-run homer in the sixth, No. 17.

Tony Oliva drove in five runs with two towering homers—his 16th and 17th—to lead the Twins' attack and Dave Boswell, 13-9, picked up his first victory since his celebrated Aug. 6 scrap with team-mate Bob Allison and manager Billy Martin outside a Detroit restaurant.

Motton was batting for pitcher Jim Palmer, 13-2, when he slammed his fifth home run of the season off Paul Lindblad.

RESERVE CLAUSE IS NEXT

TORONTO (CP) — National Hockey League owners have bowed to player demands and agreed to assume the entire cost of pension plans, it was announced Friday by the players.

Al Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, said the owners also have agreed to discuss the controversial reserve clause which has bound players to one team.

Under the pension scheme, eligible retired players receive $300 annually for each year of service in the NHL. The pension is available at age 45 and payable for life.

The new plan replaces the present formula of owners matching the $1,500 paid annually by the players.

Eagleson said the agreement would erase any possibility of a strike by the players in the near future.

In addition to the pension, the owners agreed to pay the entire cost of the present health insurance scheme.

CONFIDENCE in ability of manager Gene Mauch (above) was demonstrated Friday by Montreal Expos when they announced they were adding two years to Mauch's current contract, extending it to end of 1971 National League season.

Shaw Is Going Great; Casper's Going Home

SUTTON, Mass. (AP)—Unheralded Tom Shaw is leading the $150,000 Avco golf championship, George Knudson of Toronto is second and Billy Casper is heading home.

Casper, twice a U.S. Open champion and last year's leading money winner, headed home Friday after failing to make the cut for the final two rounds.

It took a score of 150 or better—matching the high cut of the year—to make it into the final two rounds and Casper missed by one stroke. He rallied from an opening 81 to 70 for 151. It was the first time he had missed in 148 tournaments, since the Phoenix Open in 1964.

Shaw, meanwhile, took a five-stroke lead with his second consecutive 68 for a 36-hole score of 136. Knudson was a distant second at 141 after a second round par 72 on the hilly, 7,212 yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course.

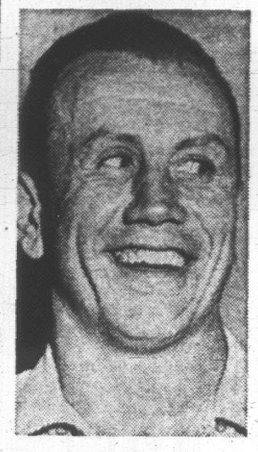

FOUR INTO WATER

Pre-tourney favorite Gary Player and Masters champion George Archer just made it into the final two rounds with 150s. Player had a second round 73, Archer a 74. U.S. Open champ Orville Moody had a 73 for 148.

But the unhappiest of them all was tour regular Steve Opperman, who put four balls in the water, then three-putted on the 17th for a 13—high score of the year on a single hole.

There were only six scores under par. Mac McLendon held third after a 70 for 142, with Bruce Crampton, Bobby Mitchell and Claude Harmon Jr. tied at 143.

Search for Par Round Brings Bag of Birdies

WINNIPEG (CP) — Janis Jean Ferraris, a pert brown-eyed brunette from San Francisco, was "playing conservatively" and just looking for a par round.

But she fired a three-under-par 70 Friday to grab a share of the lead in the first round of the $20,000 women's golf tournament at the Glendale Golf and Country Club.

She shared the lead with Murle Lindstrom, a veteran from St. Petersburg, Fla., who said she may be playing in her last tournament.

Three others came in with 72s in the 54-hole, three-day event which offers $3,000 in first place money.

One of them was Kathy Whitworth of Dallas, Tex., the leading money winner on the 1969 Women's Professional Golf Association tour with more than $30,000 in winnings this year.

"This was my best round in eight weeks," said Ferraris who picked up four birdies and a one-over-par hole over the 6,542-yard layout.

"The course played long . . . because of the wind."

The field of 53, including five amateurs, sweltered in temperatures which reached the high 90s.

Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., Canada's only professional golfer in the tournament, turned in a five-over-par 78 in the first round Friday. She put together scores of 39-39 and has yet to win a tournament this year.

The three-day tournament ends with the final 18-holes Sunday.

Grid Invasion

MONTREAL (CP)—American football comes to Montreal Monday when Detroit Lions of the National Football League and Boston Patriots of the American Football League battle it out in an exhibition contest.

The game is scheduled for Jarry Park, home of Montreal Expos of baseball's National League.

Bill Wakeham Shares Third

PRINCE GEORGE, (CP) — Tom Moryson of Vancouver and Bill Wright of Edmonton were tied Friday with five-under-par 67's following the first round of the three-day $5,000 Simon Fraser Golf tournament.

Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer was in second place with a 68. Defending champion Bill Wakeham of Victoria, Finn Sorensen of Edmonton and Gordon Fairbairn, of Pitt Meadows, share third place with 69s.

Bob Cox of Richmond, winner of two provincial opens, had a two-under par 70. Top prize in the tournament is $1,050.

LIONS GRID TRYOUT

Esquimalt Lions of the Norm Fieldgate Bantam Football League are inviting players to try out at a practice Sunday at 10 a.m. in Bullen Park. Boys from 13 to 16 years of age are eligible.

Luckies Sidelined By Bate Explosion

Bate Construction touched off a five-run explosion at Central Park Friday night to blast the hapless Luckies and step into the Major Men's Softball League playoff final against Molsons.

Bates finished with a 5-1 victory to take the best-of-three semi-final in straight games.

Play opens tonight in the final round, as Bates and Molsons tangle at 6:30 p.m. and continues Sunday at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Luckies went ahead 1-0 in the first inning, and pitcher Bob Labelle looked tough as he held Bates scoreless for four innings.

Fine infield work picked off nine runners at first base before disaster struck Luckies in the fifth inning, when a two-run double by Bate's Bob Holness capped a five run outburst.

Western Sailors Win at Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—The British Columbia entry in the Canadian National Intermediate sailing regatta finished first Friday after a week of sailing against entries from eight provinces.

Rod Reynolds and Chris Ebbehoy won the series for the West Vancouver Yacht Club with 22.4 points.

The intermediate class is open to 16- and 17-year-olds.

New Zealand Out for 150 In Test Play

LONDON (CP) — England scored 174 runs for 5 wickets Friday after retiring New Zealand with 150 runs in the second day of play of the third and last cricket test. New Zealand has suffered the only loss of the series.

New Zealand added 27 runs to its overnight total of 123 for 7.

Three more days remain in the match, which already has lost three hours 10 minutes in two days because of bad light.

Close-of-play scores in other matches Friday.

Essex 263; Lancashire 248 for 6. Abandoned, rain.

Surrey beat Yorkshire by 29 runs. Surrey 179 and 218; Yorkshire 210 and 158.

Glamorgan beat Middlesex by 3 wickets. Middlesex 301 and 204; Glamorgan 310 for 6 declared and 201 for 7.

Barbados 309 for 9 declared and 232 for 7 declared; Nottinghamshire 273 for 6 declared and 124 for 2. A draw.

Worcestershire beat Kent by 7 wickets. Kent 195 and 150; Worcestershire 146 and 110 for 3.

Northamptonshire beat Derbyshire by 4 wickets. Derbyshire 343 and no runs for no wickets declared; Northamptonshire 200 for 6 declared and 146 for 6.

Mel Hopes to Boost Dwindling Point Lead

Mel Marshall will be attempting to retain a slowly dwindling points lead in the race for the individual driving championship when stock car racing returns to the starting grid at Western Speedway tonight.

Marshall, currently leading the standings with 557 points, is slowly being overtaken by Bill Price, who has accumulated 491.

Last time stock cars ran, on August 2, Price picked up two seconds and a third while Marshall collected only one fourth.

Main event for tonight's action is a large 40-lap contest in which 24 cars will vie for the "Sponsors' trophy" as well as those important points.

Time trials start at 7 p.m.

Stock car top 15:

1.	Mel Marshall	557
2.	Bill Price	491
3.	Barry Davies	367
4.	Bob Collins	352

'Extras' Scheduled For Drag Contests

Drag racing fans can look forward to a couple of "extras" Sunday Aug. 31, when action at Van Isle Dragways starts with time trials at 10 a.m.

One feature of the meet will be a nitromethane and alcohol-powered 1969 AMX driven by Richard Schroeder of Vancouver, Wash.

The other noteworthy event is a special Chrysler Canada performance clinic conducted by John Petrie of Toronto.

Petrie is currently campaigning two hemi 426 cubic-inch-powered 1969 cars — a Plymouth GTX and a Dodge "Super Bee."

He was the first Canadian, in a stock bodied car, to break the 11, 10, nine and eight-second barriers for the quarter-mile.

Two other clinics will be held in Victoria by Petrie earlier in the week — on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Ensign Chrysler Plymouth and on Wednesday at 7 p.m. at National Motors.

Accident Rate Increases 40%

Traffic accidents in Greater Victoria for the first six months of the year are up nearly 40 per cent over the same period in 1968.

However, the number of fatalities is lower, and the severity of injuries is less.

Police department figures for January 1 to July 1 show 2,707 accidents compared to 1,990 in the same period of 1968, an increase of 717. Deaths have dropped from 10 to 5.

Officials say a 12-per-cent increase in the number of vehicles in the province — or 74,545 additional registrations — is to blame.

"The increase in accidents has been caused by the density and the diversity of traffic which create new driving problems," said John Reeves, of the Greater Victoria District Safety Council.

11,000 MORE

"The increase is directly related to the increase in registrations."

The biggest percentage increase in registrations is for trailers and campers. Almost 11,000 more are on the road this year than last.

"The severity of accidents is being decreased due to emphasis on driver improvement training," said Reeves.

He also suggested the demerit point system for traffic offences is "having a definite effect in improving driver attitude."

"Drivers are being more cautious regarding driving and drinking which is cutting down fatalities," he added.

City police figures back his statement.

Inspt. Dick Berry said eight charges of impaired driving were laid in July this year compared to 20 in 1968, a 65-per-cent reduction.

PUT ON PRESSURE

"It makes us wonder if people are learning," he said.

"We've definitely put on pressure on the weekends and leading up to the weekends. Also enforcement has been stricter."

Saanich Deputy Police Chief Bob Peterson said the increase in accidents was a result of unusually bad winter weather.

"Drivers are not familiar with the dangers of inclement weather."

He suggested deaths were down because most of them usually occurred in the fall and winter and more could be expected later this year.

EDUCATION PROGRAM

"We have upped our enforcement and education program considerably," he said. "Mostly for cases of young people."

He said mechanical failure is not as great a factor as carelessness.

Injuries to pedestrians and vehicle passengers have also increased this year over last from 625 to 694 — about 11 per cent.

Policea nd safety officials both agree thy are not as serious in many cases.

Motor vehicle and property damage (excluding Esquimalt and RCMP areas which don't compute it) has increased from $724,508.68 to $934,325.85, about a 30 per cent increase.

The figures quoted are taken from police files in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Colwood, Sooke, Sidney and Central Saanich.

Man Wounded

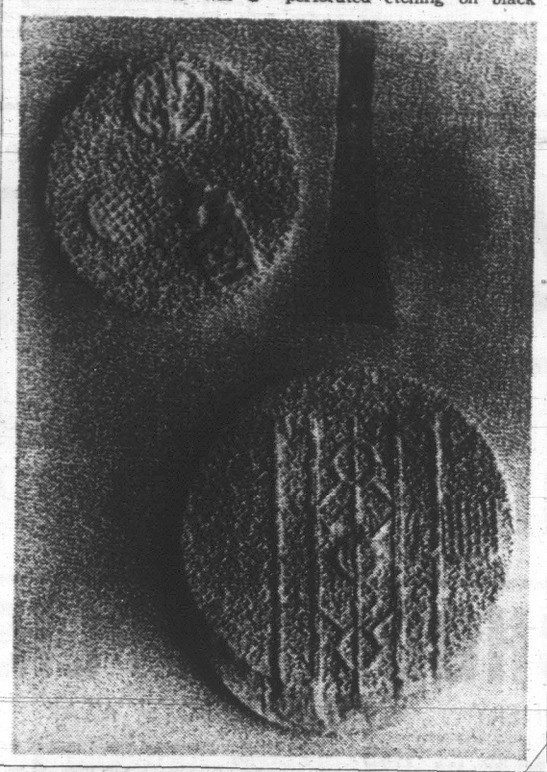

PENTICTON (CP) — RCMP Friday were investigating the wounding of a 20-year-old man who was boating on Okanagan Lake. Bruce Volden of Penticton was taken to hospital with a bullet in his back, apparently shot by someone on the shore.

Yugoslavian Print Biennial Proves Rewarding for Bates

The "Jugotekstil Prix" in the 8th Yugoslavia International Print Biennial has been awarded to Victoria artist Pat Martin Bates.

Mrs. Bates, 959 Clent, is the second Canadian to win a prize in the exhibitions held at the Modern Art Gallery in Ljubljana. Harold Town won in 1957.

The winning art piece, described as a "two-sided perforated etching on black rag paper," is entitled "Le royaume des cercles noirs silencieux."

The etching is currently in the collection of the Museum of Modern Art, Tokyo, where Mrs. Bates represented Canada in the 6th Biennial of Prints.

After a recent showing of her work in Toronto, art critic Barry Lord described Mrs. Bates' etchings in the June 1969 issue of Arts-Canada as "always lyrical, often whimsical, sometimes vaguely mystical."

"This exhibition of recent prints by Pat Martin Bates brought to Toronto's attention the first significant formal advance in Canadian printmaking since Yves Gaucher's Homage to Webern Series of 1963," said Lord.

The Jugotekstil Prix includes 2,000 new dinars or about $150 in Canadian money.

Concurrently Mrs. Bates' drawing in the Joan Miro International Drawing Invitational in Barcelona, Spain, has been chosen by the prize committee for a travelling exhibition in Europe.

Cosmos Launched

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched unmanned satellite 295 of its Cosmos series Friday. Tass news agency said Cosmos 295 was orbiting from 175 to 310 miles above the earth and sending data in the Soviet space exploration program.

BRITISH COLUMBIA SOCIAL CREDIT CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

'POOR COUSINS FOR YEARS'

Municipalities in British Columbia have been the "poor cousins" of the provincial government for the 17 years Social Credit has held power, Oak Bay Liberal party candidate Allan Cox said Friday.

Speaking at a public meeting in St. Dunstan's Hall, Cox said Social Credit "almost immediately" took away from the municipalities their share of sales tax and motor vehicle revenues.

"As everyone of us knows, the sales tax and motor vehicle fee revenues mushroomed during the ensuing period of years and the per capita grants were increased only at the whim and will of the premier," he said.

What was "even more shocking," said Cox, was the province attaching strings to the per capita grants, designating various purposes for these grants, "so that the provincial government could say it was helping to build roads within municipalities and provide ambulance service, etc. This is a typical piece of Social Credit jugglery."

Invitation Honored

Two days after his opponents had spoken, Dr. G. Scott Wallace, Social Credit candidate for Oak Bay, made a brief speech at Victoria Silver Threads Centre Friday afternoon.

He should have been invited to speak with nine other Victoria and Oak Bay candidates at a Silver Threds meeting Wednesday, but the invitation didn't reach him.

"Because of this oversight, we invited Dr. Wallace to speak here Friday and answer questions," a spokesman said.

World Federalism

Prof. Charles Burchill, lecturer at Royal Roads Service College, will speak on World Federalism at the Unitarian Church of Victoria, 106 Superior Street, Sunday at 10 a.m.

Bonner at Trade Meet

Robert Bonner, former B.C. attorney-general and now vice-president of MacMillan and Bloedel, will address a two-day convention of the Pacific Northwest Trade Association in the Empress Hotel Sept. 28-30.

William Lane, publisher of Sunset Magazine, California, will give the keynote address: Tourism, Transportation and Trade—Everybody's Business.

Other speakers will be John Gray, president of Omark Industries, Oregon, and H. A. Carter, assistant to the vice-president, airplane division, Boeing Industries.

Because we don't have to spend a lot of time on this every year, we can spend a lot more time on this.

Underneath the familiar Volkswagen you think never changes is something quite surprising:

A Volkswagen that does.

Over the years, we've made more than 4,500 changes to it.

Every one an improvement.

For instance, this year it has a new double-joint rear axle so handling and comfort are even better.

The engine has a new dust seal.

The seats have been improved. (This was done in '65, '66 and again in '68. Sometimes we even improve on our improvements.)

But in spite of all those changes going on inside, outside, the VW goes on looking pretty much the same from one year to the next.

Which, of course, was the whole idea.

Because that means that this year's Volkswagen won't be next year's has-been. And it also means that when you don't have to work on the way it looks, you can work that much harder on the way it works.

So even though the Volkswagen gets harder to improve every year, every year we try harder to improve it.

A situation that puts us at a bit of a disadvantage compared to the other car makers:

They just have to worry about out-doing each other.

We have to worry about out-doing us.

There are over 280 VW dealers across Canada. The one nearest you is in the Yellow Pages.

Tory Chief Keeps Plugging Away at His French Lessons

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has said it isn't easy to master a second language when one is no longer young.

Mr. Stanfield, 55, nevertheless keeps plugging away at learning French, like many others in the capital. He has reached the point, say aides, where he hopes to be able to interject spontaneously in that language when occasion arises in the coming session of Parliament.

The Opposition leader views his learning task in terms both of national unity and advantage to his own Conservative party.

"I have the impression he decided to run for the leadership because he felt he could contribute something to the solution of the constitutional problem, so in a very real sense matters related to bilingualism brought him to Ottawa," says an assistant.

At the same time, this source makes no attempt to conceal the practical considerations involved.

"Our party will be unable to acquire the lasting strength in Quebec that it requires without a leader able to understand the province, and language is a necessary tool to understanding."

Mr. Stanfield will be off to Quebec next month for the third "total immersion" French course he has taken since assuming the Conservative leadership in September, 1967.

This one will last for two weeks, though the Opposition leader will be able to squeeze in only one week. The previous two courses lasted two weeks and three weeks respectively.

Total immersion means speaking nothing but the second language during the course. It usually means also living in on the school premises.

This summer, Mr. Stanfield took a two-week, partial immersion course here. Partial immersion means speaking French all day but living at home.

For about a year until last spring, Mr. Stanfield spent an hour of each working morning taking French from a tutor in his office. This was strictly a conversational exercise.

The Opposition leader had a reading knowledge of French before coming to Ottawa from the premiership of Nova Scotia.

Early last winter he had advanced orally to the stage where he could spend 1½ hours in a question-and-answer session at Laval University in Quebec. He was far from perfectly fluent, said the assistant, but he was able to make himself "understood and appreciated."

He has chaired French-speaking party meetings in Lennoxville, Que., and Montreal, and spoken to a Quebec City service club in French.

McGeer Sees Happiness In Wednesday's Voting

By DENNIS BELL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Can a neurochemist who once performed a frontal lobotomy on a dead killer whale trade his horn-rimmed glasses for contact lenses and find true happiness in British Columbia's political jungle?

This is the hypothetical question Dr. Patrick Lucey McGeer, leader of the B.C. Liberal party, might have been asking himself since he s ucceeded Burnaby-Seymour MP Ray Perrault last October.

Happiness for Dr. McGeer, one of Canada's top brain experts, used to be pure research on the effects of chemicals on the human mind in his laboratory at the University of British Columbia.

Today, it's the downfall of Premier W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit government in the Aug. 27 provincial election, and replacing the "Doctor" at the front of his name with "Premier."

Dr. McGeer has traded the imponderables of the brain for the unfathomables of politics. He's been in the midst of a razzle-dazzle horn-tooting campaign that has taken him to all corners of the province.

Everywhere he goes, Dr. McGeer comes up with bigger and better predictions of Liberal strength.

When he left Vancouver for the interior a few days after the election was called, he said the best the Grits could hope for was to hold the balance of power in a minority government situation.

GETS NEW IMAGE

A couple of weeks into the campaign he was confidently predicting 20 seats for Liberals of 55 in the B.C. legislature, and when he returned, he predicted a clear majority. At dissolution the Liberals had six seats, Social Credit 31 and the NDP 17, with one vacant.

Shortly after he took over the leadership, the party professionals decided that the first order of business would be to give their man a new image.

"Pat, you've gotta get rid of those glasses," the public relations people told him. "Makes you look too much the scholar."

He did get rid of them — begrudgingly, because he is a scholar and a brilliant one — and had a set of contacts fitted. Then, following the familiar Trudeau mould, they told him to go athletic.

This was more to his liking because Pat McGeer was and still is athletically inclined — he played basketball on the 1948 Canadian Olympic team. Pictures started popping up of Dr. McGeer running, jumping, jogging, swimming and water-skiing, a fine physique for a man of 42.

Dr. McGeer hit the campaign trail with a vengeance. Almost everywhere he went there were parades, sometimes bands, always speeches, hundreds of handshakes and a plethora of bubbling teeny-boppers.

He dashed into the campaign full of enthusiasm, resurfacing periodically on the coast with frothy predictions; and issued a steady stream of campaign promises coupled with a slashing attack on the Bennett government.

Dr. McGeer has been hitting hardest at Social Credit's work in the field of pollution control. "The day I take office will be the last day raw sewage goes into any water — lake, river or ocean — in this province," he told a meeting in Vernon, and he meant it.

The new Liberal leader is trying to elbow his way into the no-man's-land between Social Credit on the right and the New Democratic Party on the left.

. . . vigorous image

Premier Bennett and NDP Leader Tom Berger are trying to polarize the election into a showdown between right and left, and both believe the Liberals don't stand a chance of going anywhere.

Mr. Bennett has remained singularly unimpressed by Dr. McGeer's efforts and says the Liberal leader has "been jumping and hopping all over the province trying to generate enthusiasm that isn't there."

The centre of the political spectrum has been further constricted by the virtual demise of the Progressive Conservatives provincially in the last two elections.

The Liberals concede privately that this is a do-or-die fight, that Dr. McGeer is the best man they've got and if he can't increase Liberal legislature strength, no one can.

Anything less than six seats on election day would be an irreparable catastrophe — 12 seats is a realistic Liberal objective.

CREDENTIALS IMPRESS

Dr. McGeer's credentials fill inches of type. They start with a BA from UBC, a doctorate in chemistry from Princeton University at 23, then back to UBC for a medical degree in 1958.

Along the way he picked up a Canadian Mental Health Association career award and was the author of more than 40 scientific articles published in various international journals.

His wife Edith, herself an outstanding chemist who received her doctorate at 22, was a co-worker in many research projects. They have three children, two boys and a girl.

Dr. McGeer took his first plunge into provincial policies in 1962 and soundly trounced a Social Crediter in a byelection. He soon earned a reputation as one of the Bennett government's toughest critics.

His excursion into the strange world of whale surgery occurred when Vancouver's first captive killer whale, Moby Doll, died a few years ago. Someone said Pat McGeer should do the autopsy, and out came the scalpel.

IS FOE OF LSD

Perhaps his most impressive feat was his drive against the hallucinatory drug LSD on the floor of the legislature during the 1968 session. The province eventually passed stringent legislation against its consumption and distribution.

"Kooks like Timothy Leary aren't going to improve the mind with drugs, especially something as potent as LSD," Dr. McGeer said. "Contrary to what self-styled gurus like Leary preach, LSD does not expand your consciousness — it just gives that impression by impairing judgment."

In the meantime, Dr. McGeer has answered his own hypothetical question — yes, he has found true happiness in B.C.'s political jungle.

"There's no more important job than leading a political party with the chance to become premier," he said. "There's no job as important as that."

C of C Seeks Top Speakers

Henry Ford II and Washington Governor Dan Evans are among the speakers with whom Victoria Chamber of Commerce is negotiating for appearances here during the winter-spring program.

Directors were told Friday that others who have been approached are northern commissioner James Smith, Imperial Oil Ltd. vice-president Ronald Ritchie, and Warren Reynolds, president of Ronalds Reynolds Advertising.

The speaker for January will be Dr. Bruce Partridge, president of the University of Victoria.

25-TO-1 ODDS AGAINST MARS

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain's largest firm of bookmakers said Thursday it was giving odds of 25 to 1 against a manned landing on Mars by July 20, 1972.

An official of the William Hill organization said the firm stood to lose about £500,000 (about $1,300,000, if a landing on the planet is achieved by that date, the third anniversary of the American touch-down on the moon.

Straw Vote Favors Certification

CAMPBELL RIVER — Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada conducted a two-day straw vote ending Friday in an attempt to strengthen their case for certification of approximately 800 members of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Papermill Workers.

Results of the straw vote showed that of the 352 men voting, 332 wanted to switch and the remaining 20 supported staying in the International union.

The International has held certification for 8 years at Elk Falls Pulp Mill.

The Canadians were turned down last week by Labor Relations Board in their request for a government-supervised vote.

The International executive say Friday's straw vote is not legal and they do not recognize the results.

Premier Bennett 'Has Lost Head'

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — Premier Bennett has 'lost his head" but New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger doesn't intend to lose his, Berger says.

This was his reaction Friday when asked to comment on the premier's reference to the Soviet takeover of Czechoslovakia in a speech at Powell River Thursday night.

The premier, hammering again at his NDP-"labor boss" theme, said an individual's right to vote protected freedom and linked this to a reference to the Russian suppression in Czechoslovakia.

Berger said the reference was "absurd" and contrasted his own campaign for a Bill of Rights with the premier's opposition to it.

"That really tells the story about which of us is on the side of fundamental freedom," he said.

APPEAL TO BEST

He said Bennett's campaign is designed "to appeal to the worst in people — I'm trying to appeal to the best in people."

Berger said that at the beginning of the election campaign he and his wife happened to meet the premier on the streets of Victoria.

"We shook hands and wished each other well. The premier said to my wife she shouldn't take seriously what he would say about me in the campaign.

"She following his advice and so am I."

Berger said in reply to a question that he feels confident "but not, I hope, over-confident" about the election outcome.

He said the NDP has waged a campaign on issues and added:

"I think that if you aspire to the premiership you have to keep your head. The premier's lost his head but I don't intend to lose mine."

He said he had been "angry" at the premier's wild accusations made against the NDP."

But Bennett's campaign was "the best evidence of the fact that we are gaining" in the election battle.

LIQUOR ABUSE MAJOR PROBLEM

MONTREAL (CP) — Alcohol far outranks other drugs as a cause of crime and as a social problem, drug experts said Thursday.

Criminologist Guy Tardif of Montreal police said during a panel discussion that Montreal police handle at least 10,000 cases a year involving drugs and 90 per cent of them involve alcohol.

"I was surprised only 10 per cent involve drugs like marijuana and glue," he said in an interview later.

Dr. Andre Boudreau, director of the Quebec Office for the Prevention and Treatment of Alcoholism and Other Addictions, said, "alcoholism remains the No. 1 problem."

They were speaking on a panel to nearly 200 lawyers, probation officers, educationists and "social workers invited to the Man and His World island exhibition site as part of a continuing series of conferences on drugs.

Mr. Tardif, Dr. Boudreau and Dr. Noel Garneau of the Montreal social welfare court said people, especially the young, must be given more information about all kinds of drugs.

Dr. Garneau said widespread drug addiction of all types "reflects a sociological malaise."

"The solution is not to regulate everything," he said, but to educate the public.

Mailer's America: Love-Hate Relationship

Mailer stumps in Brooklyn

An American critic once described Norman Mailer as "Our Genius." The label was perhaps meant to be fondly ironic.

Yet it is convenient shorthand for Mailer's prodigal mixture of contradictions, his large talent as a writer, his stumbling egotism, and his relentless involvement in what is happening to his country.

This grizzled demiurge from Brooklyn is hardly the typical American. But, in a decade in which the country has been, in Mailer's phrase, "roaring like a bull in its wounds," he seems to have expressed in word and action more of the otherwise unspoken thoughts, yearnings and torments of the republic than any other individual, including some presidents.

His opinions are, of course, strongly partisan and express his very own, rather mixed-up type of radicalism. Yet they are invariably and devotedly all-American in spirit.

Arthritic Twinge

Bitter certainly, comic, ribald, often undisciplined and self-indulgent: but they state aspirations that even the most diehard Republican may occasionally feel as an arthritic twinge in the bones.

Deeply attached to his country, he is also violently alienated from the way it is going. Mailer is the most persistent contemporary exponent of the American Dream.

Somewhere inside him is a romantic, Whitmanesque feeling for the evergreen potentiality of the republic: the hope of a morally fine, frontiersman democracy waiting to be rediscovered round the next drugstore corner.

Yet his unclouded eye, his "gift for detecting political deterioration" — as one critic puts it — tells him that Dream has become a spectre, frightening and disenchanting by turns.

He notes the moral effects of the Vietnam involvement, black backlash and white reaction, the cities becoming dehumanised and running out of control and, above all, the fact that the juggernaut political "machine" prevents anyone doing anything about it.

Other and perhaps more able intellects than Mailer's, needless to say, grapple constantly with these problems. It is Mailer's speciality to take his country's sins and shortcomings as a personal affront, a blow in the solar plexus.

America's confusions are his, its malaise his own: if he could only lay that spectre he could cure himself.

Virtually every book and political foray of his has been another round in the perpetual fight. He climbs into the ring every time with the desperate, battered optimism of an old champ making a come-back. He clenches his prose, swings his paragraphs, sometimes erratically, or laboriously, often deftly on the button.

When, at the final bell, the spectral title-holder is still on his feet, the same amoral America still there, Mailer takes a breath and gets ready to try again from another angle. He certainly has stamina.

His Best Year

As a writer he should be enjoying his most successful year, with laurels to rest upon. His fine reportage of the 1967 anti-war march on the Pentagon, Armies of The Night, recently won him a Pulitzer prize and the National Book Award. His account of the July moon-trip is likely to earn him about $800,000 in book and film rights.

Yet, in terms of his own high ambitions, he remains noticeably unfulfilled. At 46, though a little mellower than in wilder days, he is still very much the inward struggler and searcher, intent on some day writing the big novel that will "change the consciousness of our time."

Perversely enough, instead of saving all of himself for that task he was foot-slogging around city sidewalks during spring and early summer campaigning hard to become Mayor of New York (and losing over 14 pounds in the process). It was a forlorn hope from the start and Mailer's also-ran rating in June's primaries for the Democratic nomination, with only 5 per cent of the vote, was entirely expected.

Fundamentally, Mailer the politician is no less serious than he is as a writer. But he, with his unerring eye for his own foibles, would have been the first to notice the hint of old vaudeville in this further confrontation of Mailer with the People.

At least, he could rightly say, he did not look like the hard "machine" politicians of whom he is so contemptuous.

Normally the most rumpled rich man in America, Mailer turned out in good suit and weskit despite the heat and, with his old drinking buddy and election running mate, Jimmy Breslin, a large and boisterous gossip columnist, went around slapping backs and explaining the program. They looked, as someone said, like a pair of mobsters in an old movie.

Mailer was brought up in Brooklyn, New York, the son of a struggling Jewish accountant. His family scraped together enough money to send him to Harvard. He read aeronautical engineering there but had an "adolescent crush" on the idea of being a writer.

He won a short story contest and wrote a very bad novel before being drafted into the Army in 1944. He has admitted that his main concern was whether the Pacific or European theatre was going to be the best place for writing the big war novel. The Philippines it was, where he served as "the third worst G.I. in a platoon of twelve."

The outcome was The Naked and the Dead, a quite powerful, realistic novel, owing strong debts to Hemingway, Dos Passos and such other of the author's heroes.

A success d'obscene in a way — since it provoked alarm in some quarters for its heavy use of the three-letter word "fug" (and this was only 20 years ago) — it sold 250,000 copies, won much critical esteem, and shot Mailer to the top at the age of 25.

It says much for his integrity as a writer that he found it displeasing to be there so early, when he knew he had better things in him. Some of his books have seemed to be wilfully "difficult" just to avoid becoming the darling of the book clubs.

Unlike a number of his fellow novelists, Mailer has never found any special inspiration in his Jewish background. Lacking this, he spent the middle period of his career in long spells of furious self-analysis, looking for the seeds of something big.

He burrowed into a mystical brand of Marxism and out of this came a tortured second novel, Barbary Shore, which fell rather flat with the critics; as also did the next, The Deer Park, his disillusion-with-Hollywood novel, which took him four years of writing and rewriting, and lengthy struggles with the publishers on the score of obscenity.

Critics' Perversity

He still regards it as his best; and the critics' perversity in not loving it too turned him further in on himself in a frustrating wrestling-match with his own hopes and confusions. For much of Mailer's career, fame and notoriety have been closely pacing each other; and this was a period when the latter got its nose in front. There were reports of a number of bar-room brawls, and he was put on police probation and admitted to a psychiatric hospital after an attack on his second wife.

His next books were collections of essays, reflections and self-probing meanderings, like Advertisements for Myself and the Presidential Papers. Far more than most writers, Mailer sees his work as an act of identity as a novelist within a political confessional therapy, a process of finding his context. Hence the attempt at absolute candour which is characteristic of his essays and, indeed, his eventful social life.

This frankness is something more than a nice point of George Washington principle. It contains an element of desperation: a feeling that if he lets up for a moment he will be suffocated in the air-conditioned euphemisms and half-truths around him.

He can be scathing about those of his fellow-writers who "do not keep their rage alive"; and he sets high standards of anger.

It ought to ruin his friendships but apparently does not. It can certainly spoil his writing. Presented with a choice of artistic discipline or giving his demon a run in the fresh air Mailer will always give way to the demon.

In one of his books Mailer recalls being wakened to hear the news of Bobby Kennedy's shooting. The anguished "No!, No!" is moving. That is genuine, heartfelt Mailer. So is his irrelevant and embarrassing recollection that he had spent the afternoon of such a tragic day in extra-marital dalliance.

It is a sort of psychology which has made him something of a hero of all the young rebels and drop-outs, the hipsters, junkies, Negroes, campus renegades, the shadowy side of Admass which is driven to incoherent extremes.

Role of Champ

Mailer accepts the role of champ with modesty and humour. But he is wary of joining any group in case it pares down his individual veracity.

He is a one-man orphanage who is ready to take in all the republic's unwanted children. He has given some shape to the ideas of this underground opposition.

His reportage books, Armies of the Night, and Miami and the Siege of Chicago (on the two party conventions) showed him in brilliant form. As reporter he had something external to bring himself into focus.

As one American critic, Alfred Kazin, put it: "Only a born novelist could have written a piece of history so intelligent, so mischievous, penetrating and alive, so vivid with crowds, the great stage that is American democracy . . ."

Only Mailer could have written them because they so hopefully, yet with such a baleful eye, regard the tattered edges of the Dream.

He can look at Tricky Dick, the assistant mortician, with insulting accuracy; but still feel hopeful because the future President Nixon seems to have learnt something about himself, and has been slightly absolved.

He longs to feel for Eugene McCarthy, the sane, square-jawed liberal of integrity. Again Mailer shies away: the virtuous position of the liberals is too easy for him.

Mailer is married to Beverley Bentley, a former actress, his fourth wife, and has six children by his various marriages. He enjoys family life, but nothing gets in the way of his work.

At his home in Brooklyn Heights he works in strict solitude in an attic reached by rope ladder. After his day's stint he looks "starved of people", as a friend says, as if he has been on a long and lonely route march through difficult territory.

After his moon book Mailer will undoubtedly resume the search for the really big novel which he feels he has inside him, the one that will integrate his feelings, his dramatic sense and his political insight in one g[illegible]. Whether or not he ever makes it there is no doubt he will never settle for less.

Poems of Youth On Open Road

THUMBPRINTS: An Anthology of Hitchhiking Poems. ed. Doug Fetherling, Peter Martin Associates. Paperback. $2.50.

THE SILENCE OF FIRE by Tom Marshall, Macmillan of Canada. $4.95.

By STEVE HUME

In most cases, when a slim volume of Canadian poetry is published there is call for celebration.

Unfortunately, of the two latest offerings from the publishing grist-mills, only Doug Fetherling's Thumbprints rates an out-and-out party.

It is a quiet masterpiece by Canadians and about Canadians: a tasteful display case of tiny, precisely cut poetic gems dug from seams of life that will be a revelation to many an academic reader.

The handsomely printed volume contains 47 poems by 25 poets who will likely be unfamiliar to any but the ardent student of Canadian letters.

In his selection Fetherling has captured an image of youth and freedom and a vision of self-determination in an age becoming increasingly oppressive.

To a nameless girl he dedicates the book: "I loved her and she rolled her own."

The phrase hints of a kind of rootless romanticism, and sets the tone for poems that are sometimes cynical, sometimes sarcastic, but always vibrant and alive with the personalities of writers ranging from across the country.

Thumbprints' theme is hitchhiking. It is poetry of the open road, and it records everything from:

The single, faltering, tenuous line of melody displayed by a thin man's lungs unsurely, halting in the winter air to the "purple sexuality of the roadside."

As Fetherling points out in "Time Inc. hasn't got around to devising a media name for them (hichhikers) yet and it's just as well; the men of Luce's legacy are overworked already."

And that is one of the reasons the book assumes importance. It embodies an art, a tradition, a subcultural entity — and preserves it like Ferlinghetti's "butterflies in amber caught."

It is good reporting: an added benefit of Fetherling's vigorous editing. Rainy nights stranded in Rogers Pass, homosexual encounters, the transient joy of a friendly waitress, punch-ups at truckers' stops, and always the traffic, blood pulse of hitchhikers, whizzing past.

One of Fetherling's contributions hangs on the traffic like its drifting subject, dangling like a man in some objective limbo, on his casually signalling thumb:

Type One throws a wry julie christie smile duplicating my weathercock thumb & passes in a blur;
The Second
stereotype of the sophisticate dares not look my way until past my stance, then runs over a cuffed cliff after staring in the rear view mirror & catching my menacing gestures;
while Another protrudes his cobra head in antimony & recalls Thou Shalt Not Pick Up Degenerates
On The King's Hiway. better chance with singles than couples local plates than out of province men than women & older than newer cars.

It is information known by anyone who has hitchhiked over long distances, but it is something unknown to a majority of people in this wide-open, highway straddled country.

Tom Marshall's book The Silences of Fire, unfortunately is no equal to Fetherling's anthology.

Fire "consuming and nourishing, holding life and death in balance," says the jacket blurb, is most important in Marshall's cosmology.

"It is the figure of the astronaut — explorer, Christ, supreme adventurer — supreme adventurer — who walks in the silences of fire," the blurb continues.

After peering intently into the sooty flickerings of Marshall's book one finds little heat and a lot of self-flagellation apparently intended to boost the poet to someone's little pedestal of martydom.

Despite Marshall's dream of glorious destruction and comparison of the fires that consumed Hitler and Van Gogh, to his own, one is left with the distinct feeling only of the poet as guttering candle, and not the raging inferno he would have us believe.

There may have been no more violence in Van Gogh, but there appears to be none in Marshall — his poems, though striving for action fail to catch fire, remain inert as asbestos.

Theodore White

The Old Pro Still Has It

By AL FORREST

If it is true that heroes are created for the sole purpose of later destroying them, then it might be easier to understand the recent attacks on Theodore White.

White became an overnight sensation eight years ago with the publication of The Making of the President, 1960.

The book borrowed heavily from the skills of journalism and produced that rarity among works of history, an exciting, flowing style. Not only was it great fun to read, it was a book of record; complete and reliable.

THE MAKING OF THE PRESIDENT, 1968, by Theodore White. Atheneum. $10.

He followed up his epic on Kennedy with the 1964 account of the election of President Johnson over Barry Goldwater. This book, too, won high praise from the critics.

But such is the nature of critical rhythm and pace that, no matter what the quality of his third work proved to be, the knowledgeable critic obviously had to knock it to be worth his salt.

But selecting real (not imaginary) flaws in The Making of the President, 1968, is a difficult chore.

White retains the same flowing style and accumulation of fact that won him plaudits in his earlier works. And he has a way of coming up again and again with the apt phrase to sum up complex ideas.

He notes, for example, that the election campaign in 1968 was fought for the very first time "without the traditional discipline of patriotism."

When the nation was floundering in the quicksand of the Vietnam war and race riots, assassinations (Bobby Kennedy, Martin Luther King) and confrontations in the streets, there was no central idea for the nation to cling to. There was no American Dream.

Thus the 1968 election became a nightmare for the voter; trying to choose between two candidates out of touch with the yearnings of the nation. White concludes that America picked the lesser of two evils in Nixon and earns himself a predictable blast from the liberal left. But he also notes that Nixon is not what the nation wanted.

His assessment of the impact of George Wallace is also profound. Moving on from the conventional wisdom that Wallace gained from a white backlash in the north, White argues that northern white workers had ceased to worry about labor issues.

Their most comfortable part of the day in 1968 was at work in air conditioned buildings and modern surroundings. But when they went home at night it was to the ghettos. And it was the issue of safety on the streets that concerned them most. It is these people who voted for Wallace in 1968, says White, and the numbers can be expected to be even larger next time.

White's books can be relied upon to produce some interesting gems for cocktail party conversations as well. For example, intellectual Karl Hess would have become one of the most powerful men in America if Goldwater had won in 1964.

But so thoroughly was Goldwater trounced, speechwriter Hess, the man who had been courted so avidly before the election, was unable to find a job on the lengthy patronage lists of Republican congressmen. White approached one congressman and asked him to get him a job as an elevator operator . . . and was told to go away.

The great game of politics has its ups and downs.

'Future Fiction' May Be Close To the Facts

By SUE MAYSE

A multi-media approach to the novel may be the shape of things to come.

A taste of the new style can be found in this book by John Brunner, mislabeled science fiction—future fiction is closer to the truth and the reader at times is forced to the uncomfortable awareness that the plot of Brunner's book may not be all that fictitious.

Brunner sticks to the most reasonable possibilities of what the world may be in 30 years. All the phenomena are natural developments of what we're now trending towards—overcrowded megacities, disposable clothes, and extensive use of psychedelic drugs.

STAND ON ZANZIBAR by John Brunner. Macdonald. $7.95.

Fast-springing lunatic fringe cults will be present then as much as now, he reasons, race problems will abound, and staccato, abbreviated slang will replace the king's English.

But most important, it will be a computer-dominated society.

The dominant computer is Shalmaneser, an almost-sentient electronic mind that at the end of Stand on Zanzibar, marvels to itself, "Christ, what an imagination I've got".

Like Brunner's earlier Jagged Orbit, Stand on Zanzibar is an awkward book to begin. His style of writing doesn't entice the reader like third rate whodunits, but exposes him to a barrage of every facet of the changed world.

Threads of at least 20 lives can be picked up through the book, over and over again, crossing paths sometimes but mostly just being used individually to pinpoint aspects of society in 2010.

Up to Ankles

Title for the book derives from one such thread that develops as the plot progresses. Early on, the reader is told the whole world's population could stand on the island of Zanzibar.

At the end, less than a year later, it's announced that if the whole world's population were to stand on Zanzibar now, quite a few would be up to their ankles in the water of the coastline.

And incidentally, Brunner offers a solution to the world's torments and pressures so simple and logical that sociologists and anatomists must know about it already.

If you don't enjoy speculation fiction, even when the possibilities are as cleverly derived as Brunner's, you will probably enjoy Stand on Zanzibar as a reading experience.

Multi-media style like Brunner's can't be just a flash in the pan—expect to see more of it soon.

Heaps of Detail Bury Story

THE FRENCH CONNECTION by Robin Moore. Little, Brown and Company (Canada). $7.25.

By WALTER McKINNON

Before he turned to the writing of books for his daily bread, Robin Moore was an advertising man.

Unfortunately, the influence shows.

His first major, albeit inexplicable, literary success was The Green Berets—a selling job for the glories of war, the democratic cause in Vietnam and the inherent superiority of all things American.

Like most professionally-conducted selling campaigns The Green Berets was rife with glossy verbiage and ad-man rhetoric. And his success with that epic seems to have brought his style to crystalization.

Moore's newest effort is a selling job for the New York City Police Department.

The French Connection is the practical application of an increasingly-popular literary blueprint—a work which takes an actual event and gives it the treatment normally reserved for a fictional piece.

It relates, with sometimes painfully-thorough detail, events surrounding the cracking of a major narcotics importing ring between 1961 and 1963.

Moore did his researching well. But the minute detail provided, which could have been the book's salvation, becomes one of its more obvious shortcomings.

After a lively beginning the chronicle becomes hopelessly mired in a slough of precise times, dates, addresses and obscure underworld names and police jargon.

Sustained for 309 pages, such detail is deadly.

The underlying message of the entire work is suspect. It seems to be the perfection of New York police. Moore presents them as an ideal blend of courage, determination, discrimination and good judgment all tempered with genuine compassion.

It doesn't quite ring true.

Uvic Historian Edits Voyageur's Journal

A University of Victoria professor is one of four editors of a new book dealing with early 19th century exploration in the United States.

Sydney W. Jackman, professor of British history, was also mainly responsible for arranging the publication of "American Voyageur—the journal of David Bates Douglass."

JACKMAN

Bates was a member of the Lewis Cass expedition commissioned by the U.S. Secretary of War John C. Calhoun in 1820 to explore the Upper Great Lakes and Northern Mississippi.

Published by the Northern Michigan University Press, the book sells for $4.25.

Jackman, who received his doctorate at Harvard University in 1953, is the author of several books and has written many articles for reviews. He is a member of the editorial boards of Malahat Review, Studies in Burke and His Time, and The American Neptune.

This book will be of interst to students of North American history and collectors of Americana.

The Cass expedition, as well as others promoted during the first quarter of the 19th century, is particularly important in the mid-West expansion of the United States.

It marked the beginning of hard-line U.S. policies to subjugate and deprive the Indian peoples of their lands.

Pianist Breaks 6-Year Silence To Say Why He Can't Go Home

By JOHN EZARD
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON—Vladimir Ashkenazy, the Soviet pianist who was granted permission to live in the West in 1963, has disclosed that he does not feel safe in returning to Russia.

Ashkenazy, foremost of the world's younger pianists, broke a six-year silence about his personal status in an interview this week.

He contradicted as "a travesty of the truth" a Russian claim that he can move freely in and out of the Soviet Union.

He and his wife, he said, were kept in Moscow against their will for some weeks "in a state of acute anxiety and distress" during their first—and last—return visit in May, 1963.

This was less than two months after he decided to remain in London while on a concert visit.

At a holiday bungalow in Palea Epidaurus, Greece, he said, he believed he was probably only able to return to London from Russia because of the personal intervention of Nikita Khrushchev, then prime minister.

Since then he had been "completely unable to trust" the authorities to let him leave Russia if he went a second time, he said.

Ashkenazy, now 32, repudiated the carefully fostered "fiction" that he spends half of each year in Russia, but he stressed that he only decided to do this after the Soviet claim was reported Aug. 1.

"When an official Soviet spokesman says I move freely between Russia and the West, as I only wish I could, it is a gross and unfair distortion of the truth," he said.

In a letter to the "Guardian" sent soon after the report of the Soviet claim, he said that his and his wife's guaranteed exit visas were not honored in Moscow. They had lived under the "very real fear that we would never be permitted to leave again, despite the fact that our child (Vovka, then 2 years old) was in London at the time," he wrote.

Invited to clarify this during the interview at Epidauraus, he added that he and his wife subsequently realized they had fallen into "what you could call a kind of trap by accepting the visas."

They were subjected to a bureaucratic cat and mouse game as soon as they reached Moscow. He was told by the minister of culture, "you are a Soviet citizen. You may not go."

He was reminded by implication that the visas were only "bits of paper."

Finally the ministry of culture let them go—by the "kindness" of Khrushchev, as a high official later told him.

Talking during the interview of his earlier life as a pianist in Russia and of what led to his decision to leave, Ashkenazy also said:

- He was "tried"—at the ministry of culture after his first American tour in 1958, accused by his tour escort—"who was probably briefed by the KDB"—of expressing a liking for modern painting and music, and banned from further foreign tours for three years.
- The ban was renewed in 1962 after his marriage to a non-Soviet girl he met as a student at the Moscow Conservatoire.
- He was forced to play in the 1962 Tschaikovsky international competition, which he won.
- His wife was compelled by a threat to his career to take Soviet citizenship and become a "moral hostage" for him.
- What tipped the scale in their decision to leave was a last-minute attempt by the authorities to stop his wife joining him on his 1962 Brisith visit.

Ashkenazy's feat as a young prodigy in coming second in the Chopin international competition in Warsaw at the age of 17, and winning the Queen Elizabeth international piano competition at Brussels at 18 and the Tschaikovsky competition is still central to the world prestige of Russian music.

Even in the West, he has remained one of the "good boys" among Soviet artists abroad. He maintained from the start—and convincingly insisted at Epidaurus—that his motives were non-political and entirely centred around his family.

The main motive behind his detailed repudiation of the Russian claim appears to have been a sense that Russia was not matching his own reticence—and was, indeed, exploiting it.

"I will be glad to know that people who care know the facts," he said.

He added that he did not feel that his father, mother or sister, who still live in Moscow, would be endangered by his action in "putting the record straight."

He said "there are no Stalin's times in Russia any more."

His father is a successful variety piano accompanist. His sister is studying to be a musician or music teacher at the Pedagogical Institute in Moscow.

Master Die Of New Issue Went to Moon

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

The United States will soon issue a 10-cent postage stamp in Washington, D.C., to honor the most incredible episode that humanity has to date consummated—the safe landing of two men on the moon.

This pictorial features Neil A. Armstrong stepping, left foot first, from the landing pad of the lunar module (Eagle) onto the moon's surface.

At the base of this stamp is the blue inscription "first man on the moon" in Gothic type. Vertically to the right of the design, in the same type style, is "United States" in red. Appearing in the upper left hand corner is "10c air mail." (All words are in capitals.) The cloud-wrapped earth is depicted over the moon's horizon, in the upper right hand area.

The format is horizontal, and the dimensions are 1.05 by 1.80 inches. This commemorative was printed on the Giori press, in panes of 128, and it will be released in sheets of 32. The designer is Paul Calle who created the attractive U.S. twin space pictorials of 1967.

This issues' engraved master die went with Apollo 11 to the moon. Shortly after its return to the earth, it was decontaminated and then flown by NASA from Houston to Postmaster-General Winton M. Blount in Washington, D.C. After he showed the die to the press, it was taken to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

While Eagle was on the Sea of Tranquillity, Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong cancelled an envelope bearing a die proof of the U.S. moon landing adhesive. This first moon mail will become part of an exhibit to be shown around the world. The postmark is round, with four horizontal bars (the "killer") to its right. Enclosed with the circle, in capitals is "Moon Landing U.S.A. July 20, 1969."

The pictorial section of the Washington, D.C. first-day cancellation is a facsimile of this historic postmark.

Czechoslovakia June 17 released their second set of caricature stamps. Three of the six people depicted are: Gilbert Keith Chesterton (1874-1936), Henri Matisse (1869-1954), and Franz Kafka (1883-1924).

Aug. 27 is the 90th anniversary of the death of Sir Rowland Hill (b. 1795). He was a postal reformer, and is generally recognized as the inventor of the adhesive postage stamp.

Last month, I sent a telegram to our postmaster-general asking if Canada was going to issue an Apollo 11 stamp. A spokesman for Mr. Kierans replied in part: "Although we fully appreciate the magnitude of the United States' spectacular achievements in space, the Canada Post Office will not issue a commemorative stamp in honor of the most recent accomplishment, the moon landing. We constantly insist that our issues shall reflect Canada, her people and their way of life."

Although most of our stamps should of course be on Canadian subjects, some attention must go beyond our borders. I think that the Apollo 11 goal —an event of such significance, merits a special Canadian stamp.

The 125th anniversary of Norfolk Island's annexation to Tasmania (then Van Diemen's Land) will be observed by two Norfolk pictorials. These 5c and 30c multicolors will be released Sept. 29.

CHILDREN who recently graduated from a St. Thomas, Ont., separate school have taken over a history project they did not have time to complete in June—making their own film about the American Civil War. The children are shown on location at New Sarum, about four miles east of St. Thomas. Officer directing the fire is Ted Lyons and riflemen are, from left, Thomas Skirtschak, Patrick Gleason, Mark Peco and Larry Sagriff. (CP Photo)

Playhouse Gets A New Bus

A new bus which will transport cast and scenery to more than 70 towns throughout British Columbia, has been given to Playhouse Holiday, the Vancouver Playhouse Theatre Company's children's theatre division.

The bus has been made available through an $8,000 grant from the B.C. Cultural Fund approved especially for the purpose.

The new bus will go into service Sept. 29 when the 1969-70 season begins.

It is a modified school bus which will contain eight seats for the cast with rear storage space for scenery and props. The present bus which it replaces, has been driven over 50,000 miles during its three year service.

Dog Days Pass Unmourned By Art Set

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The sands of one of our longest summers in this decade are running out now. Soon it will be necessary for brown torsos to disappear within sweaters and raincoats and only the weak eyed, the Hollywood-hipped and the self-deceivers will sport sunglasses.

Johnson

Flower baskets will be whisked away and a toadstool growth of umbrellas will blossom along city streets under the autumn rain.

We'll know then that winter is actually upon us. And if winter comes can Christmas . . . What am I saying?

But apart from the strong-arming we submit to with respect to that last unmentionable, winter has few terrors for us fortunate inhabitants of Canada's banana belt.

Seasonal changes don't go much further than the things already mentioned. Nobody has to come in off the golf course or forget what a leafy tree or a patch of green grass looks like.

Hopefully, nobody has to touch a snow shovel although they may continue, once in a while, to manipulate a power mower.

In fact, if schools didn't open and we didn't exchange fuel bills for water bills and hearth fires for beach fires, we'd scarcely be aware of the changing season, the summers being only temperately warm and the winters temperately (sic) cold.

For some of us Victorians — say about 2.5 per cent of the total Greater Victoria population — the passing of summer once represented major change in the pattern of life. But no more.

We were the people whose principal concern, one way or another, was the entertainment season which ran from about the last week of September to, at latest, mid-April.

We were the summer hibernators. For us the summers were always long, lazy and after the first month, deadly dull.

At the first scent of fall we'd emerge, eager but groggy and slack-limbed, as badly in need of tuning up as a violin that has been laid aside for a long period.

Sounding Board

Gone to the Other Extreme

But in the last two or three years, what a change has been wrought.

Now we have gone to what is the other extreme. With hardly a gap big enough for a long breath, the winter season ends, a full summer is under way and by the time it begins to taper off, wheels are already turning that will bring the winter season back on stage.

Every actor and musician in the city who is good enough at his craft and wants to work, is now virtually assured of enough assignments to keep him busy summer as well as winter.

Even with the Symphony Orchestra in retirement for the last four months — a circumstance I hope will not occur next summer — many of the players have been active elsewhere.

Former Hibernators Shaken

Plays, concerts indoors and out, musical shows, children's shows and supper club entertainment in high gear for the last two months, have shaken us former hibernators out of our long-time habits and I, for one, indolent as my nature is, welcome the change.

With the box office in full swing and selling between 25 and 30 new season subscriptions a day, the four-month lull for symphony personnel is about to come to an end.

The silence will be broken Sept. 7 with a free pop concert in Beacon Hill Park and in the following week, rehearsals will begin under Laszlo Gati for the Sept. 28-29 opening concerts.

Symphony subscribers will discover a stronger and bigger orchestra on the Royal Theatre stage when the curtain rises. Wraps are still on but it is hinted that there are a number of new string players, including some from distant places.

Most people are going for the whole series of 10 rather than the short, self-selected six, taking all the advantages into consideration, reports the box office manager.

The tally stands now at more than 1,600 subscribers with five weeks to go before the series' start.

Considering what is being offered both in artists and variety and range of music to be performed this season, symphony buyers are undoubtedly getting more for their money than the majority of people investing something less than $50 in leisure pleasure.

Smothers On Own

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Smothers has announced the formation of a company that will produce and market television specials, motion picutres, records and books.

The company's first offering will be the Smothers Brothers television program rejected by the Columbia Broadcasting System earlier this year, Smothers said Friday.

Tom Smothers will be president of the company, called Smothers Inc., Dick Smothers will be a less active stockholder and Charles S. Tobias will be chairman of the board, the announcement said.

DOCTORATE of Music was awarded to Leopold Simoneau by the University of Ottawa for his international contribution to opera. It was the latest achievement in a career which started in 1941, when Simoneau was studying voice in Montreal, and saw him continue his training in New York and Europe. He has sung at the famed La Scala and sang the title role of Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress at its French premiere in 1952.

FOUR FALL PLAYS

Now entering upon its seventh season in Victoria, Bastion Theatre personnel is busy with preparations for four productions scheduled for fall presentation.

Two shows will go on the road in mid-October for the first part of the 1969-70 school tours. The tour is booked into schools in northern Washington, the Okanagan and Kootenays and Vancouver Island centres.

Pinocchio, in Marge Adelberg's musical adaptation, will tour elementary schools. The production for secondary schools is a compilation by Peter Mannering entitled 200 Years of Musical Satire.

Its range is from John Gay's 17th century Beggar's Opera to the 20th century counterpart by Kurt Weill, The Threepenny Opera.

CAST MEMBERS

Director of the touring shows is Peter Mannering! Musical direction will be by Peter Williams and the company consists of Ramona McBean, Margaret Martin, Barbara Desprez, Erica Peavy, Bill Hosie, Ian McIntyre, John Heath and Mark Smith.

At McPherson Playhouse, Sylvia Hosie will direct Sinbad, with special songs written by Miss Adelberg. This opens Sept. 20 and will have a series of 2 p.m. Saturday performances with the usual free ice cream for birthday parties.

Stuart Baker is the director of the adult comedy, Any Wednesday, which will be seen at the McPherson in October. Male lead is to be Rick Darnell who previously appeared here in Tony Nicholson's production of The Caretaker, in Under the Yum Yum Tree for Victoria Theatre Guild and Bastion's Come Blow Your Horn.

Bastion Theatre's season ticket sale is now on and subscribers will see five plays for the price of four. Application forms are available at Bastion offices, 30 Bastion Square, the Public Library and McPherson Steak House.

Organist's Recital Here Great Coup

Vancouver and Victoria are to provide the setting next week, for the diamond jubilee national convention of the Royal Canadian College of Organists.

The group, headquartered at the Hotel Vancouver, will spend Wednesday of the week-long convention in Victoria.

The itinerary includes a reception at Government House, and visits to Butchart Gardens and the University of Victoria where delegates will hear a lecture recital by the distinguished British lecturer-organist, Dr. Bernard Rose.

They will also hear a recital by Herman Bergink on the Dutch carillon and be entertained at a smorgasbord dinner at the university.

But the highlight of the day and of the convention as a whole, will be a recital at Christ Church Cathedral at 3 p.m., by the astonishing young New Zealand born organist, Gillian Weir.

Miss Weir, 28, first went to England in 1962 on a Royal College of Music scholarship and in 1964, while still a student, won first prize in the Second International Organ Festival at St. Albans in a performance that was subsequently broadcast by the BBC.

She has given many recitals throughout England, among the most notable being the opening recital of the 1965 London Promenade Concerts when she performed the Poulenc Concerto with the BBC Symphony Orchestra under Sir Malcolm Sargent.

FESTIVAL HALL

During the same year she appeared at Festival Hall for the Commonwealth Arts Festival, playing the Handel Organ Concerto.

Her recitals include appearances at King's College Cambridge, Birmingham Town Hall, York Minster, the Oxford Bach Festival and in one of the recitals commemorating the 900th anniversary of Westminster Abbey.

She has won tributes for her fine musicianship, verve and virtuosity from all the prominent and toughest critics in prestigious British journals.

Her afternoon recital next Wednesday is a coup for the RCCO convention and for this city.

It is open to the public and tickets may be purchased in the Cathedral narthex.

Guild Auditions Set Sunday

Anyone interested can attend the Sunday auditions at Langham Court Theatre at 7:30 p.m., when readings for the Victoria Theatre Guild production of Giles Cooper's comedy, Out of the Crocodile, will take place.

The play calls for one man and woman of middle age, one younger man and two young women in the 18 to 25-year bracket.

Production will be Oct. 18 with the usual seven-night run.

Director is Bert Farr.

Hepburn to Play 'Queen of Paris'

NEW YORK — The long-awaited musical, "Coco," starring Katherine Hepburn as Gabrielle (Coco) Chanel, the 87-year-old Queen of Paris fashions, after whom the perfume Chanel No. 5 is named, will open here at the Mark Hellinger Theatre on Dec. 18.

In the making for the last 10 years, the Alan Jay Lerner-Andre Previn show is described by its producer, Frederick Brisson, as "a musical on the grand scale not seen here since the days of Ziegfeld."

"Coco" is budgeted at $750,000, will employ films to tell its story, will offer an extensive collection of fashions from 1911 to 1970, will have 53 performers and 35 musicians.

There will be 19 musical numbers and 253 costumes. The setting is the Maison Chanel, Rue Cambon, Paris, in 1954.

Lerner has written the lyrics and the libretto, which spans Coco's career from the age of 9 to her retirement in 1938 and her comeback in 1954.

Previn has composed the music. Cecil Beaton is designing the scenery and the costumes.

Michael Benthall will direct and Michael Bennett is providing the choreography. Robert Emmett Dolan will serve as musical director.

Because of its scope, "Coco" will dispense with the traditional pre-New York tour. Instead, it will offer previews at the Hellinger from Nov. 12 through Dec. 17.

The film version will be done for Paramount Pictures after the Broadway run, and will again star Miss Hepburn in the title role.

ROCK ROCKS MUSIC MEN

NEW YORK — Rock is often terribly loud and you would think nobody could ignore it, but for some 15 years it has gone unheard by people who should have been careful listeners.

Among these are music educators, as they call themselves, the thousands of men and women across the country who lead the high school bands and choruses and, in ways that sometimes mystify professional musicians, try to instill respect, if not love, for music in the minds of the young.

Up to now, rock has been a dirty word to all but a handful of music educators. Indeed, it is the very enemy they have been fighting as an insidious corrupter of their sacred art.

It is raucous, rebellious, irreverent, out-of-tune and, furthermore, unavilable in standard arrangements for marching band and mixed glee club.

Despite their scorn of it and their undisguised lack of interest in students who wished to play or sing it, rock has refused to die as they have predicted it would.

Recently, the idea has begun to occur to some music educators that rock might be here to say in some form or other and that it might be sensible to get into the act.

This is not to say that they are eager to do so, or that they even know what the act is, but that, at the very least, it might be prudent to get next to it.

But what is rock? What is it all about? How can you use it in the seventh grade, and what do you do with the marching band?

During the last few weeks, these questions and countless others related to them were asked ad infinitum during an experimental investigation of rock at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

The United States office of education, the Music Educators National Conference and the extension music department of the university sponsored a month-long youth music institute there in which 31 music educators were brought together in direct contact with rock and its performers, spokesmen and critics. Also on hand were 19 guidance counsellors.

At the heart of the program was confrontation of the music educators with groups of high school youngsters from all over thec ountry who, having wanted to play "their" music in "their" way, had got themselves together into cohesive performing groups without the aid, instruction or encouragement of school music departments.

The kids played; the educators listened, asked questions, argued and complained that the noise was simply too much.

A question asked so often that the kids parroted it among themselves was "Why do you have to play so loud?"

The answer, simple and irrefutable, was "Because it doesn't sound right otherwise."

The gist of the kids' arguments was that they would have welcomed technical help but that they did not want judgments handed down on their music or themselves.

What will it all come to? Are school music programs really about to become relevant to the age in which we are living? If the past offers any guide to the future, the answer is probably not.

The fact is that rock does not need the music educators. It and its creators, performers and public have done very well on their own and will continue to thrive so long as rock relates to people.

The question is: can music educators get along without rock?

BORN in Scotland, Alan MacRae, raised in England and pulled to North America by the lure of the west. He writes songs and now is preparing to return to folk singing. MacRae likes to wear a poncho over his shoulders, with a straight-brimmed hat on his head and a .44 twirling on his finger.

Violence Is an 'Art Form'

TORONTO (CP) — Alan MacRae has been an office boy, miner, folk-singer, coffee-house owner, a giver of endless parties and a living caricature of a cowboy.

Now he mostly writes songs. Shake the Dust, one of his best, is on a new album, Canadian Pacific, by George Hamilton IV. About 20 other singers also have recorded MacRae songs.

But the 34-year-old writer has recently gone back to singing with a new group called Today's High. They made their debut at the Riverboat in Toronto this summer and will be doing MacRae's own songs much of the time.

MacRae himself was born in Scotland and brought up in England. He has been in Canada 12 years—first in Vancouver and then, since 1961, in and around Toronto.

He says he came to North America because of the lure of the West.

He likes to skulk around with a poncho draped over his shoulders, holster lashed around his waist, a straight-brimmed hat drawn over his eyes and a .44 twirling on his finger.

He says he's obsessed with violence "in reverse."

"I'm anti-violence, in a way," he says. "Violence can be used in art—for instance, in movies like The Good, The Bad and The Ugly or The Wild Bunch—in such a way that it twists people around. They are so repulsed by the violence that they are turned off war."

MacRae came to Canada through New York in 1957. After nearly being killed as a miner in Timmins, Ont., he took off for California and started in show business a year later in Vancouver.

He was working as an accountant for the Catholic Children's Aid Society there when he took up the banjo.

In 1961 he came east for the first Mariposa Folk Festival and has since played in it four times and been master of ceremonies twice.

He helped run a coffee-house in Vancouver, toured Germany with a group called the Chanteclairs in 1963, and had a short career as Al Gordon with the Ghost Riders in 1964. Since then there have been some commercials. They can be good for the pocketbook but hard on the pride, he says, recalling one for dog food that paid him more for his dog imitation than for the singing he did in it.

"The No. 1 thing I'm wrapped up in is the epic thing," he says. "Man against nature, man against the Amazon, against the West, the great gunfighter ballads, man against the wilderness. Aside from that I find it easier to write the protest thing than those simple love ballads.

"Trying to write something new about love is tough."

Sex-Charged Disc Banned

ROME (AP) — The fastest climbing tune on Italian pop charts — a sex-charged duet by a Frenchman and a British actress — has been banned by the state-controlled radio on grounds of obscenity.

But Je t'Aime . . . Moi Non Plus I Love You . . . Me Neither, is still selling like hotcakes. Most Rome record shops report they are out of the disc.

It consists mainly of a few verses in the tradition of "I love you . . . you love me" accompanied by vocal sound effects such as heavy breathing and sighing. British actress Jane Birkin and French composer Serge Gainsbourg, "in the space of three or four minutes emit as many signs, moans and groans as a herd of elephants making love," comments Rome's Giornale d'Italia.

"But perhaps the elephants are more discreet in giving course to their physiological functions," it says.

The state-owned radio and television said the song is "unlistenable for minors and obscene." It cited the radio-TV law of 1962 which forbids showing films forbidden for those under 18 on television and said this applies to radio programs.

Worn Appearance Enhances Mystery Sense They Carry

By GORDON RICE

The most impressive art in the Victoria area, and the one which will always leave the deepest impression, is that of the totem poles, on display at Thunderbird Park, and the adjacent Provincial Museum. Because residents of this area may tend to take this art for granted, perhaps a few moments of reverence are in order.

These monuments represented the mythology and history of particular families, and sometimes that of their clans. They indicated not only the traditions but also the prestige and status of a family. The family was usually that of a chief, or clan head, or the family of one of his close relatives. This would be true especially of the Wwakiutl culture.

One's Wealth, Songs, Dances

Prestige consisted of one's wealth, material objects as well as titles, privately owned songs and dances, and those units of monetary value known as coppers. These engraved copper sheets were somewhat like bank notes, and could be exchanged, for instance, for several thousand blankets.

The complexities of the Indian economic systems, and the traditional potlatch ceremony, make fascinating reading, and a good account is to be found in Ruth Benedict's famous Patterns of Culture.

Her fine account unfortunately leaves out things we'd like to know. There must have been considerable joy in living, as well as a profound artistic spirit; one can't help but sense this in the art of the Northwest Coast peoples.

But this inner spirit is the hardest thing for the scientist to tap and relate. Some of the specific meanings, symbolic and historical, we know, but the spirit behind them must remain for the most part a closed book to us. And yet a few things about this spirit must be clear.

I cannot forget the mill worker in Gold River who described the region for me: "I dunno, nothing much but rocks and trees around here, as far as I can see." Surely the Nootka did not see it that way.

Whites Sit on Chairs . . . I Sit on Earth

All children everywhere express a fond attraction to animals and plants. Only in our own civilization do we "mature" by losing almost all touch with the elements of nature.

In the U.S., a great Indian leader was once offered a chair by a presidential commissioner, at a conference on the prairie. He declined, saying "White people sit on chairs, but I sit on the earth." Perhaps the chair, not the apple, was our first mistake, for there we may have lost our proper relation to the earth.

The animals on the poles represent the genesis, the mythological origins of the peoples, and in some cases they represent their guardian spirits. The chiefs themselves are represented on these poles, as well as their slaves and their rivals, who sometimes occur in most undignified positions.

A weeping woman appears on the replica of a Haida pole still being worked on outside the carvers' shed. This pole is an object of great complexity and fascination. The woman's tears seem to transform into the people she weeps for.

Expressions Quite Arresting

A Kwakiutl heraldic pole (No. 8) stands just before the great house front painting.

It bears the remarkable figures of Dsonoqua, the mythical giantess, or woman of the woods, and her son. Their expressions are quite arresting. One is reminded of the elusive Sasquatch, supposedly seen hereabouts in recent times. The carver, Mungo Martin, displayed a marvelous skill in this original work of 1952. The marks of the carving tools, for instance, remind one of the deliberate and regular brushwork of a master painter.

It is a forceful and powerful work with much of the sombre beauty of the older poles to be seen both in the park and behind the glass in the adjacent museum. One should not ignore these latter works. Weathered and gray, they have another kind of appeal, which is less apparent at first, but which grows on one willing to spend some time with them. As with works of art everywhere, their worn appearance only enhances the sense of mystery they carry.

Around the World In 5½ Days Goal

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP)—Ross Miller, this city's globe-trotting pensioner, leaves here Sunday for a trip he hopes will take him around the world twice within 5½ days.

He will leave Vancouver Aug. 26 and expects to return Aug. 31. "I'm starting from Vancouver instead of Regina because I can make faster connections," Mr. Miller said in an interview Friday.

Earlier this year, the 76-year-old retired CPR trainman attempted the same trip, but airline connections in Hong Kong ruined his schedule.

What're Torpedoes Doing In a Nice Place Like This?

By JIM HUME

WINCHELSEA ISLAND—Security guarding the Nanoose joint U.S.-Canadian naval base is "Cattle Gate—Please Keep Closed" and an elderly commissionaire.

It isn't much to guard the main entrance to a super torpedo testing base. But it's enough, says officer in charge Lieut.-Commander Ed Alexander, when you remember that Nanoose is just the depot base for Winchelsea Island, home for $5 million worth of electronic equipment and heart of the testing range.

What guards Winchelsea?

Ostensibly, nothing but an elderly couple who act as caretakers and baby-sitters to a computer and some refined radar gear perched on top of Winchelsea's barren rock.

Peter and Millie Strazza live in tiny quarters attached to the air-conditioned electronics centre. They share their kitchen with technicians and navy men who persuade the computer to disgorge in seconds what it would take many days to calculate.

But Winchelsea's somnolence can be deceptive.

Hovering not too far away are two high-powered guard boats, similar in appearance to air-sea rescue crash boats, painted red and on constant standby or patrol.

It's the guard boats, plus the drab grey naval tenders flying U.S. and Canadian flags, that give Winchelsea its air of mystery.

"Once in a while a fishing vessel or a freighter will stray onto the torpedo firing range during a test session," Alexander says. "If we can't raise them by radio the guard boat nips out and shepherds them out of the way.

"It's all done very politely."

Guard boats and tenders, like the rest of this sophisticated space-age electronics base, are unarmed and non-belligerent.

"We don't get much trouble, in fact I can't recall us ever having any trouble," says Alexander. "We don't bother fishermen who are close to the Island but off the range, and they don't bother us. The occasional stray always leaves quietly when we tell him where he is."

With Mark 44, 46 and 48 torpedoes flashing beneath the surface that isn't hard to understand.

Even without warheads they look the cold killers they may one day be.

The men on the miniature NATO Force—its a 50-50 U.S.-Canadian combined operation—are amiable and highly skilled, whether military or civilian. They range from computer technicians to frogmen, and each in his own way contributes to the Winchelsea rumor-mill.

The technicians, handling the most sophisticated ship's system and torpedo testing equipment in the world, talk only generally about their work. With much of their equipment still on the classified list they don't encourage intimate conversation.

The frogmen find their main problem comes from the skeptical who refuse to believe that all they do is recover sunk torpedoes from the ocean floor.

"We leave nothing on the bottom," says range officer Lieut. Jack Fyfe. "If a torpedo sinks after firing, and they often do, we use divers and the Pisces (a small underwater craft) to recover them.

"Actually that's when a torpedo is most valuable to us. We have to recover it to find out what went wrong. That's what the range is all about."

But, simple though it sounds, frogmen, computers, astrodomes, low flying aircraft and a miniature submarine, combine for wonderful beer parlor conversation, inevitably shrouded in speculation.

And always the question is asked: Why Winchelsea when the U.S. has its own west coast to choose from plus half the Pacific?

"The search for the ideal range went on for years," says Alexander. "And it was found, right here off Winchelsea, where the water is 1,350 feet in depth and the ocean floor is like a bathtub.

"To find the same conditions off Hawaii you have to go miles out to sea—and of course you have the tremendous obstacle of transportation costs to overcome.

"The 15-mile range we have here is just about perfect, that's why this joint command (50 to 60 Americans, 45 to 50 Canadians) exists."

One last mystery. What secrets does the small white astrodome with its sliding doors and purring motors hold?

A 16-inch finger-tip control camera for photographing aircraft torpedo drops.

With a tracking range of 8 to 10 miles the camera pans 90 degress in 60 seconds and has a lens capable of picking up a fly on the wing of the aircraft.

The operators sit in dim light, cut off from outside vision to eliminate dizziness as the camera swings in its tracking arc.

And that just about picks apart the mystery of Winchelsea—unless there's something unusual in a radar set with a 45-mile range or the two 5,000 gallon water tanks which are flushed and filled every two weeks.

The only thing the officers ask you to do as you leave is "be sure and close the cattle gate," a simple enough request.

Sanscha Has $24,000 To Spend

How do you spend $24,000?

The question will be discussed at a public meeting in Sidney's Sanscha Hall Monday at 8 p.m.

The money is to be paid to Sanscha by the B.C. government as compensation for expropriating a strip of property to make way for the Beacon Avenue intersection and widening of the Patricia Bay Highway at that point.

"We will welcome any suggestions for the best use of the money," Sanscha president Frank Minns said today. "It is proposed that we purchase half an acre of adjacent property to square off the recreational area.

"Under the terms of the Sanscha trust, we must hold a public meeting to decide how the money is to be spent."

Another suggestion is that the money be used to build a curling rink and a skating rink on Sanscha property.

The B.C. government's expropriation will involve loss of the present site of the Sidney war memorial and it is proposed to move it to a site in front of the Town Hall.

Sidney residents have the choice of three events Monday night: the public meeting in Sanscha Hall; an all-candidates' meeting in the Sidney Hotel at 8 p.m. and a council meeting in the Town Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Altered Stance on B.C. Tel Charged

NDP leader Tom Berger is the first politician to go back on a promise before he is elected, Saanich Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm said Friday.

Lindholm declared Tom Berger had said he would take over the B.C. Telephone Company if NDP were elected government of British Columbia on Aug. 27.

"Now he has recanted," Lindholm told a meeting of 55 members of Saanich Silver Threads Association. "Now he says the B.C. Telephone Company will be taken over at the proper time.

"This sounds like never-never land. We can have a situation where the politician goes back on his promise before he is elected."

INCREASE PENSIONS

Lindholm said the Liberal party would increase old-age pensions to meet the rising cost of living; provide low-cost chronic care and low-cost housing.

"The only free-enterprise alternative to the Social Credit party is the Liberal party," he declared.

NDP candidate Don Johannessen said old-age pensioners cannot afford the $15 a month many of them are required to spend on drugs.

He quoted the Royal Commission on Health Services as saying that 29.2 per cent of the total sales dollar of all drug companies was spent on advertising.

The NDP would bring all drugs and all hospitalization under medicare.

LOW-RENT HOUSING

"Old people on low incomes need drugs to stay alive. But, if they spend their little bit of money on drugs, they lack funds to buy food, clothing and propert shelter."

Johannessen said people on small fixed incomes need housing at low rent.

"This shoudl be subsidized by the provincial government because the older people of the province deserve to be rewarded for the hard work they have put into building British Columbia."

John Tisdalle, Social Credit member for Saanich since 1953, said his government brought in the first supplementary pension and this had been emulated by other provinces.

"British Columbia is a nice juicy apple and everyone, including the federal government, wants a bit out of it," he said.

"People don't come here just because of the climate. They come here because this is a go-ahead province, with a prime minister who isn't afraid to take chances.

"It is the fastest-growing province in Canada."

All three candidates were questioned on unemployment, pensions, vocational schools and medicare.

Lindholm said 94,000 people are now on welfare in British Columbia. Mor than 90 per cent of the young people in Victoria don't get to university and are in need of vocational training.

"Yet we are only just getting round to the opening of the first vocational school in the Victoria area," he said.

A woman member of Saanich Silver Threads said she had to take drugs to keep alive.

"But when I get the old-age pension next January, I shall be cut off from these drugs. What am I to do?"

Lindholm said a Liberal administration would pay for all drugs in excess of $30 a year per person.

Johannessen, for NDP, said even $30 a year is too much of a burden for men and women living on pensions.

"All drugs should be brought under medicare," he said.

Questioned concerning the cost of education, Lindholm said a Liberal administration would take all education taxes off the property owner and pay them out of general revenue.

$276,875 For Dredging At Nanaimo

NANAIMO—A $276,875 contract for dredging at Nanaimo was announced in Ottawa Thursday by Public Works Minister Arthur Laing.

It was awarded to Dillingham Corp. Canada Ltd., B.C., bridge and dredging division of Vancouver, which submitted the lowest of three bids.

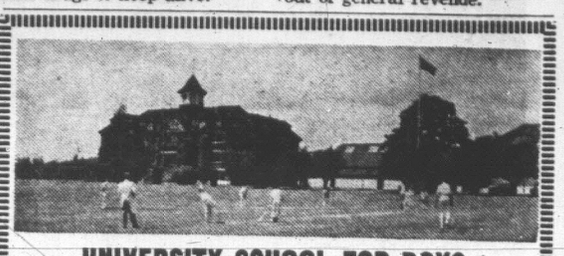

The highest was $310,925.

The area to be dredged is adjacent to the approach channel to the Nanaimo assembly wharves. It is about 1,500 feet long and 600 feet wide.

The dredging will ease a sharp corner in the shipping channel by removing about 265,000 cubic yards of material.

Accidents Rise

NANAIMO — RCMP records show the number of motor-vehicle accidents in this area during the first seven months of the year totalled 479, an increase of 20 per cent over the number for the same period last year.

Air West Terminal At Lake Under Study

NORTH COWICHAN — North Cowichan council elected a protem committee this week to study all aspects involved in an application by Air West Airlines Ltd. of Vancouver to service this area from a landing spot on Quamichan Lake.

President Norman Gold told council it had a licence and approval from the department of transport for daily service from Vancouver but needed assurance it could provide a dock and waiting room facilities on the lake.

Mayor Don Morton said council would favor the project if some details were worked out. The council went with Gold to examine the site after the meeting concluded.

TROUBLE ENOUGH

Ald. John Cannon was concerned with a safety factor since Quamichan Lake is a recreation spot with a picnic ground operated by the Kinsmen, swimming and boating.

"We already have enough trouble regarding public safety with out compounding it with planes," he said.

Ald. Margaret Robertson reminded council the lake is also a watershed and near "a high-priced residential area."

Gold said an airplane is cleaner than a boat because it had no working parts in the water. A logical passenger service area would at or adjacent to the Kinsmen Park at the end of Indian Road.

Kinsman president Tom Stanko and Chamber of Commerce civic committee chairman Bob Lewis also listened to Gold's appeal. Lewis said the chamber earlier in the day voiced approval of the proposal.

Indians Fear Rights Sellout

SASKATOON, Sask. (CP)—While intergration of whites and Indians is inevitable, older Indians see a threat in educated Indians who they feel may sell out their treaty rights, Dr. Ahab Spence said Friday.

Dr. Spence, head of the Indian affairs department's cultural development section was speaking at a meeting of principals and administrators of Indian residential schools.

History in the Collecting On Verge of Being Unveiled

By SUSAN MAYSE

The top floor of the old provincial museum in the Legislative Buildings is buried these days under a clutter of outmoded objects.

Some are utensils or clothing you might have seen at your grandfather's farm, some so old and strange their use has passed out of memory.

The museum's human history collection — though still largely in packing cases and bundles — goes back 150 years, and will eventually be sorted for display in the new, year-old Provincial Museum.

Butter Churn

A set of carpenter's tools are jumbled in a box sitting on a beautifully-crafted butter churn, and beside them two pairs of RCMP riding boots stand tall, mirroring everything in their high polish.

A haphazard collection of book ranges from tomes on theology and astronomy to a thick ledger from Victoria's Chinatown, written in elegant Cantonese.

The clutter covers all sides of the well where, in the old museum's better days, the skeleton of a killer whale dangled.

Looking lost in the middle of heaps of boxes and bundles is Don Gallacher, the Provincial Museum's new curator of history.

Gallacher, on the job barely four months, is an ex-RCAF flyer who describes himself as a man who "always intended to go back to university, but had a pilot's licence and loved flying."

Five years ago, after seven years as an air force navigator, he did go back to take an honors program in Canadian history at the University of Victoria.

Decipher Tangle

Obviously he can decipher the tangle — he moves from item to item with quick explanations. Only occasionally does he fail to identify some article that went out of common use before his father was born.

The dolls in lace and satin gowns, the grotesque musical instruments, the rough farm tools — all have been acquired by the museum over the years in the hope that some day there might be a place to display them.

The opening of the spacious new museum has provided the opportunity, Gallacher said.

Gallacher hopes to have his orientation complete by the end of the summer. This will mean virtually all the objects in the collection will be recognized for what they are and for their potential value in a display.

Human History

Making up displays illustrating the history of the B.C. coast since the arrival of the first Europeans in the 1770's is a major purpose of the human history collection, he explained.

The history will be divided roughly into three overlapping eras — discovery, settlement and consolidation.

Eventually, perhaps in two or three years, displays illustrating each of these periods will grace the new museum.

Discovery, Gallacher said, covers the time from 1770-1870 — "the discovery not only of the land but also of the resources." Discovery was by land and by sea, and its primary purpose was to take the most easily transportable resources — such as furs — back to Europe.

The settlement period spanned 1820 to 1920, when people came and stayed. "People started committing themselves to the land."

Displays of this era will touch on immigration, the coming of the railroads and agriculture.

Weaknesses

Consolidation includes 1870 to 1970.

"We have here the consolidation of industry, transportation, communication, and the cataclysms of two major wars and a depression in B.C. We want to give a considerable amount of treatment to urbanization on a grand scale."

But the general theme running through all human history displays will echo the over-all theme of the provincial museum — man in relation to his environment.

There are weaknesses in the collection, Gallacher admitted, especially for the earlier periods.

"The very early period, 1776 to 1821, represents a very serious gap. There weren't that many items used, since the white population was very small."

Trade, Donations

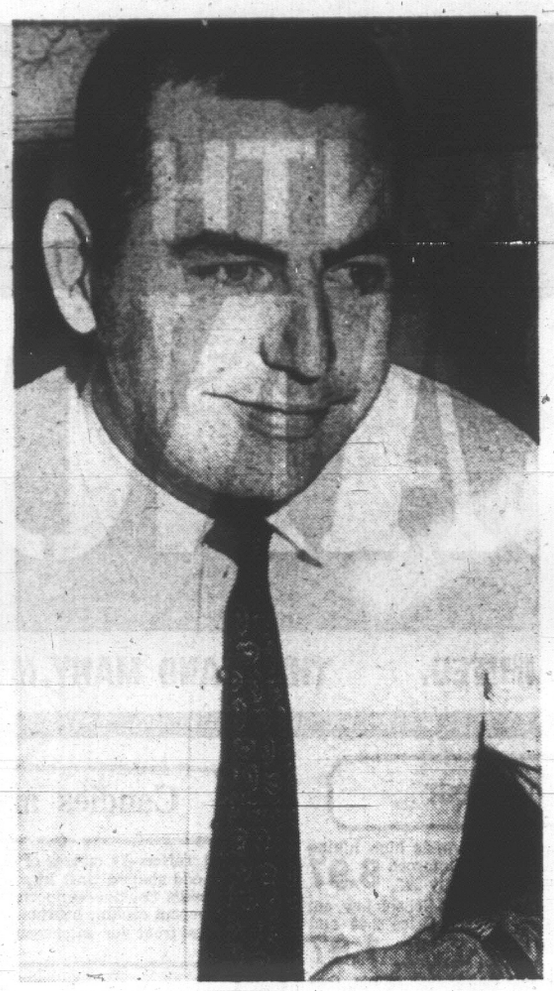

Missing items will have to be acquired through donations, purchases, trades with other museums, or special requests to the public for an item.

There are other smaller gaps. Agricultural implements, for instance, changed little from 1860 to 1920, when a well-made tool could last up to 60 years.

Also, people tend to preserve family possessions that were expensive, or very personal, like jewelry, Gallacher said.

But, once summer and the identification program are over, appeals will be made for donations where they're needed.

"It's very exciting — and I think the value of it all is truly startling."

Singer, Actress Miss Black America

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gloria Smith, 24, of Manhattan, was crowned Miss Black American early today.

Miss Smith, a model, actress and singer, sang her own composition in the talent portion of the contest. She is five feet seven inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, and measures 34-23-34.

The first runner-up to Miss Smith, who competed as Miss Black New York, was Laverne Williams, 23, of Oakland, Calif. Miss Black Washington, Connie Brown, 19, was the second runner-up.

The third and fourth runners-up were Gloria Green, 24, of Detroit, and Lynda Lockman, 19, of Miami. An audience of 4,400 in the Felt Forum at Madison Square Garden applauded the finalists.

Judges at pageant included Rep. Shirley Chisholm, (D—N.Y.), the nation's first Negro woman in Congress; actress Diana Sands; Floyd McKissick, the former chairman of CORE; and Willis Reed, captain of the New York Knickerbockers pro basketball team.

It was the second Miss Black America pageant.

There had been an attempt to block the awarding of the title, but a petition was denied in Manhattan Supreme Court Thursday.

Miss Black America, a New Jersey firm, sought to bar fashion publications from conducting its Miss Black America contest, claiming exclusive rights to the title.

Gideons At Service In Park

Ninth in the series of open-air gospel services at the Cameron Bandshell, Beacon Hill Park, Sunday at 7 p.m. will be conducted by the Victoria Camp, Gideons International in Canada.

Ed Friesen, president of the Victoria Camp, will be in charge and Gideon Robert W. Hampton will be the gospel speaker. There will be congregational singing, with vocal and instrumental solos.

The open-air services, now in their 27th year, are sponsored by the Victoria Committee, Christian Businessmen's Committee International.

Punishment Delayed

DUESSELDORF (Reuters) — A German Second World War lieutenant was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday for the murder of 109 Soviet officials and Jews in the Crimea in 1941 and 1942. Karl Rudolf Pallmann, 65, had approved without reservation the policy of murder and terror and had unscrupulously executed orders, the judge said after passing sentence.

Kadar Vacationing

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet news agency Tass said Friday Janos Kadar, Hungarian Communist party chief, is vacationing in Latvia.

CONSIDER THESE FACTS:

- In Saskatchewan, under the CCF (now NDP) government, there were two main exports — wheat and people. Between 1951 and 1961, Saskatchewan had a net loss by migration of 78,871 people. Why? Economic chaos and no employment opportunities!
- Great Britain today, under the socialist Labour government, is in social, economic and political agony. Why? Because socialism overtakes working people and destroys their chances to enjoy higher standards of living.

AND THESE FACTS:

- British Columbia's population is growing at twice the rate for the rest of Canada.
- The average weekly earnings of wage-earners in British Columbia are the highest in Canada.

These facts are presented for your thoughtful consideration by an independent group of British Columbians who seek continued progress for their province. They are men and women of every walk of life who in the past have voted Conservative, Liberal, NDP and Social Credit. Almost all of them are parents. And all of them are convinced that in this election a vote for Premier Bennett and his Government candidates is the only way to keep British Columbia on the move after August 27.

'Wedding, Weird, But Nice Weird'

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

Emily Post has an exhaustive 20-page section on wedding invitations in her etiquette book. But it will have to be revised extensively if the latest mod trend catches on.

It may be some time yet before Victoria brides switch from "the honor of your presence" formalities, but a former Victorian who was married in Boston in June is one of the brides who broke with tradition.

Judith Taylor, who is now Mrs. Michael Morganstern, had to send her wedding invitations by parcel post, because they were three by four foot posters mailed in cardboard tubes.

They were designed by Michael's sister Jacqui, a commercial artist, and show the bride in the micro-mini wedding dress she designed herself. Michael is pictured in his dark blue pin-striped wedding suit "cut in the European manner" with bell-bottom trousers and a lace-fronted shirt.

The miniature train chugging through a cloud and the accordion in the background represent Michael's chief hobbies.

Their invitation was featured along with three others in an article on the new trend in a Boston newspaper.

Poetic Invitation

One of the other invitations had interlocking wedding rings; another featured a cameo picture of the couple in an old-fashioned oval picture frame.

Another couple, married in the woods, went in for a poetic approach. They invited their friends, in poetry form, to come along and sit around.

Flower power paper, the article says, is in some cases replacing the parchment card, and pastels are a favorite with the jet agers. Many of the invitations go in for a message of hope in the future of love.

Whether all weddings follow the unconventional pattern set by the invitations is not reported, but Judith and Michael Morganstern followed through with a swinging party on a ship cruising in Boston Harbor.

The bride's brother described it as "weird, but nice weird."

The shipboard wedding was covered by a dozen reporters, 15 photographers, and two television stations who filmed the happening in color.

One newspaper report began: "A young engineering intellectual last night married a gorgeous Canadian girl and if you're over 30 and think there's a generation gap yawning close by, you're wrong. It's an abyss." (The headline on that read "Pair Mod For Each Other.") Another read "Couple Cruise To Their I Do's."

The bride's mother, Mrs. June Taylor of Victoria was also mentioned in one of the reports of the wedding.

"She's a very charming woman," the paper reported. "Told that brides like to remember their wedding day, and that Judith would never forget hers, Mrs. Taylor smiled and answered "Neither will her mother.' "

This is a wedding invitation with a difference. Beneath the poster-sized picture of the bride and groom is an unusual invitation to a wedding aboard the motor vessel New Boston. The bride is the former Judith Taylor of Victoria, who recently received her MA from Brown University, and her husband is Michael Morganstern, who has his Ph.D. in electrical engineering from the same university. The invitation reads in part: Dress Completely Optional — Costumes Encouraged.

Wise Models Sleep Nights

The route to becoming—and remaining—a Paris model is littered with frustration, depression and neuroses.

"When I first started (two years ago), I went out day after day" said Danuta Galinat, 23, a model for avant-garde Parisian designer Andre Courreges.

"I'd change my hair style to suit one designer and change it again and put on different clothes to please another.

"One woman just stared at me, up and down, and then said, "Oh, that will never do!"

"Finally I decided not to take it all so seriously. You can't be liked by everyone, in modeling or in anything."

Danuta, who is 5'9" and weighs about 120, was once turned down by Courreges because "I looked like a skinny, white pole. I went to the beach for two weeks, got a tan, gained 10 pounds and he took me." (she earns about $100 a day for salon modeling and $30 an hour for photography.)

"Courreges hardly looks at a face. He wants to show his clothes on healthy bodies, whereas most designers want their models to look fragile and not so real."

The conscientious model, Danuta says, races home for a mid-afternoon nap if she is to be photographed that night.

"She'll go to Castel's or the rue Princesse (Latin Quarter hangouts for models, actors and photographers) from about 11 to 12—just to dance and to be seen for that hour and then she must get her sleep.

"The less conscientious model wants to have fun, because Paris is a city to go out and have fun in. But you learn your lesson. I stayed up all one night dancing at a discotheque and had pictures taken the next morning. The dark circles were terrible."

Danuta admits she has a love-hate feeling about the fashion world.

"It's full of neurotics. A model has to be originally dressed and in style and willing to spend a lot of money on clothes. She has to be seen often. And if she's really serious, she can think only about modeling.

"And the jealousy. The minute a new girl comes in, everyone starts talking about her, about how fat she is, or something silly, because every model is insecure and is afraid she is fading.

"It's all very natural and very feminine, but it's hard to have any close friends. Most of my model friends are American because they are more open.

BEAUTIFUL LIFE

"And yet it's a beautiful life when you're young. You are admired everywhere you go. It's a hard life to leave. I've seen models at 27 and 28 who have had a grip on that life for 10 years, and they don't want to let go.

"I can't blame them. It's glorious, and yet unreal.

"But then I think about a 30-year-old model I know who turned to alcohol and drugs because she believed too much in that world and had nothing else when it was over. I'm determined that's not going to happen to me."

A graduate of Le Chambre Syndicale de la Couture Parisien (where Courreges and Yves St. Laurent also studied), Danuta has done some designing for Kaplan and will show 30 shift-bikini designs next month in Capri.

"But I want to continue modeling because it is the best way to learn the business. I can learn much from the criticism of clients."

ACW Presses Synod For Greater Equality

By ELINOR READING

SUDBURY (CP) — "Love us less; give us more," say the signs. "Women are the church too."

The real protest movement at this year's general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada is coming not from the youth observers but from silver-haired and rosy-cheeked matrons. Anglican Church Women, the organization which nominally includes every woman in the church, wants to go out of business.

"The day of church women's clubs is over," Mrs. W. R. Shepherd of Toronto said. "And we're not going to die with them; we're going to go out and help bury them."

The women want three things: "Full integration" into the life of the church, better pay and status for women workers in the church, and a study of the ordination of women to the priesthood.

Resolutions scheduled for debate were:

—Recognition of deaconesses as able to perform the functions of deacons, such as assisting the priest at communion.

—A study of the ordination of women to the priesthood, to report to the next synod in 1971.

—"Equal pay for equal work" by full-time women workers.

—Endorsement of a policy "of eventual total integration of the finances, personnel and programs of Anglican Church Women into the mainstream of the church's life."

RAISES NEARLY $500,000

ACW now raises nearly $500,000 a year on its own and operates separate programs in education and social action.

Mrs. W. G. Waugh, ACW president, says educated young women do not see the point in bazaars and bake sales.

"It's selling the church short to say all the piddly things we do are for the church and the important things are for outside," she said.

Thursday, large green buttons, saying "Let women speak for themselves" appeared on women's dresses, priest's lapels and even the red cassock of the primate.

One bishop asked ACW past president Mrs. John Robertson of Kitchener, Ont., whether the women want to abolish all-male organizations within the church too.

"They're going anyway, aren't they?" she replied.

Jam Without Tears

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — If you want to make some jam or jelly you should be careful, but if you are, you needn't be nervous. You needn't make gallons of it, either; you can cut recipes down and make just a few jars.

Frances Hucks says that if you make small quantities, you won't need to invest in special equipment except for some jelly jars and a pair of tongs, if you don't already own them.

Miss Hucks is food and nutrition supervisor for the home economics branch of the Ontario department of agriculture. She is also a judge for the Canadian National Exhibition's baking competition, in the jams and jellies category.

Miss Hucks says there are two basic ways to make jam or jelly. You use just fruit and sugar or you add commercial pectin. She says the recipes using pectin are probably easier for most novices.

"With pectin you get very specific instructions about how long to cook. With the other type you have to use your own judgment.

"There are other differences. The pectin recipes seem to take more sugar, but make more jam. They cook in less time, so you get a fresher taste, but then some people like the boiled-down taste of the other method.

"The natural pectin will be higher in slightly under-ripe fruit, so if you are not using commercial pectin, mix ripe and slightly under-ripe fruit."

She says you do not have to organize for big production if you want to make a few jars of jam, as she does, for fun or to have a kind not make commercially. She recently made jam out of a quart of black currants, and the yield was about five full jelly glasses.

If you use a pectin recipe for a small amount, measure the pectin and divide it appropriately, and cut the other quantities.

"I sterilize my jelly jars in a roasting pan — just invert them. You must leave them in a minimum of 15 minutes. Then take normal precautions to keep the operation sanitary. If you are using tongs that will go inside the jars, put the tongs in boiling water. I lift the jars out by the bottom with an oven mitt. Just be sure you don't lift them out with a dish cloth that gets inside them."

SPECIAL CONTAINER

She says you can sterilize the ladle in the same water, and melt wax in it. She recommends using a container for the wax that you won't have to clean, because it is difficult to get it out. A small coffee pot or tea pot with a spout edge is useful for wax. It may be dangerous to melt it directly over heat. Putting the container in water is safer.

Miss Hucks says fermenting or development of mould are the problems most likely to occur if the jam isn't sealed properly.

"Pour it into jars and put a thin layer of wax on while it is still warm. When the jam or jelly cools, put another layer of wax on, and turn the jar a bit to be sure you have a complete seal around the edge.

"Try and store it in a place that is not too warm. If it is too warm, it may weep. It's a little gummy, but it doesn't usually interfere with eating."

Professional Hunters Stalk Women In Furs

RIVER KHWAI, BOTSWANA—Many of the world's professional hunters are setting their sights on saving leopards from being sacrificed on the altar or fashion. The hunter's target: women — their penchant for wearing leopard skins.The aim: to shame women out of wearing leopard skin — and thus save lives of thousands of leopards slaughtered each year, many by poachers.

Jack Block, director of a leading African hunting safari company, said the destruction of leopard is growing "at a tremendous pace and we are very worried about it." He said the recently formed International Professional Hunters Association, which presently has members in Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania but hopes to bring in others from North and South America, India and elsewhere, is dedicated to the preservation of wild cats, especially leopards.

"We've decided that we must try to make it so that people will just not wear leopard skins any more," Block said. "We are trying to shame women into not having anything to do with leopard skins for decoration."

Block was at this remote site in the vast Okavango swamps in northern Botswana for the opening of a photographic game lodge for a safari company he heads.

AGAINST POACHING

"Most of the stuff you see in African curio shops, particularly in East Africa, is made of leopard skin," he said. "Now for a man to go out and hunt a leopard is one thing — but when you get thousands of them being killed off, then you upset the balance of nature."

The association's members don't regard hunting of leopards by sportsmen to be the main problem — leopards are difficult to find and real tracking and hunting can take too long for the expensive safari. What the groups' members are against is poaching — unlicensed killing of the animal.

"A big leopard skin today fetches anything between $240 and $600," Block noted.

He explained that the association intends to make a film in Kenya showing poaching, with commentaries from game wardens and hunters.

"We'll end it with a shot of a beautiful girl dressed in a leopard skin," he said. "We've got to produce something to make people really conscious of this dreadful business."

GYPSY LOOK FOR SCHOOL

Braid-trimmed suspenders and pockets on a bouncy dirndl skirt worn by this smiling schoolgirl give her a happy gypsy look. With the colorful skirt she wears a pullover blouse edged with ruffles, while long white-ribbed stockings complete the outfit.

Language Problems Frustrate Doctors

TORONTO (CP) — A 10-month-old child died recently; medically, the cause was malnutrition, but a major contributing factor was a language problem.

Her Greek-speaking parents, the hospital from which she had been released several days before her death and social agencies could not communicate, a coroner's jury ruled.

The child's death points up a challenge faced by hospitals in cosmopolitan cities. If a person can't understand the principal language, how can he follow medical instructions?

It is a problem faced every day by hospitals and its solution is taxing the ingenuity of their staff.

Toronto General Hospital was frustrated when a Chinese woman who was to undergo complicated surgery was brought to the hospital.

Several nurses, an inhalation therapist and a social worker who spoke Cantonese dialect of the patient were on hand. The woman nodded her head in response to their instructions and explanations. Several days later, the woman's family told the social worker that the patient was hard of hearing and had understood practically nothing of what had been said to her.

Most major hospitals keep a list of the languages spoken by their staff, so they can serve as interpreters, but this has its shortcomings.

Pat Lundie, Toronto General information officer, said: "The staff members usually work in shifts and may not be in when a particular language is needed. Or they may be unable to leave their regular work."

Toronto General staff speaks a total of 36 languages but relies primarily on an interpreter service operated by its women's auxiliary.

Central Hospital, designed chiefly to serve the ethnic community, has a staff of 200 which can communicate in 33 languages.

Key words and phrases are available to the entire staff. The X-ray technician, for example, has a sheet that tells him how to say "hold your breath and don't move" in 25 languages.

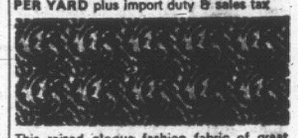

Mom Knows Before Baby

MOSCOW (UPI) — The best news for mom since they invented disposable paper diapers. The Russians call it an "electronic babysitter."

The cigarette box-size device, powered by batteries and placed in a baby's diaper, informs the mother with sound signals when diapers are wet —"even before the baby begins crying."

The gadget, according to the newspaper Trud, "is particularly important for those mothers who take their babies for stroller rides in wintertime."

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Campus clothes with style and flair . . .

Had you ever thought of Miss Frith's as a happy hunting ground for the back-to high school and college crowd? . . . We must confess, we hadn't . . . until the other day, that is . . . when we happened to be browsing around among the dresses and coats . . . and suddenly, it hit us just like that! . . . We saw so many fresh, young, exciting styles . . . just made to order for clothes-conscious back-to-schoolers . . . at prices well within the bounds of reason! . . . Among the dresses, we were struck with how many are of the wash and wear variety . . . even though they may look like wool, or other materials . . . These wash and wears come in nice fall colors . . . and just think of what a saving in dry cleaning costs! . . . Speaking of colors . . . we noticed quite a lot of the new mulberry shade . . . reds . . . browns . . . russets . . . greys . . . All very, very attractive! . . . Among the separates, there's an exciting collection of wool tartan kilts, slacks, shorts and vests . . . marvellous tartans, the like of which never came out of Scotland . . . but on the contrary, are being imported from Canada by the canny Scots! . . . and a simply staggering collection of blouses in every style, color and material . . . Do your back-to-school wardrobe shopping at . . . Miss Frith Millinery and Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Palely tinted glasses . . . rose, blue, green, mauve, champagne . . . camouflage fatigue, mask circles under the eyes.

Elegant imports at Wilson's . . .

Wilson's have just received a new coat from Paris that rates a visit for itself alone . . . even if there were nothing else to see, which, of course, is far from being the case because Wilson's new fall clothes are enough to make a girl turn lyrical! . . . But to get back to the coat . . . it's a heavy double-breasted city tweed by Laurent de Veilleux . . . double-breasted with amber buttons . . . two unpressed pleats back and front forming panels . . . brown suede belt linked in front with a gold chain . . . A truly magnificent coat so artfully cut that when you walk in it you're a symphony of motion! . . . size 14 . . . Another eye-catcher is the costume in gorgeous pansy shades . . . Double-breasted check coat with two back pleats . . . long sleeved dress with front pleat, in a fine heathery tweed . . . size 10 . . . We saw a very interesting grey knit costume by Sartor of Italy . . . Double-breasted coat has chalk white lines forming big squares . . . which opens up on a dress with same squares, plus interlocking circles . . . a nice surprise note that spells chic of a high order . . . For the woman who wears a size 16 coat . . . there's a beautiful coat in shades of jade green and royal blue check . . . simply styled with raglan sleeves, it's the sort of coat that slips easily over a suit . . . can be worn with simply everything! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Wear your neutral wool tweed jumper over a turtleneck ribbed sweater in a bright color.

Delightful little chairs at Home . . .

If you're passing Home Furniture, stop and look in The Gallery window . . . you'll see a fine reproduction of an old English Hunt Table which is very interesting indeed . . . It's semi-circular shaped with gold tooled leather top . . . and we're told that in the old days such tables were used to hold the wines, etc., served at those fabulous hunt breakfasts! . . . There's a beautiful English dining room suite in the same window, too . . . so feast your eyes! . . . Another shipment of those lovely imported hand-carved mahogany "Victorian" chairs has arrived at The Gallery . . . and don't let the term Victorian throw you . . . it has nothing to do with our city, or even the ponderous Victorian era . . . These chairs are extremely attractive . . . make a delightful accent note in a room . . . They can be used anywhere in the house . . . dining room, living room, hallway, bedroom . . . Nice for a desk or around a card table . . . The small chairs, priced at only $125 . . . come in a dozen different styles . . . covered with velvet or brocade . . . The ladies' and gentlemen's chairs are favorites of ours, too . . . These come in three different designs, and like the smaller chairs, are solid mahogany, hand-carved . . . authentic reproductions of antiques . . . (One of these, by the way, is being given as a prize in Home's Golden Jubilee draw . . . Have you put your ticket in yet?) . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

All shades of grey will be very, very good this fall and winter.

The sale everyone's been waiting for! . . .

The two really big annual events in Saba's fabric department are the Fabricanza Sales . . . which occur each spring and fall . . . Well, the Fall Fabricanza has just gotten under way . . . and will be continuing all of next week . . . It's a heaven-sent opportunity for you to acquire all the makings for your fall and winter wardrobe . . . and save enough money in the process to cover the cost of shoes and accessories, too! . . . So get in to Saba's early this coming week and see all their beautiful fabrics at way-down prices! . . . Just to mention some we consider outstanding . . . Completely washable acrylic prints, reduced from $4 to $2.99 a yard . . . Nylon jersey plush prints (these have a nap) for $1.99 . . . Wool-like printed challis . . . 36" and 54" wide, and regularly selling at $4 and $6 . . . now $2.99 and $3.99 . . . Washable Saragossa acrylic boucle, 54" and in 12 different colors, just $4.99 . . . and 54" polyester crepe, also in 12 colors, reduced from $10 to $6.99 . . . There are lovely hand-loomed silks from India . . . Fancy dress fabrics from Austria . . . Crimpknits . . . Liberty wool challis and wool prints . . . Worsted wool crepes . . . all at very much reduced prices . . . French haute couture woollens have had their price tags slashed in half . . . while camelhairs and winter whites are selling at 20% off . . . Don't miss the fabric event of the year . . . Fall Fabricanza at . . . Saba Bros. Ltd., 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

Scarves are getting longer and longer. Some new ones swirl around the neck and fall almost to the ankles.

Young clothes from England . . .

We promised you'd be seeing a lot of entirely new and intriguing young clothes at Madam and Eve this fall . . . and so it is coming to pass! . . . Harriet of London is a label which has never appeared here before . . . but it's one we predict you'll be watching out for more and more as time goes on . . . We were introduced to the first of these arrivals last week, and were much impressed . . . There's a camel wool dress with concealed zip front, elasticized waist with a little belt in front as accent . . . long cuffed sleeves . . . Another smart tunic style, also with long sleeves, comes in camel, brown or green . . . It has a low scoop neck, and a single patch pocket in the skirt . . . while a jumper tunic, with flaring skirt and back vent . . . scoop neckline . . . makes news with a patch pocket plunk in the middle of the front! . . . To wear with any of these dresses . . . if you like the pants look . . . are very well cut, wide-legged slacks . . . camel, brown or green pure wool . . . with a broad waistband and fly front . . . Tailored blouses . . . in really beautiful paisley patterns . . . either greens or browns . . . are also by Harriet, and co-ordinate with the slacks . . . And finally, there are long vests and pants to match in wash-and-wear fortrel . . . Navy and olive green . . . both of which are excellent shades for fall . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Farewell to unsightly hair . . .

One thing no woman needs is superfluous hair . . . especially when it takes the form of dark fuzz on the upper lip . . . nothing can so completely detract from femininity! . . . If unsightly hair . . . in the wrong places . . . is a problem with you, do put an end to it now by making an appointment at the House of Glamour for their exclusive Unique Epilatory hair removal treatment . . . Numerous Victoria women bless the day when they first discovered this new method of hair removal . . . It's fast, painless and effective . . . done without benefit of needle, wax or chemicals . . . for a mere fraction of the cost of electrolysis . . . Although it takes hair out by the roots, it's completely painless, we're assured . . . Completely safe, too . . . It can be used to remove unwanted hair from any part of the body . . . though we imagine it will be especially welcomed by women who have too much fuzz on their upper lip . . . a too low-growing hairline, or dark leg hair showing through nylons or detracting from the pretty look of bare arms . . . The treatment is completed in a matter of minutes . . . and while we won't go so far as to say hair will never grow again . . . it will certainly be greatly retarded! . . . H of G's Miss Dorothy is especially trained to give this Unique Epilatory treatment . . . so make an appointment with her at . . . House of Glamour, 653 View St., 386-6188.

How to be a welcome guest . . .

We're dieting again, darn it . . . so it's painful to dwell on the subject of sweets . . . especially when the goodies in question are those oh-so-delicious . . . delectable . . . de-lovely confections you find at Welch's Candy Shop! . . . But duty calls, and we feel we should remind you that a box of Welch's is just about the nicest offering you could possibly pack in your suitcase for your weekend hostess at cottage or camp . . . And you husbands who are batching it while the family's away . . . a box of Welch's in hand when you present yourself for one of those dinner invitations you're bound to get will go a long way toward a return bid! . . . Matter of fact, we can't think of any small gift that fits so many occasions as a box of Welch's . . . and it says "thank you" to perfection . . . Welch's candy is fresh, pure, wholesome . . . invariably delicious . . . And with something like 50 different varieties to choose from, every ilk of sweet tooth is catered to . . . Another thing . . . Welch's has a weekend special every Friday and Saturday on one or other variety of their wrapped candies . . . Treat yourself to some next weekend! . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 383-6422.

The bra-less trend is beginning to catch on and Susan Separe, 21, of Philadelphia demonstrates just what she'd like to do with those confining pieces of wearing apparel. Manufacturers are getting worried about their declining sales but girl-watchers are happy.

Widespread Bra-Lessness Eyed by Girl Watchers

NEW YORK (AP) — In the name of fashion, freedom or just plain fun, some American girls are throwing away their brassieres, much to the dismay of lingerie manufacturers and the delight of girl watchers.

The unconfined look for women is "in" again, decreed by fashion designers who shape styles close to the body, by feminine militants who see the rigid, big bosom as a symbol of subservience and by members of the "now" generation who preach freedom, honesty and "do your own thing."

An Associated Press survey shows, however, the trend is far from unanimous. It is generally confined to young, slender girls in big cities. Few firms report widespread bra-lessness, although a Pomona, Calif., welding engineer was fired because she urged a "No-Bra Friday" at the plant where she worked.

In San Francisco, Donald Magnin of Joseph Magnin's, a west coast chain of stores, said the bra-less trend has "taken hold here very definitely in certain segments of the population."

Asked how his store was adapting to the trend, he said: "We're catering to it to the degree that we've almost abandoned our traditional bra business—or should I say it's abandoned us."

The manager of a Seattle store catering to young people said 25 to 30 per cent of her customers have given up wearing bras.

Heidi Obzina, a Seattle salesgirl said: "I stopped wearing bras because they were so uncomfortable. I was the flattest person and since I stopped wearing a bra I've been growing. My boy-friend is amazed."

Dear Mrs. Farmer,

I am having difficulty adjusting the front of the one-piece patterns that have French darts starting either at the waistline to the bust or starting a couple of inches above the waistline to the bust. I don't like a very loose fitting dress, I want them more fitted but can't find a pattern like this in a one-piece pattern. I want to use a pattern of this type for some embroidered fabric and don't think I should use too many seams. — Mrs. E.F.S.

Dear MRS. E.F.S.:

I'm afraid that a pattern such as you are using will never give you the fit you are looking for. A dress with only one piece of fabric for the front will fit in the bust area but there is no way to make it fitted under the bust unless you add darts under the bustline. This wouldn't be as attractive as choosing a pattern with three panels in the front. By panels, I am referring to the two curved seams that extend over the bust and continue to the lower edge of the skirt. You will have a new line to your dress with just the proper amount of fit, nothing should be fitted too close to the body for the current fashions.

Many times we are afraid to use seams in print or embroidered fabrics because of breaking up the pattern. You'll find that when you consider the appearance of the entire dress instead of focusing on just one seam under construction, the overall effect is beautiful and we aren't really aware of the seaming but rather the fabric and the lovely way it fits.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"The best part was when the winner plucked hair out of the loser's chest while reciting, 'she loves me, she loves me not'....!"

TODAY'S RECIPE

BITTER LEMON PEARS

Three fresh Bartlett pears, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 egg, separated, ⅛ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon lemon rind, 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine, ¾ cup cut-up fresh dates.

Pare, halve and core pears; cube and coat with 1 tablespoon lemon juice in shallow 1½-quart baking dish. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Meanwhile, beat egg white until foamy; gradually beat in salt and sugar and continue beating until stiff. Fold in egg yolk, lemon rind, remaining 2 tablespoons lemon juice and butter. Sprinkle dates over pears then pour egg mixture over all. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees 15 minutes longer. Serve warm. (Makes 5 servings.)

DEAR ABBY . . .

He Lost His Head

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You are the only person who can help me, so please answer this in a hurry and help me get my sister back to normal.

After an ideal 20-year marriage, my sister's husband lost his head over a beautiful but dumb 19-year-old kid. Right now he and his child bride are honeymooning in Europe and my sister is home crying her eyes out.

What happens to an intelligent man when he hits 50? How can he walk away from the woman who has loved him for 20 years just because a pretty young thing comes along?

This has shaken up the whole family. Now we all look at our husbands and wonder which one of them will be the next to run off with a teenager. Please give us your support.—Belleville, Michigan.

DEAR BELLEVILLE: All intelligent men do not lose their heads when they hit 50. Obviously your sister's "ideal 20-year marriage" was not as ideal as it appeared to be. It's unfair to sit in judgment knowing nothing of the human needs of the people involved.

DEAR ABBY: I am tall, dark and considered handsome. I am in the medical profession which affords me an excellent opportunity to meet attractive young women. (Nurses, patients, doctors' daughters, etc.)

My problem is that I am 30 years old, and some of my friends have told me that if I am thinking about marriage to forget it because 30 is considered over the hill. Is it?—Medico.

DEAR MEDICO: Don't be silly. At 30, you are young enough to CLIMB the hill.

DEAR ABBY: Our child Rick is 14, and he doesn't know the first thing about how to handle money. It's all his father's fault because his father didn't have anything when he was a boy, and he wants his son to have it better.

Rick gets $10 a week for just breathing. He's supposed to keep his room picked up, and I don't mean make his own bed, I mean just drop his socks and underwear in the clothes hamper. But he doesn't even do that.

He's never saved a quarter in his life, but he sure knows how to get money. His father pays him $10 for every "A" and $5 for every "B." Also, this big lummox had two teeth extracted last week so he let us know that he was putting his teeth under his pillow in case the Good Fairy wanted to buy them. Well, his father slipped a $10 bill under his pillow that night and bought the teeth. (Isn't 14 a little old for that?)

Please say something about the importance of teaching children the value of a dollar.—Rick's Mom.

DEAR MOM: Before you can teach your small boy how to handle money, you'd better teach your big boy how to handle his son. Every child should be taught to save a part of everything he gets. Your husband, as well intentioned as he may be, is denying his son the very experiences that made a man out of him. The way to learn the value of money is to work for it.

Spain Comes Alive With Fashion First

By EUNICE FRIED

Change is stirring in Spain, and fashion, as it so often does, leads the way. Where Barcelona once slept in the sun, it now has its own fashion counterpart to London's Kings Road.

Called Tuset, the street is a broad, handsome stretch of fine old residential buildings whose ground floors house brightly canopied boutiques and bars. But despite elegant interiors and advanced fashion ideas, prices in Barcelona's boutiques are remarkably low by American standards.

At Roura, startlingly unconventional dresses start at $40. Across the street, Baulen is featuring black and white in sweeping evening pants and long dresses with heavy, brilliantly colored embroidery. Wide, jewelled belts are the favorite accessory.

Gales denies the image of conservative Spain with its London-inspired mod clothes. From the boutique's balcony loud speakers blare the street's song, "El Tuset." Skirts here are micro-mini, with shirts and dresses in colorful velour.

In the late afternoon, Tuset really comes alive, as the young crowd descends on the bars, such as Ischia, Tuset Pub and the Drac. The boutiques stay open, too, and the whole street becomes a beautiful fiesta for the delighted tourist.

BERGER: Out of Smoke-Filled Union Halls

The Party Chiefs

By Dennis Bell
Canadian Press

VANCOUVER — Opposition Leader Tom Berger tinkers with the finely tuned electoral machinery of his British Columbia New Democratic Party like a computer programmer trying to balance input with output.

Berger, a boyish 36, has been provincial NDP leader for less than six months. The stubtle, often unnoticed changes and adjustments he's wrought in sytle and strategy will be tested in the Aug. 27 provincial election.

The NDP has undergone a quiet metamorphosis since April. The party has moved out of the dingy, smoke-filled union halls that were the backbone of the old Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation and into an orbit through academic circles and the left-oriented middle class.

The first evidence of this change in direction was the election of Berger himself as party leader in a carefully planned coup that reached fruition the night of April 12 at a leadership convention in The Hotel Vancouver.

Berger's people saw it as a final proof of a coming-of-age, a breaking with outdated and dogmatic democratic socialist ideology and a first step along the road to victory.

And it was also a knock-down tooth-and-nail fight that went right to the wire when Berger edged MLA Dave Barrett of Coquitlam on the second ballot by 36 votes — 411 to 375.

The next day Berger presented Premier W. A. C. Bennett with the seeds of an election issue. The new leader told a news conference that an NDP government would take over B.C. Telephone Co.

The story made front-page headlines across the province, though Berger was merely repeating what has been announced party policy for at least a dozen years.

Bennett swooped in and has drawn up battle lines against "the heavy hand of state socialism." In the premier's mind, the election is a straight two-way fight between free enterprise and Marxian socialism.

The premier calls Berger "a radical, a Marxian socialist," and when Bennett visits his stronghold in the hinterlands of the B.C. interior, he adds the epithet "city-slicker lawyer."

Curiously, one of the factors that nearly cost Berger the NDP leadership was his pragmatic approach to the traditional tenets of democratic socialism.

Berger has a decided preference for the party's academic adherernts from the University of British Columbia and left-wing professional people over hard-nosed blue-collar labor bosses.

The Opposition leader is still in hot water with the NDP's radically inclined youth wing and his blessing by many segments of the powerful B.C. Federation of Labor is tempered with political expediency.

Publicly, Berger laughs off the Social Credit "smear tactics" as the last desperate gambit of "an old man who is losing control of the situation."

Privately, the party is alarmed about the effects of Premier Bennett's campaign strategy, especially in the interior, where Berger must score heavily if there is to be an NDP government after Aug. 27.

"Low key" is the cornerstone of NDP campaign strategy, Berger is not a great orator, so he steers clear of big political rallies whenever possible and "mainstreets" instead. One of his favorite tactics is the political pub-crawl.

Berger applies the logistics of personal contact in beer parlors to the province as a whole. Five thousand NDP supporters at a rally, he reasons, generate a lot of publicity but not many votes.

But set 5,000 New Democrats loose on the streets pounding on doors for face-to-face meetings and the result, he predicts, is 5,000 more NDP votes.

Berger's speeches and campaign announcements to reporters give evidence of the legal training that has made him one of the top labor and civil rights lawyers in the country.

The son of a Swedish-born RCMP sergeant, Berger was born in Victoria and graduated from the UBC law school in 1956, the year his predecessor Robert Strachan became party leader.

He admits to an early flirtation with the Liberal party and held a membership card in the Grits' old Vancouver Burrard federal constituency association during 1958.

Shortly thereafter he moved to the left and in 1960 was an unsuccessful CCF candidate in Vancouver Centre in the provincial election that year. Berger became the NDP's first provincial president when the new party was formed in October, 1961.

His first electioral victory came in in 1962 when he defeated Ron Basford, now consumer affairs minister, in the federal Vancouver Burrard riding. However, he lost the seat in the 1963 federal election.

He stayed active at the provincial level and at the same time built up a thriving law practice that saw him carry several precedent-setting cases to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Berger acted for George E. P. Jones, former chairman of the B.C. purchasing commission, who sued Premier Bennett for slander after being "retired" by a bill approved by the legislature.

He won Supreme Court of Canada confirmation of a $15,000 judgment against Bennett for Jones.

In 1966 Berger was elected in the Vancouver Burrard provincial riding and the same year set in motion a campaign for the party leadership.

He lost his leadership fight with Strachan by a two-to-one margin at the party's 1967 provincial convention. The acrimonious battle left the NDP bitterly divided.

Strachan saw that another fight was shaping up for this year's convention, and announced his intention to resign last November. The Cowichan-Malahat MLA's resignation opened the door for a leadership transition that was relatively free of the strife that followed the earlier contest.

Berger is a serious campaigner, but occasionally he lightens his speeches with humor.

He says Premier Bennett has been in office for so long he is taking credit for everything but the weather — and even that is changing. Not long ago, said Mr. Berger, a man met Mr. Bennett on a Victoria street and said "Good morning."

"Thank you," replied the premier, as Mr. Berger tells it.

DE WOLF: Absolutely Nothing to Lose

VANCOUVER—Conservative Leader John de Wolf has never been elected to legislative office and concedes he's not likely to break that precedent in the Aug. 27 British Columbia election.

Mr. de Wolf, a 38-year-old economist, has injected a refreshing political candor into the campaign. He feels he has absolutely nothing to lose by laying all his cards on the table.

The Tory leader is the only Conservative seeking election in the 55 seats in the B.C. legislature—the other three parties have full slates, and a lot to lose through miscalculations.

Mr. de Wolf has picked one of the toughest ridings in the province, the Vancouver-Point Grey stronghold of Liberal Leader Patrick McGeer and running mate Garde Gardom.

It's a two-member riding, but the Tories are offering Mr. de Wolf alone. Dr. McGeer finished about 6,000 votes ahead of the nearest Social Crediter in the 1966 election, and Mr. Gardom was about 2,000 ahead.

There were no Tories in the 1966 race in Point Grey. This year, the Conservatives waited until the night before nominations closed before they finally nominated Mr. de Wolf.

DIDN'T WANT IT

"I have only two ambitions in this provincial election," a sombre Mr. de Wolf told a news conference. "And realistically at this moment, one of them is not getting elected."

He said his objectives do include trying to "change the political climate in B.C. and to set out the initiatives, goals, programs and opportunities toward which we should be moving."

In other words, he regards this campaign as a dry run for the effort the Tories hope to mount in the next B.C. election, in 1972 or 1973. By that time, he reasons, Premier Bennett will have retired.

Mr. de Wolf believes that with the premier no longer at the helm Social Credit will disintegrate, leaving a vacuum on the right of the political spectrum the Conservatives must be prepared to fill.

"If I believed the only function of a political party, its leader or its candidates was to get votes I would not have stood at our leadership convention," he said.

"I will be a candidate because I want to set out in both the economic and social fields what we can achieve," said Mr. de Wolf, adding that he was "not particularly interested" in the number of votes he receives.

In addition to the impending destruction of Social Credit, Mr. de Wolf believes the NDP will soon start falling apart because of its internal contradictions.

NICE TO OTHERS

"Thus, finally, we can start to initiate something better in this province," he said.

In the weeks following his assumption of the Tory leadership at a June convention, Mr. de Wolf performed a number of curious political peregrinations—he was nice to the other parties.

He launched forth on a "campaign tour" at the start of August, even though he hadn't been nominated and there were no other Tory candidates in sight. The party had no member in the last legislature.

At Prince George, he unveiled a five-page policy statement chock full of pulp mills, petro-chemical plants, a Crown-owned industrial development corporation, smelters and steel mills.

Then he said he would approach the Liberals and the NDP to see if they would endorse sections of his platform.

"It is not usual for political parties to work together, but it is not the sole function of political parties to fight each other," he said in the midst of the province's worst inter-party battling in years.

He coupled this plea with endorsation of three candidates from other parties—NDP Leader Tom Berger in Vancouver-Burrard, former NDP leader Robert Strachan in Cowichan-Malahat and Social Credit Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan in Chilliwack.

'NOT BRIGHT IDEA'

"It's not a very bright idea," said the NDP provincial president, John Laxton, who also accepted with thanks Mr. de Wolf's endorsement of the two New Democrats.

"John is unaware of the political realities in British Columbia," sighed Dr. McGeer, whose party didn't get a plug from the Conservative leader.

The man raising all the political eyebrows is a short, stout former newspaper reporter with an unruly mop of hair and a closet full of Tory-blue suits with vests.

Mr. de Wolf first came to prominence in the early years of the Bennett regime as a finance writer for The Province, Vancouver's morning newspaper. He wrote a long series of stories on Premier Bennett's financial policies.

The "B.C. is Bust" articles infuriated Mr. Bennett, who was trying to prove the province was solvent, and brought Mr. de Wolf to the attention of national Tory luminaries.

During 1962 and 1963 Mr. de Wolf was special assistant to former federal finance minister George Nowlan. In 1967 he was chairman of the economic policy committee at the party's national leadership convention in Toronto.

But in B.C., there hasn't been a Conservative in the legislature since 1956, and the Tories made their last major effort at the provincial level in the 1963 election.

That year, with E. Davie Fulton at the helm, the Conservatives fielded 44 candidates. The election was a disaster. Mr. Fulton himself was soundly defeated in the Kamloops riding by former highways minister P. A. (Flying Phil) Gaglardi.

NONE CAME CLOSE

Mr. Fulton returned to federal politics in 1965—eventually losing his seat to a Liberal in last year's federal election—and the provincial party foundered without a leader.

Only three Conservatives ran in the 1966 provincial election, and none came close. Last year lawyer Charles Maclean of North Vancouver, an unsuccessful federal candidate, called for a leadership convention.

The party reluctantly agreed and Mr. Maclean, a voluble, unpredictable man who emphasized the "progressive" in the Tory nomenclature, was predicted as a sure winner.

Mr. de Wolf went into the leadership convention as the nominee of the party's "old guard" and edged Mr. Maclean, 36, by five votes—133 to 128.

Mr. Maclean's supporters left the convention grumbling about a "boatload of little old ladies from Victoria" allegedly imported by Mr. de Wolf at the last moment to save the day.

Mr. de Wolf admitted he went on a last-ditch roundup of support the morning of the leadership vote and that "two little old ladies from Victoria" had their $40 registration fee paid for them.

Mr. Maclean had talked in terms of a partially complete or complete Tory slate in the election. Mr. de Wolf was for holding the line at one or two candidates in key ridings, or none at all.

"This is not our election," he told the leadership convention. "Ours is the one that follows."

$1 Million Let In School Work

The B.C government announced Thursday school boards in Courtenay, Trail, Langley and Surrey have been authorized to let contracts for more than a million dollars in school construction.

Largest of the new contracts is the $929,793 Fruitvale Junior Secondary in the Trail school district, to be built by Kenyon and Co. Ltd. of Penticton.

The Courtenay contract is worth $94,050, for a two-room addition to Comox Junior Secondary. Langley got $30,794 and Surrey $62,500.

Man Convicted Of Threatening

NEW YORK (AP)—Carlos Valle, 20, of New York City, was convicted by a federal court jury Friday of telephoning two threats to kill President Nixon last Feb. 24.

Valle was charged with making the calls to the FBI and the secret service. He denied the charges.

Judge Edward C. McLean set sentencing for Oct. 1. Valle could get a 10-year sentence and $2,000 in fines for the two calls.

Red Cross Biafra Flights To Stop?

GENEVA (The Manchester Guardian) — The International Red Cross has decided to withdraw from aid efforts to Nigeria and Biafra unless Nigeria shortly gives an encouraging response to compromise proposals for resuming an airlift into Biafra.

Neither Nigeria nor Biafra would be greatly concerned about such a withdrawal. In Nigeria, the Red Cross is alread in the process of handing its relief functions over to the Nigerian rehabilitation commission.

The Red Cross airlift to Biafra was halted in June, and most of the organization's pilots are on leave or have come to the end of their contracts.

Moreover Biafra evidently would prefer relief efforts to be channelled through joint church aid — which, along with the French Red Cross, is continuing to fly into Biafra by night.

The International Red Cross is asking Nigeria to give up its demand that relief planes be inspected on federal territory—a condition which Biafra adamantly refuses to accept.

Leadership Collision Seen In New Ghana Constitution

By JIM HOAGLAND

ACCRA, Ghana (WP) — Ghana's second republic was born Friday as the constituent assembly enacted a constitution that will guide this key African country back to civilian rule.

Last minute alterations in the constitution, however, may have locked two of Ghana's most powerful leaders on a collision course that imperils a true return to political stability.

The tensions created by these alterations were apparent in Accra Friday. The assembly voted to promulgate the constitution late Friday morning, about 10 hours after someone had set off a small explosive device against an outside wall of the parliament house.

Assembly members leaving the building walked over pieces of glass blown from two ground-floor windows in parliament's courtyard.

STICK OF DYNAMITE

No other damage was done by the device, which apparently was bigger than a firecracker but smaller than a stick of dynamite.

No arrests have been made. The explosion, as well as a shakeup in Ghana's military command last week, are being linked here to the increasingly open struggle between two of the country's leaders Brig. Gen. A. A. Afrifa and K. A. Gbedemah.

Afrifa, the chairman of the ruling National Liberation Council (NLC) that deposed Kwame Nkrumah in a 1966 military coup, has made no secret of his intense dislike for Gbedemah, one of the two leading candidates for prime minister in next Friday's national elections.

Gbedemah (pronounced Bed-a-ma) was Nkrumah's chief political lieutenant until the two split in 1961 and Gbedemah went into voluntary exile.

He returned after the 1966 coup wrote an end to Nkrumah's rule and Ghana's first republic.

POLITICALLY DAMAGED

Gbedemah, politically damaged by his association with Nkrumah, started the election campaign well behind Dr. D. A. Busia, who is backed by Afrifa.

But Gbedemah's strong showing in recent weeks meant Afrifa might have to give power to the man he violently opposes.

This may account for the liberation council's unexpected — and successful — request to the aseembly at the last minute to drop the honorary national president (whose election would have been controlled by the majority party) in favor of a presidential council, composed of Afrifa and the two next ranking NLC members.

The constitution severly limits presidential power. But the military now retains at least a nominal hold on power.

"Gbedemah may be elected," one knowledgeable Ghanian said, "but he may also be ruling with a gun at his head."

Afrifa is also thought to have taken out a little extra insurance last week by shifting three of his top military commanders to less vital posts.

All three are members of the Ewe tribe, which also happens to be Gbedemah's tribe.

One of the commanders shifted (he is due to go to Washington as military attache) headed Ghana's first brigade, which would be called into action in Accra if there was any trouble after the elections.

This possibility is not dismissed lightly here. If Gbedemah wins, he will undoubtedly have to face a legal challenge to his right to be prime minister.

The constitution promulgated Friday bars from public office persons against whom derogatory findings have been made by the commission of inquiries that investigated corruption under Nkrumah.

1,800 Persons Flee Homes As Fires Blacken South

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 1,800 residents fled their homes today as fires rampaged unchecked over a huge swath of remote and relatively unpopulated brush and grassland in southern California.

An estimated 1,500 persons were ordered out of their homes during the night in northern San Diego County where fire had blackened at least 45,000 acres, officials said, in the wilting, late-summer dry heat.

The biggest fire started Friday on Camp Pendleton marine base about 80 miles south of Los Angeles and 15 miles south of the Western White House, but it was burning eastward today and said to be no threat to the summer seaside residence where President Nixon has been staying.

No injuries were reported.

Officials said they could not stop a 12,000-acre fire near Fallbrook 85 miles south of Los Angeles from a valley containing several hundred homes—including some in the $100,000 range. A trailer park was also threatened, officials said.

Reports conflicted about property damage. Officials said one report, that 15 houses burned near Escondido Friday night, is incorrect.

In El Cajon, 40 miles south of Camp Pendleton, a small 90-acre fire consumed six houses before it was put out.

3 OUT OF CONTROL

Three major fires still burned uncontrolled in San Diego County and two others crackled over parched areas of San Bernardino County east of Los Angeles.

Fire fighters were hampered by near-record temperatures that hit 118 Friday in some southern California desert towns and by humidity that sagged to a low 10 per cent even along the coast.

Winds fanned the Camp Pendleton fire—about 80 miles south of Los Angeles—across 20,000 acres of dry brush and into the adjacent Cleveland National Forest, where it burned 5,000 timbered acres.

Kopechne Parents Win Hearing Delay

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Mary Jo Kopechne's parents have won a delay in a court move by District Attorney Edmund Dinis of New Bedford, Mass., to have their daughter's body exhumed for an autopsy.

Dinis had hoped for a final ruling in time for the scheduled Sept. 3 opening of an inquest into the accident a month ago in which the blonde secretary drowned after a car driven by Senator Edward M. Kennedy (Dem., Mass.) plunged off a bridge.

Instead of hearing the petition itself next Monday as planned, Judge Bernard C. Brominski of Common Pleas Court has decided to set aside that day for arguments for its dismissal.

After a 40-minute conference Thursday with Dinis and lawyers for Mary Jo's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kopechne, the judge said:

"The hearing scheduled for Monday is temporarily postponed. Instead, we will hear arguments at that time on the motions presented to the court."

Brominski said the arguments might be completed in two hours, but that he probably would not hand down a decision until several days later.

Dinis declined to say whether the delay would force him to postpone the inquest.

The Kopechne's say Pennsylvania is "without jurisdiction and authority" to exhume the body.

The Kopechnes, who say an autopsy now would serve no useful purpose, said in their dismissal motion that Dinis's petition was an attack on the findings of the medical examiner, who said death was due to drowning.

"In law, such a legal determination, made in one sovereign state, cannot be collaterally attacked in another sovereign state," the motion said.

John E. O'Connnor of Wilkes-Barre, one of the Kopechne lawyers, put it this way:

"In effect, we believe it is illegal for Massachusetts to ask Pennsylvania to order an autopsy that should have properly been ordered in Massachusetts in the first place. They just can't come in now and get that permission."

Modern-Day Agnosticism Being Countered by Clergy

The Church is dead.

That's the way it sounds when you converse with many young Victorians today.

The Church is square, they say. It doesn't fit into this Space Age.

Monsignor Michael O'Connell of the Roman Catholic diocese of Victoria and Rev. H. Gordon Walker of the Anglican Church have devised a way of replying to modern day agnosticism.

At the evening division of the University of Victoria, starting Sept. 22, they will present 10 approaches to God, each relating to society and a changing world.

"Each Monday we shall present an outstanding leader of his own faith," said Monsignor O'Connell. "He will answer questions and we will have to stand up to the skeptics as well as the devout."

The speakers will be:

Shalon Kalfon, spiritual leader of Victoria's Jewish congregation and a graduate of the University of Jerusalem.

Father James Roberts, Roman Catholic pastor of St. Joseph's parish, Port Moody.

Amar Singh, minister in charge of Victoria's Sikh Temple.

Dr. Hossain Danesh, psychiatrist and lecturer on the Baha'i Faith.

Right Rev. John Anderson, Anglican bishop of Vancouver Island.

John Priestman, professional engineer and clerk to the Victoria Lodge, Society of Friends (Quakers).

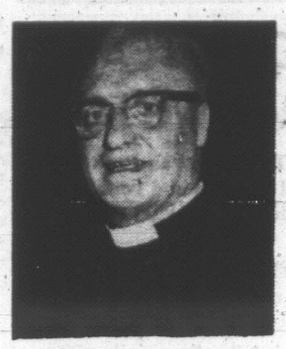

Franklin H. Smith, lecturer to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon).

Edward T. Rand, Victoria lecturer to the Church of Christ, Scientist.

Pastor Darren Michael of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church.

Phillip Hewitt, minister of Victoria Unitarian Church, author of An Unfettered Faith and On Being a Unitarian.

"We believe these talks will be a help to many people who don't know where they're going in these startling times," said Rev. Gordon Walker.

IRISH-BORN Dr. F. E. H. James returns to the pulpit at Metropolitan United Church Sunday at 11 a.m. He was minister at the church from 1951 to 1964 and has since conducted a mission for the English Methodist Church in the West Indies. With Mrs. James he is now living in retirement in Victoria.

Bible School Planning to Aid Handicapped

The daily Bible vacation school at Emmanuel Baptist Church has been raising funds for handicapped boys and girls.

They have purchased a gift and will present it to a representative of the George R. Pearkes Clinic at the 7 p.m. Sunday service.

"Our youngsters are really concerned about children less fortunate than themselves," a church spokesman said.

They will wind up the Bible vacation school with a special program of music and readings from the Bible.

Guest preacher will be Rev. J. Willox Duncan, Vancouver, who served until recently on the Canadian Baptist Mission Field in India.

Vatican Allows Cloistered Orders More Freedom

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican issued new rules this week for nuns and monks in cloistered orders to give them greater freedom in choosing how to separate themselves from the world.

But the new rules, which reaffirm the value of contemplative life in the modern world, implicitly reject the demands of some nuns and monks that the barriers between them and the outside world be made only symbolic.

The rules were drawn up by the congregation for the religious and approved by Pope Paul VI.

They affirm that there must be some kind of material separation of cloistered orders but each order is left free to determine, with The Vatican's final approval, how this is to take place.

"This leaves them free to get rid of things like gates and grills," said one Vatican source.

CONSIDER THE EVIDENCE

Christ... Flower Child or Not?

REV. LESTER KINSOLVING

A current and fairly widespread tendency to portray Jesus Christ as either a "flower child" or, at the other extreme, a violent revolutionary, indicates the truth of the maxim that in time of conflict, Christ is the first conscript. The flower children have discovered that many of the "straight" community can easily be pulled "up tight" with a reminder that Jesus, too, wore sandals, a beard and long hair.

Kinsolving

Yet Jesus would have been regarded as radical indeed had he been shorn, shaven and unsandalled (the most familiar footwear of the day) or disdained the attire and appearance of any Nazarene business man.

The Gospel record that Jesus was in fact a small business man (assistant in and later proprietor of a carpentry firm — Mark 6:3) may prove uncomfortable to despisers of the "establishment."

But he not only spent much of his life as a business man but, after entering the ministry (at about age 30 — Luke 3:23), he specialized in preaching in parables — almost all of which, either directly or indirectly, dealt with money.

The Gospels also provide illustrations that, despite his having radical views on what he believed outmoded Sabbath and dietary regulations, he could hardly be considered a dropout or a thorough anti-establishmentarian:

● After healing one leper (Matthew 8:4) he adhered to contemporary health laws by advising the leper to "go show thyself to the priest" — the requirement for release from leprous quarantine.

● "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's," he said (Matthew 22:21) "and unto God the things that are God's."

(This was a brilliant parry of an apparent attempt either to recruit him to the movement resisting payment of taxes, or else to have him indicted. While he avoided defining just what does belong to Caesar, his calling a tax collector to be one of the Apostles (Matthew 9:9) indicates that he was hardly an anarchist.)

● As for the established priesthood, he did not campaign for its abolition, even though he frequently and heatedly disagreed with some of its members.

And had he been completely opposed to the established religion of his time (rather than striving for its reformation), he would hardly have cared enough about Jerusalem's Temple to risk his life by driving out the dishonest money changers (Matt. 21:13; Mark 11:17; Luke 19:14; John 2:16).

CUSTOM OF GOING

● If, as some contemporary church critics imply, Jesus was so opposed to organized religion that he favored disorganized religion, it is doubtful indeed that he would have made a custom of going into the Synagogue on the Sabbath (Luke 4:16).

Nor would the 12 especially selected leaders of his movement (whom he devoted his entire ministry to training) have immediately selected a replacement for Judas Iscariot, after his defection. (Acts of the Apostles 1:26).

While Jesus' violence in cleansing the Temple is a strong indication that he was by no means the "Prince of Peace-at-any-price," this isolated example is not enough to sustain a characterization of him as a revolutionary.

Nevertheless contemplation of Jesus' violence in the Temple has led to the manufacture of another caricature, at the opposite extreme of the Jesus the pacifist hippie.

POLICE POSTER

There is currently being widely circulated a police "Wanted" poster — with a drawing of Jesus who looks like a combination of the pirate Blackbeard and an ulcerous Karl Marx.

"WANTED — for sedition, criminal anarchy, vagrancy, and conspiring to overthrow the established government," proclaims the poster.

This poster also reports that Jesus "dresses poorly" (the Romans thought enough of his clothing to cast lots for it) and "associates with bums."

While he lived among the poor — few of whom, like bums, were poor by choice — Jesus was equally congenial with such wealthy people as Joseph of Arimithea, Zaccheus and Nicodemus.

NONE WERE TOLD

None of these were told to sell all they had and give to the poor, as Jesus told a rich young ruler whom he perceived was unduly devoted to wealth (Luke 18:23).

In contrast to this far-fetched attempt to portray Jesus as a Galilean Billy The Kid, there is the initial verdict of Pontius Pilate: "Why crucify him, what evil hath he done? . . . I am innocent of the blood of this just man." (Matt. 27:23).

However violent Jesus may have been in cleansing the Temple, he is most poignantly and familiarly remembered on a cross.

And something of the peril of attempting to modernize Jesus is seen in the experience of the devoutly conservative family who reproached their son for smoking by asking:

"Can you imagine Jesus Christ with a cigarette in his mouth?"

"No," replied the youth. "Can you imagine him with a toothbrush?"

'Cutting' for Propagation Depends on Environment

By JACK BEASTALL

This is another in our series of illustrated articles for beginners. It deals with the removal of a small piece of a plant for the purpose of making a new plant. The piece is called a "cutting," the method is by "cuttage."

Jack

TYPES: Softwood, taken in early spring of new growths. Root easily but wilt rapidly unless in a propagating case.

Half-ripe, taken from late July to mid-September. A little slower in rooting but easier to handle.

Hardwood, taken October to December. Limited to certain kinds of plants.

For this article, we are concerned with half-ripe cuttings which are successful with the majority of plants.

TIME: There is no calendar date for taking cuttings, everything depends on previous weather conditions, water and food available, and the general health of the plants.

TESTING: Figure 1 in illustration shows how to determine if a shot is in condition to make roots reasonably quickly. For clarity, leaves are not shown.

Tips For The Home Gardener

The shoot is bent over the first finger and squeezed with thumb and finger to a hairpin shape. One of three things will happen as shown at 2; the shoot will flatten if too soft, break in two if too hard, or crack part way through when in what is believed to be the ideal condition.

Shoots receiving noon and afternoon sunshine ripen ahead of those in morning sun only. Try shoots from different positions on the shrub.

This test is used on all leaf-losing and evergreen broad-leaved shrubs grown for their flowers or foliage.

NOTE: The above test does not apply to plants of the conifer group (cedars, pines, arbor-vitae) because these are trees although they may only grow to three feet in dwarf forms. They are not evergreen shrubs.

HEEL CUTTINGS: These are taken as shown at 4 by pulling downwards to obtain a heel of the old stem. Heather cuttings (A) and conifer cuttings (D) are taken this way.

LENGTH: The average cutting is three to four inches in length when finally prepared for inserting into the rooting medium. A piece 12 to 36 inches long is a branch, not a cutting.

When collecting cuttings, take five or six inches of growth, making a new cut just below a leaf node (see B, C, and E).

Remove lower leaves (whether large or small) so that about two inches of bare stem can be put into the medium. Don't tear off the leafs, this damages the stem and sometimes removes the cells that produce the roots. Place thumbnail at base of leaf stem (3) and pull leaf over nail.

Shown at A are two heather cuttings. The short winter flowering is only one to two inches long; the longer summer flowering about three inches.

Two kinds of broom (B), one more or less leafless and five inches, the other with leaves about three to four inches long.

The only cutting shown that is taken in spring of soft growths is the chrysanthemum at E, a young growth about three inches long, taken from the roots of an old plant.

Sunday Concert

Sixty young people who call themselves "Sing-Out Victoria" will perform Sunday in a concert at Beacon Hill Park.

The group, whose ages are between 14 and 22, have been featured through the summer three nights a week at Buchart Gardens.

The concert starts at 2:30 p.m. in the Cameron Bandshell.

Saanich Club Takes Island Boxla Crown

Saanich UCT rambled to the Vancouver Island midget "A" lacrosse crown Friday at Braefoot Park by clipping Victoria Home Lumber 14-9 in the deciding game of a best-of-three playoff.

Saanich and Victoria, the host team, enter the B.C. championship, a four-team, double-knockout series, next Saturday and Sunday at Memorial Arena. New Westminster and North Burnaby are also entered.

Norm Baker and Jim McCreesh, with four goals each, led the winners. Mark Patterson, with two, and Mike Jacobs, Mike Wilson, Rusty Ralston and Kurt Robb, with one each, completed UCT's scoring.

Don Ferguson scored three goals and Rick Sylvester and Danny Green scored two each for Victoria. Ron McGinnis and Jim Neme had one goal each.

OAKLAND HOOP TEAM GOES TO WASHINGTON

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Basketball Association has announced the sale and transfer of Oakland Oaks to Washington lawyer Earl Foreman for $2,600,000.

Executive director Thurlo McCrady of the ABA and Foreman will meet in Washington to work out details of the transfer.

Coach Alex Hannum, led the financially-ailing Oaks to the league championship last season.

Foreman said he and Hannum will meet in San Francisco next Tuesday "to talk about coaching plans for the Washington club."

Schreyer Survives First Test

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba legislature voted 32-22 against a motion of non-confidence in the New Democratic Party government Thursday after Premier Ed Schreyer made a 50-minute speech in which he promised to review transactions of the Manitoba Development Fund.

Voting with Jake Froese (SC — Rhineland), who introduced the non-confidence motion Wednesday, were 21 Progressive Conservatives.

Three Liberals, Liberal-Democrat Larry Desjardins, member for St. Boniface, and Gordon Beard (Ind.—Churchill) voted in support of the 27 New Democrats seated in the house.

In reply to earlier criticism from former Premier Walter Weir that the NDP government is moving too slowly, Schreyer said: "We will not be pressured into a situation where we have to proceed with undue haste and possibly make mistakes . . . .

"But we will move. We intend to move on a dramatic size and scale . . . and we shall move in the northern sector," the premier said.

He promised to appoint "an advisory or review board to look at documents" of the Manitoba Development Fund after some criticism of previous agreements made by the fund with industries locating in the province.

Schreyer's NDP government has re-negotiated a development fund agrement with Churchill Forest Industries, a company making major industrial expansions in the northern community of The Pas.

LET'S TALK ABOUT THE FACTS.

Your province is the best in Canada for the things that count most.

☐ JOBS

More and better jobs than at any time in history — 360,000 more jobs since 1952 and 40,000 more in the last year alone! Today British Columbia's work force is increasing twice as fast as the national average.

☐ TAKE-HOME PAY

The envy of Canada — thanks to high wages and low taxes. Since 1952, wages have increased from $53.00 a week to $126.00 a week — the highest average income level in the country.

☐ EDUCATION

In 1952, British Columbia had only one public university, one college and one vocational school. Today we have three public universities, one private university, nine vocational schools, one of the world's best institutes of technology, four regional colleges and four more on the way . . . and more new schools and gymnasiums per capita than any other province. Our students go further in school and our teachers are the highest paid in Canada.

☐ HEALTH

Because of the many extra services paid for by your Social Credit Government you enjoy the best low-cost medicare program in Canada.

☐ TAXES

In the past 8 years while taxes everywhere else in Canada went up, your Provincial taxes went down. Wage-earners in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Quebec and Newfoundland pay from 5 to 10 per cent more provincial income tax than taxpayers in British Columbia.

☐ PENSIONS

The highest in Canada! Since 1952, social assistance allowances have risen from a maximum of $86.50 to a minimum of $191.00 a month for a couple with two children. Unemployables and their dependents receive medical care, dental care and medicines.

☐ HOMES

Thanks to Social Credit's annual Homeowner Grant, the $1000.00 Home Acquisition Grant and the $5000.00 Second Mortgage Loans, the growth rate of new homes in British Columbia is more than twice the rate for the rest of Canada.

☐ OPPORTUNITY

In the past 17 years there has been more industrial growth in British Columbia than in all the other years put together. The result is more jobs — more money — more benefits — more opportunities for everyone — and the greatest population growth rate of any other province!

EXPO 70 GUESTS PROVIDED FOR WELL

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian visitors to Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, need have no fear of room shortages or inflated prices, Commissioner-General Toru Haguiwara of the world fair reports.

In an interview beside his Expo 70 caravan now touring Canada, Mr. Haguiwara said Japanese officials are trying hard to keep prices at normal levels and generally are succeeding.

Cost of a single hotel room would be about the same as in Canada, approximately $15 a day.

Japanese officials expect 45,000,000 visitors to the fair between its opening March 15 and closing Sept. 13, 1970.

Of these, about 1,500,000 would be foreign visitors, the commissioner-general said.

Africa Comes to Ontario

ROCKTON, Ont. (CP) — Want to see a slice of African life without making a long trip to the Dark Continent?

It's easy. Just take a visit to African Lion Safari and Game Farm Ltd.—450 acres of scrub land over which 40 lions roam in a preserve 10 miles west of Hamilton.

It opened Friday and the owners, James and Richard Chipperfield, promise to back up their slogan of "to Africa and back in a day."

The lions wander about freely in the preserve, but visitors will be restricted to driving along special roads with their car windows closed at all times. Forty lions are there and another 10 will arrive in September.

By next spring, a water safari with hippopotomi and colonies of sea lions will be set up, followed by a monkey island with 200 baboons. Zebras will follow that and by 1971, giraffes will be added.

The lions, some of which have come direct from Africa, are being set free on the preserve in groups all this week to acclimatize them before the official opening. They will remain outside this winter, although they will be herded into their compounds at night.

Beef heads are being bought from Ontario packing houses to supply the 15 pounds of meat each lion eats daily.

Piccadilly Glory Fading Fast As Old Berkeley Hotel Goes

By THOMAS A. REEDY

LONDON (AP)—Another symbol of the past glories of Piccadilly is being swept aside in the name of progress.

The Berkeley (pronounced Barkley) Hotel, a direct descendant of a coffee house that opened its doors in 1736, has shuttered those doors through which the great, the famous and even the notorious have walked since the time of the post coaches.

The reason: The Berkeley's 100 rooms are on one of the most valuable street corners in the world and are no longer an economic asset.

The grand old hotel—which has known kings, prime ministers and movie stars—has been turned over to the pneumatic drills, picks and chisels of the wrecking crews.

There will be, however, a new Berkeley. The Savoy chain, which sold the Piccadilly site for $5,760,000, plans to erect a new 300-room hotel in fashionable Knightsbridge for about $9,600,000. It is scheduled to open in 1971.

For all the excitement of a new and bigger building, the Berkeley staff—many of them veterans of 40 years in the trade —are a bit sentimental about the change.

HAVE SECRETS

Men like general manager Charles Fornara and retiring headwaiter Gino Calbiati have a storehouse of secrets about the great and the famous, but prying them loose is tougher than cracking the Bank of England, which is probably as it should be in a hotel that prided itself on peace, quiet, service and quality.

"Somehow or other we always seemed able to tame the wild ones," Fornara said with a grin.

"I told Ava Gardner we did not relish misbehavior," Fornara recalled. "You couldn't have had a more charming and quiet guest. She did rather want odd Chinese food from the kitchen in the wee hours of the morning but we coped."

Calbiati, who is nearing 70, remembers when an earlier Prince of Wales—now the Duke of Windsor—was almost a Sunday night fixture. He also remembers that the Queen Mother and the late George VI celebrated their engagement with a private party at the hotel.

The late prime minister Lloyd George held many private conferences there and the ghosts of celebrities from Victorian and Edwardian times seem to come alive when the veterans of the staff recall the calmer tempo of past days.

The new Berkeley is being built for 300 guests in rooms which will be individually decorated. Air conditioning, a swimming pool and other facets of modern times are part of the construction, but the ambition is still the same: elegance and tranquillity.

SKUNK RABID

WINNIPEG (CP)—Dr. Roper Cadham, city medical health officer, today issued an emergency rabies warning after five persons were bitten by a pet skunk known to have been rabid.

In addition, he said, nine other people have been bitten by four other skunks known to have been in contact with the rabid specimen.

One of the latter four skunks is at large, Dr. Cadham said, probably in the neighborhood of the 2,000 block of Henderson Highway in northern metropolitan Winnipeg.

All 14 persons bitten are receiving anti-rabies treatment.

Six Die In Crash

SEOUL (AP)—A national assemblyman and five other South Koreans were killed Friday night when a Century Airlines light charter plane crashed near Ansons, 40 miles south of Seoul, on a flight to the capital from the southern coast naval base of Chinhae, police said. The dead assemblyman was Cho Chang-dai of the Democratic Republican party.

Expo 70 Pavilion Guides in Training

OTTAWA (CP) — A Vancouver husband-and-wife team will be among the 27 hosts and hostesses of the Canadian pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, Canadian fair officials have announced.

David and Joan Wallace, formerly of Vancouver, now are in Japan where Mr. Wallace is studying international relations at Tokyo University.

Mr. Wallace already has pavilion experience—in Canada's pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal.

The Canadian representatives were selected from across Canada on the basis of education, their knowledge of Canada, adaptability and expressiveness. All will be fluent in Japanese by 1970.

They will be provided with transportation to Japan, accommodation and a salary of $405 a month.

Grouped by hometown the unofficial diplomats are:

Farm Vacations New Trend As Campsite Crowds Grow

NEW HAMBURG, Ont. (CP) — As public campsites become more crowded and the number of families interested in an outdoor holiday increases, many are turning to a more leisurely and less crowded holiday.

Farm vacations are becoming a trend in Ontario.

While some farm families have opened their homes as a business to vacationers for some years, the number this summer has jumped through a program by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Rae Cunningham, director of properties for the OFA, said one big reason is farm income.

"Some farms had the resources to do the job in addition to their prime function, and it only makes good sense to utilize all one's resources."

Mrs. Alex McMillan, a farm hostess from New Hamburg, said the monetary gain is very little, but she and her husband have found this "a way of meeting people."

"The main reason we are doing this is to please ourselves."

Mr. Cunningham said one reason city people find farm vacations attractive is that today most have no friends or relatives on farms whom they can visit.

"Today people tell their children about farms and about animals," he said, "but if they have no relatives, the only way to show the children is to reimburse a stranger."

GULF STREAM CRUISE . . .

Lack of Sea Life Surprising

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON — The biggest surprise of the one-month voyage of the research submarine Ben Franklin was that there were so few surprises along its 1600-mile drift through the Gulf Stream.

"We were disappointed," Swiss oceanographer Jacques Piccard said of the trip that ended Aug. 14. "We expected to see much more sea life than we did."

At a press conference held by the Franklin's six-man crew at the National Press Club, Piccard said they saw few gatherings of small marine animals and even fewer collections of large ones.

The only time the 50-foot Franklin ever came across any gathering of big fish, Piccard said, was a two-day period when a school of tuna swam along with the boat on its four-mile-an-hour northward course through the Gulf Stream.

"That was amusing," Dr. Piccard recalled. "We blew some air out of our ballast tubes and the tuna jumped in and tried to take a bath in the bubbles."

While they saw some barracuda and a few hammerhead sharks and were once attacked by a swordfish, said Dr. Piccard, the absence of most large fish from the Gulf Stream was a striking disappointment.

"We think we know why," Dr. Piccard said. "It was probably because there's no food there."

This was an even more mysterious surprise, Dr. Piccard went on — the missing masses of plankton and small marine animals that are the staple diets of most of the ocean's bigger fish.

Dr. Piccard speculated that it could be the warmer water and swifter current of the Gulf Stream that keeps small fish out.

"But we really don't understand it," he said. "We don't know why there are not great swarms of small animals living in the Gulf Stream."

The lack of small animals explained why the crew never found the so-called Deep Scattering Layer of plankton that reflects sonar waves beamed at the bottom by ships and radio waves beamed from the bottom by submarines.

Known to be made up of plankton, small shrimp and tiny two-inch animals called myctophid, this Deep Scattering Layer was nowhere in evidence throughout the whole Gulf Stream.

"We saw only one myctophid the whole time," said navy oceanographer R. Frank Busby, one of Franklin's six-man crew. "He followed us all the way from Palm Beach to Cape Hatteras. Unfortunately, he was eaten there by a 10-inch fish. There went our Deep Scattering Layer."

While the Gulf Stream 1,600 feet down proved swifter (four knots) than it was thought to be, the scientists said, it also turned out to be more complex than oceanographers felt it was.

The isotherms or cold water layers in the Gulf Stream, said Donald J. Kazimir, captain of the sub, moved up and down and sometimes seemed to follow the contour of the ocean floor.

"I think this answers why we had some stability problems," Kazimir said. "Since we were just drifting, we probably tended to follow the isotherms at times."

But all six crew members felt their voyage was a lot more comfortable underwater than it would have been on the surface.

"We even tried running back and forth in the submarine," Busby said, "to see if we could rock the boat. The best we could do was to pitch it down about 10 degrees once. Most times, we never managed more than a one or two degree pitch."

Paris in August Forlorn As Citizens on Vacation

PARIS (CP) — The chairs and tables were stacked away behind locked doors at the Dome cafe on Boulevard du Montparnasse, leaving a forlorn clientele to find less-romantic surroundings for their marathon bouts of talk, drink or streetside contemplation.

The scene was the same at the nearby Coupole and at scores of other such gathering places on both banks of the River Seine.

From Paris railway stations came word of record additions to regular train schedules, all designed to accommodate the more than 1,000,000 city residents heading from home by this means and leaving their native community to hordes of foreigners. Highways and airports also were blocked with departing Parisians.

The mass exodus and month-long shutdown of many shops as well as cafes signalled nothing more serious than August in France, a time of the year when Frenchmen turn with ritualistic dedication to the business of annual vacations.

Predictions were that some 11,000,000 holidayers would take to the hills and beaches no matter how heavily affairs of state, commerce or personal concern weighed on their minds.

DEVALUATION HURTS

And particularly in 1969, relaxation has become the order of the day after a long period of social uneasiness, economic scares and elections.

One legacy of national crisis, devaluation and currency restrictions, kept up to 80 per cent of French vacationers within their national frontiers this year.

Yet about the only segment of society showing a business-as-usual spirit at one stage of the summer were Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas and key members of his new Gaullist cabinet, hard at work settling into power.

By contrast, Georges Pompidou, successor to Charles de Gaulle as president, flitted between widely photographed indulgence in seaside leisure and periods of duty at his official home, the Elysee Palace in Paris.

With armies of Frenchmen jamming beaches along the Mediterranean, the Bay of Biscay and the Channel, the cities they left behind fell into the hands of tourists whose numbers have local businessmen smiling again after the fall-off in such traffic during this country's troubled 1968.

The over-all total of foreign visitors to France in 1969 should be about 12,000,000.

The near-revolution of May-June last year scared away significant numbers of American tourists although the number of Canadian visitors to France in 1968 remained at its previous annual level of 120,000.

This year, tourist officials are forecasting that the number of summer visitors to France from the United States will hit more than 1,000,000, 40 per cent above the 1968 level.

One indication of the foreign influx is the increased proportion of radically short miniskirts worn by girls in Paris at this time of the year.

Despite its reputation for "naughtiness" dating from the earlier decades of this century, the French capital in its current period of development is considerably more staid than contemporary London, now a "swinging" centre of new fashions in clothes and popular culture generally.

Paris skirts, even those worn by younger natives, are conservatively long compared with the brevity of similar garments in Britain.

Thus the arrival of British girls in substantial numbers here is immediately noticeable, and droves of them answer the Paris call in summer.

The year-round presence of one young style-setter from London is itself having a discernible impact on the French scene.

The eye-catching Briton is 19-year-old Emma Soames, daughter of Christopher Soames, the British ambassador, and granddaughter of the late Sir Winston Churchill.

TALK OF PARIS

Miss Soames' miniskirts are the talk of the Paris salons and French girls in her circle are shyly adopting hemlines that at least approach hers in above-the-knee daring.

One Paris department store, intent on reaching beyond its home-born clientele and into the ranks of summer visitors from abroad, has launched an advertising campaign in English, which it calls the "symbolic language of tourists."

English language posters across the city echo the store's message of welcome to foreigners and follow it up with the concern's claim to being the centre of commercial "action" in the French capital.

English also has crept into domestic transmissions of the French national radio system, again as a reflection of the foreign influx.

The system broadcasts news in that tongue for the benefit of tourists, and gives a similar service in German.

Many-Talented Susan Floral Artist Too

Susan Chew, Victoria-born Chinese-Canadian now living in Toronto, is a girl of many talents. She has operated a restaurant, she has been a tour director for travel agencies, and she has appeared professionally as a hula dancer.

But the thing she loves most and does with unusual flair is making paper flowers. Susan's flowers have been displayed at the Royal Ontario Museum and in art galleries in both Toronto and Ottawa, and they have been shipped around the world.

Prime Minister Trudeau was gratified to receive a bouquet of her flowers on his birthday last year. The bouquet was made up of the floral emblems of the provinces and territories of Canada.

It was not surprising, therefore, that Susan Chew was recently commissioned to make up flowers for the Canadian Pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka. Today, with assistant Karen Lee, she is busy making up some 480 huge blooms with 300 branches of leaves.

The flowers will consist of roses, floppy poppies, floppy roses, guggenvillaeas (a cross between the Guggenheim Museum and a bougainvillaea) torch ginger, night cereus, sunflowers, in a complete range of colors.

The flowers are made from duplex crepe, and one condition of the assignment was that the flowers had to be flame-proof. But duplex crepe is not normally flame-proof, and when Susan contacted Dennison Manufacturing Co., who produce the crepe, their experts went into a huddle and came up with the answer. The new flame-proof crepe was quickly processed and shipped to Susan, and now she is happily at work.

Later this month the entire lot will be forwarded to Ottawa for shipment to Osaka. There they will decorate the ceilings on several levels of the Pavilion.

If the Japanese who visit the Canadian Pavilion in 1970 wonder how the Canadians dare to vie with them in paper-flower making, the answer is simple. They are made by a Chinese-Canadian, whose ancestors taught that art to the Japanese.

'First Class Ship Handler'

SYDNEY (AP) — Rear Admiral J. G. Crabb said today that the Australian carrier Melbourne had given the United States destroyer Frank E. Evans ample and proper warning before the two ships collided.

He said he regards Capt. J. P. Stevenson, who was in command of the Melbourne, as a "first-class ship handler."

Admiral Crabb testified before a court-martial hearing of two negligence charges against Capt. Stevenson, who pleaded not guilty.

Admiral Crabb was on the Melbourne when it collided with the Evans, with the loss of 74 American sailors during Southeast Asia Treaty Organization exercises in the South China Sea on June 3.

The court-martial was adjourned until Monday.

South Africa Newspapers Facing Uncertain Future

By KENNETH L. WHITING

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—Newspapers in South Africa have entered an era of uncertainty following the conviction of two newspaper men and creation of a super-secret security force.

Government critics contend that the unrelated events undercut press freedom. Not so, say supporters of the governing Nationalist party.

The 89-day trial of the Rand Daily Mail editor-in-chief, Laurence Gandar, and his reporter, Benjamin Pogrund, attracted world attention.

They were charged under the Prisons Act on two counts of publishing stories about unsavory jail conditions without taking reasonable steps to check the information in advance. Gandar and Pogrund pleaded innocent, but the onus was on them to verify the accuracy of a 1965 series of stories which alleged brutality, sodomy, torture and filth in several prisons.

Completely opposite views of the role of newspapers were heard in Johannesburg's Rand Supreme Court.

The state denied that freedom of the press was at stake. Prosecutor Hendrik Liebenberg said it was not a newspaper's duty to "make public attacks on government departments and their officials" nor to raise "stirs or rumpuses" which might damage the country's image.

The defence insisted that newspapers must be free to publish what they believe rather than conceal abuses.

"It would have been a dereliction of our duty and a suppression of a matter of public interest not to have published the articles," Gandar told the court.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

Convicted, Gandar was fined $180. Pogrund was given six months in prison but sentence was suspended for three years. South African Associated Newspapers, which publishes The Mail, paid a $420 fine and had to absorb an estimated $350,000 in legal costs.

Gandar has been a sharp and persistent critic of government policy—especially apartheid. Those who sympathize with him viewed his trial as a thinly veiled attempt to muzzle the 54-year-old editor and his English-language newspaper.

Some Afrikaans newspapers expressed unease with the Gandar verdict. Dagbreek en Landstem (Daybreak and Voice of the Nation) doubted "whether the general uncertainty among editors about the implications of the law has been removed. . . . The effect on newspapers could be that they would rather remain silent than risk prosecution."

In Cape Town, Die Burger (The Citizen) suggested that it might be better to combat untruths about prison conditions by refutation and frankness instead of with legislation like the Prisons Act.

Of wider significance to newspapers here is the Bureau of State Security, created recently when Parliament passed the General Law Amendment Bill. It will supplement security police and military intelligence.

DEFINITION VAGUE

Clause 10 of the revised law makes it an offence to publish any story about a security matter in any way prejudicial to the state's safety or interests. The difficulty is that "security matter" is defined as anything connected with the bureau, known as BOSS. Since BOSS is a super-secret agency, newspaper men may not know when they violate national security.

One veteran Johannesburg lawyer thinks Clause C takes control of newspapers from their editors and invests it in the bureau. The law could enforce secrecy so that people detained or arrested by the security police could be hauled off and no word of this could be printed.

"The only safe and certain way to check if a newspaper can publish certain material is to get authorization from BOSS," he said. "This means that an editor is no longer master of his paper."

The government insists that the law is necessary for state security and that those who inadvertently contravene Clause 10 will not be penalized.

The Sunday Express does not think this assurance is enough. Its editorial said in part:

"The lights of press freedom may not have gone out completely, but editors are going to find it harder and harder to grope their way through the murky atmosphere in which they are now forced to work, thanks to the government and its roundabout methods of restricting newspapers in the carrying out of their normal functions."

Heavenly Maverick Nears Earth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Geographos is a pipsqueak, but not to be sneezed at.

The planet, due to pay a neighborly visit—at a comfortable 5,600,000 miles—next Wednesday, is just one-half mile in diameter. It even appears a good bet as an eventual space station far beyond the moon.

But Dr. Samuel Herrick of the University of California at Los Angeles suggests any earthmen who land on it should "dig in and tie themselves down—even a sneeze directed at the surface would propel a man off into space."

The asteroid, named in honor of the National Geographic Society, is a heavenly maverick about to make one of its closest approaches to earth. At its closest, it will be visible only from the Southern Hemisphere—and then only as a tiny spot of light.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Kelsey Was First to See Prairies

By BOB BOWMAN

The story of how the west was won could begin with Henry Kelsey, a young employee of the Hudson's Bay Company, who travelled from York Factory to what is now The Pas, Manitoba, and back again between 1690-1692. He was the first white man to see the prairies, and took part in a buffalo hunt of August 23, 1691.

When the Hudson's Bay Company was formed in 1670 it was supposed to explore the west and try to find a route to the orient. Little was done and Kelsey's journey in 1690 was to counteract public criticism. He was only 20 years old, worked at York Factory, and got along well with the Indians because he learned to speak Cree fluently. He could also talk with the Assiniboines whom he described as "the people who cook on stones."

The Indians also respected his courage and called him Mis Top Ashish because he saved an Indian in a fight with two grizzly bears. His two year trip to the prairies was a great success and he returned to York Factory with a huge quantity of furs.

Kelsey's contribution to Canadian history was all the more important because he kept a diary, although much of it was in poor verse. For instance, on his departure from York Factory he wrote:

"The up ye River I with heavy heart Did take my way and from all English part To live amony ye natives of this place If God permits me for one two years space."

In 1749 criticism of the Hudson's Bay Company had grown to such an extent that it came under investigation by a special committee of parliament. Kelsey's diary was needed as evidence that the company had done some exploration of the west, but it had disappeared. It was not found until 1926 when it turned up in the library of Castle Dodds at Carrickfergus, Northern Ireland. Arthur Dobbs had been one of the leading critics of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1749:

Other events on August 23:

1541 Cartier arrived at Stadacona (Quebec) on third trip to Canada.

1714 Citizens of Quebec rioted over high prices.

1720 Three ships with 300 settlers arrived at Port La Joie (Charlottetown).

1835 Red River settlers protested Hudson's Bay Company monopoly.

1862 Cheadle and Milton left Fort Garry to explore to the Pacific.

1871

1871 Rowing crew from Saint John, N.B., defeated crew from Tyne, England, in stirring race.

1875 Indian treaties 1 and 2 were revised.

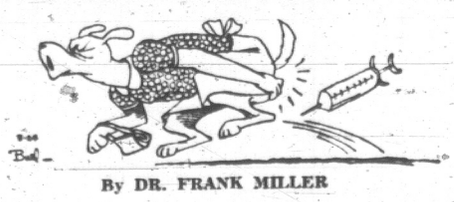

1882 Pile o'Bones became Regina on arrival of first C.P.R. train.

1956 North West Territories Council met at Aklavik.

1957 Saskatchewan was first province to complete section of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: I wonder if it's possible for you to give a candid opinion concerning a fellow professional? We visited a new veterinarian the other day and were very impressed with his clean, modern facilities. The doctor himself impressed us, too, until it came time to give Dolly her distemper booster. Then he calmly gave her the injection right in the hip but he didn't sterilize her skin! We were dismayed. I have never been to any doctor in 40 years who didn't sterilize the skin before giving a shot. Now I ask you, wouldn't you tend to lack confidence in a doctor who failed to take such a simple step to prevent infection? — I.F.

DEAR I.F.: No, I wouldn't lack confidence in this doctor. He demonstrates clean modern facilities and an apparent concern for good practice procedures. Failure to dab alcohol on the skin is not a breach of good practice because this procedure doesn't actually sterilize the skin anyway. Alcohol, or another antiseptics used for this purpose, cannot possibly sterilize the skin in the few seconds they have to work prior to the injection. The use of sterile needle and syringe plus professional injection techniques are important in preventing infection. The currently used skin dabbing techniques are not.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is there anything better for a female Siamese cat in heat than tranquilizers? — J.V.

DEAR J.V.: If you don't really know the answer to your own question, ask the cat.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've just got to have a horse but can't afford to spend much on it. How can I go about getting a good horse for as little money as possible? — B.E.

DEAR B.E.: If you don't plan to do much but feed it, you can get a good horse cheap. Wheather it has heaves, ringbone, or is in its teems wouldn't make much difference. And speaking of feeding, take into consideration your horse will be doing that 12 months a year so be prepared to pay the feed bill. Good luck may play a part in getting a good horse cheap. But don't depend on it. And don't buy any horse without having it okayed by a veterinarian first. This "health insurance" can pay handsomely in the long run.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chummy, our cat, was raised from a few days old by our dog, Spangles. Chummy has never even seen a cat and believes she's a dog. She prefers dog food, dog toys (hates catnip) and even loves the other two dogs who have visited at our house. The problem now is we want to let her outside but are afraid for her. Our neighborhood is swarming with dogs of all sizes, some of whom are known to be cat killers. If we let her out, how can we be sure she won't try to make friends with one of these cat killers? We don't want to take any chances. — D.Y.

DEAR D.Y.: Good. Keep her indoors. If you let her out, at all, you are taking chances.

U.S. ISOLATIONISM FEARED

Pullout Cloud Drifts Over Korea

By SELIG S. HARRISON

TOKYO (WP) — President Chung Hee Park of South Korea is not the only Asian leader who wants to know how President Nixon intends to carry out his new "post-Vietnam" doctrine that Asian nations should bear the primary responsibility for their own defence.

Like Prime Minister Eisaku Sato of Japan and other leaders with military budgets largely underwritten by Washington, Park is frankly worried that the very carefully measured disengagement process suggested at Guam might easily be converted under political pressure into a thinly veiled isolationism.

In the case of South Korea, however, the impact of a serious effort to reduce U.S. military involvement could be far more unsettling than in any other Asian country with the exception of Vietnam.

Korean officials have noted with disquiet recent signs that the Nixon administration is somewhat more restrained than its predecessor in approaching Seoul if only for balance of payments reasons.

By conservative estimates, the annual price tag for the American military presence in Korea has been slightly in excess of $1.1 billion.

This includes the 50,000-man U.S. combat force and its ever-expanding logistical support facilities, military aid for the Korean armed forces and a continuing construction program designed to harden U.S. airfields.

It omits the cost of transporting, equipping and maintaining Korean troops in Vietnam.

Secretary of State William Rogers spoke with lawyer-like precision during his recent Seoul visit of American respect for treaty obligations" tions."

He avoided rhetorical fist-shaking at North Korea which might possibly lend credence to overheated Korean Press versions of his talks with Park and other leaders.

He flatly ruled out U.S. participation in any new Asian regional defence grouping. American officials later made clear that the secretary had chosen his language carefully to make certain that he neither upgraded nor downgraded the existing American commitments.

Significantly, a close Rogers' aide went out of his way to say after the secretary met Park that the U.S. does not "totally agree" with the South Korean estimate of the North Korean threat.

While Seoul focuses single-mindedly on the danger of an armed invasion, he said, "our people see zig-zags in their strategy from time to time. They are not always straight down the line on the use of force."

This was a reference to a decline in the intensity of commando raids this year coupled with recent hints of a debate over whether to continue primary reliance on the commando approach of shift to a political offensive. A continuing doctrinal argument in North Korea over economic policy pointing to possible future defence spending curbs had also attracted official American interest.

Most U.S. specialists on Korea agree with Seoul that Pyongyang remains as determined as ever to reunify the country but stress the contrast with 1950 resulting from the Sino-Soviet split.

Korean officials are supersensitive to the slightest suggestion that military aid can ever substitute for the deterrent power of a direct U.S. force presence.

When critics in other Asian countries ask why Seoul needs U.S. forces, while Pyongyang can do without Soviet or Chinese troops, South Korea has traditionally replied that the nearby Communist powers can intervene more rapidly than the faraway U.S.

Seoul made no secret of its belief that Washington was seeking to undermine this argument with airlift exercises in March demonstrating the ability of the United States to fly combat ready troops from North Carolina to Seoul in 31 hours.

There appears to be no serious possibility that the U.S. will consider even modest force reductions in Korea while Korean forces remain in Vietnam. In past years, however, unpublished government studies have pointed to a variety of ways in which the U.S. could shift greater responsibility for the defence of Korea to Seoul.

One plan mentioned would move the U.S. forces now stationed along the Demilitarized Zone to a reserve role in the rear areas and leave the entire task of policing the front lines toKo rean forces.

An ugly cloud hanging over the Korean leader's meeting this week with President Nixon is the bitter controversy currently raging in Seoul over Park's bid for a constitutional amendment permitting him to run for a third term.

Far from departing for San Francisco in a blaze of glory, Park left at a peculiarly uneasy moment when his domestic political acceptance is less solid than it has ever been.

Korean opposition parties are suggesting that Park will seek to use the Nixon talks to imply U.S. acquiescence in the amendment move as a means of winning over last-minute converts in the National Assembly.

But they are constrained in exploiting the issue in the face of Park's taunts that they could only come to power through U.S. intervention.

The expression of a firm U.S. neutrality by Secretary of State Rogers during his Seoul visit not only reflects the fact that Park is a known quantity to U.S. leaders and that the indentity of a possible successor is difficult to predict with certainty.

Even more important is the fact that U.S. agencies in Korea have been divided on Park's chances for pushing the amendment through the assembly.

FIRM'S OFFICES SEIZED IN PERU

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's revolutionary government, which last year expropriated the refinery and oil fields of the United States-owned International Petroleum Co., announced Friday night it is taking over the firm's Lima headquarters, tank farms, retail outlets and vehicles.

The property already had been attached to cover a government claim that IPC, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey, owes Peru $14,400,000 for products purchased by the company from its refinery after the refinery was expropriated last October.

There was no immediate explanation of the military regime's surprise move.

Computer Memories Confound Experts

By JOHN BREWER

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Think you're a good checker player: Take on Willy.

He plays two or three games a day and hasn't lost in nine years. He has an IQ of 60.

Pretty good at dates and calculations? So is Paul, who has an IQ of 28.

He'll tell you instantly on what day of the week your birthday fell as far back as a decade ago—and on what day it will fall as far forward as 1979.

RETARDED GENIUSES

Play a musical instrument? Clement, with an IQ of 30, has to listen but once to any song and he can play it on his guitar. He can fix small radios, too.

These three middle-aged men, patients in Ward 18 of Pacific State Hospital, belong to an elite class of psychological contradictions known as "idiot savants"—mentally retarded geniuses.

Incapable of living in the outside world, they have some phenomenal talent or aptitude comparable to some of the brightest members of society, usually in such fields as mathematics, drawing, music, calendar calcualting and memorization.

Doctors chalk the ability up to a computer-like capacity for memorization and repetition, but they don't know how the ability develops.

Checker whiz Willy, 53, blind in one eye and hard of hearing, snaps his suspenders and giggles when challenged at checkers.

"Ahh, wanna get beat, huh?" he says in a cocky tone. "I beat you. I beat you real good in less than 25 moves."

He quickly arranges the checkers, takes the reds, and moves first. He doesn't stop talking, moving clumsily like a robot, but without hesitation. He doesn't seem to concentrate. In fact, he doesn't seem to be paying attention.

"You look worried. Are you worried? Ahhh, look at the swings outside."

He asks for 25 cents when he wins and treats himself to chocolate doughnuts at the hospital snack bar.

Clement is a tall, quiet, ever-grinning man of 47. A hospital aide, Lola Garcia, discovered his talent when she passed his room last September and heard him plucking "Winchester Cathedral" on a toy guitar. He now has a full-size guitar donated by a local family.

STEALS RADIOS

But, Mrs. Garcia added, Clement does have a vice. He steals transistor radios from fellow patients and tinkers with them.

"Unfortunately, if a radio does work, he'll break it just so he can fool around with it. He loves to tinker."

Paul, the calendar calculator, is 55, heavy-set and addicted to afternoon soap operas on television.

As he shuffled toward the TV room of the ward, Mrs. Garcia called to him from her office.

"Paul," she asked, this man's birthday is October 24. What day will that fall on in 1975?"

"Huh, Friday."

"What day did my birthday fall on in 1963?"

"Wednesday."

But when Mrs. Garcia asked, "Paul, how much is two and two," he was silent.

Like Willy and Clement, he is, unable to do the most rudimentary arithmetic.

Weddings

Bion—Gottfred

St. Patrick's Church was the setting of a double-ring ceremony at 1 p.m. on Saturday, July 12, 1969, when Barbara Carole, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Gottfred, became the bride of Mr. Peter James Bion, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Bion. Reverend J. Klinglesmith and Dr. D. Sparling officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a floor-length gown of Ligoda, styled with a detachable lace court train from a lace bodice with a scalloped wedding ring neckline and lily-point sleeves. A tiny floral headpiece held a full cathedral veil of silk illusion edged in lace and she carried a cascade of white sweetheart roses and stephanotis with ivy tendrils. Maid of honor, Miss Brenda Savage; matron of honor, Mrs. Eleanor Gottfred, and bridesmaids, Misses Linda Gottfred and Janice Gottfred wore identical floor-length gowns of green and blue ottoman sheer lined with lime-green Reveina fashioned in an empire style with scooped neckline. They carried bouquets of yellow crystal daisies with matching flowers in their hair.

The mother of the bride was attired in a champagne ensemble consisting of a slim sheath dress and matching coat. She wore beige accessories and a corsage of wine roses to highlight her outfit. The mother of the groom chose a sheath dress and coat ensemble in crystal pink. White accessories and an orchid corsage completed the outfit.

Best man to the groom was Mr. Paul Bion, and Messrs. Patrick Bion, Garry Robertson and Lloyd Murphy ushered the guests. A reception was held at the Oak Bay Marina. Mr. Joe Gottfred of Winnipeg, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride. After the reception the young couple left on a motor trip through B.C., Alberta and Washington. For her going-away outfit the bride chose a white French brocade ensemble. The fitted bodice of the dress, made in white ribbon, was topped with a short-sleeve jacket and accented with an orchid corsage.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Rhea Bury, godmother of the groom, from Ottawa, and Miss Elizabeth Taylor from Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osioway and Joyce, Mrs. A. Kowal, all from Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. W. Doran from Penticton, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Primeau, Mr. Jim Primeau and Bob; Mr. and Mrs. V. Gadsby, Mr. and Mrs. T. Norton, Mr. and Mrs. L. Crawford, and Mr. and Mrs. H. MacDonald, all from Vancouver.

Quissy—Dean

On August 15th, 1969, in the Lady Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral, Victoria, the marriage was solemnized between Heather Christina Dean, daughter of Mrs. Samuel W. Dean, and the late Mr. Dean, and Mr. David Ernest Quissy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Quissy. Dean Brian Whitlow officated at the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Christopher Dean, was attended by Miss Lawrie Bennett, as bridesmaid, Miss Judy Voss as junior bridesmaid, and the Misses Wendy Voss and Cynthia Dean as flower girls. Best man was Mr. Rod Clayards and Mr. Bryan Hall was usher.

A reception followed at the Olde England Inn.

Hind—Juelsberg

The marriage between Mr. John Ross Hind, Victoria, and Lisa Fonnesbech Juelsberg, West Vancouver, took place August 16, 1969, in the Church of Our Lord, Victoria, B.C.; Bishop D. A. G. Ranklior officiated.

They are now residing at 3155 Uplands Road, Victoria, B.C.

Marshall—Ruttan

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ruttan, 1250 Beach Drive, are pleased to announce the marriage of their daughter, Carol Susan, to Mr. David Sherwood Sloan Marshall, son of Mrs. Buntie Sloan Marshall, 2540 Windsor Road, and Mr. Sherwood B. Marshall, San Francisco, California, on Saturday, August 16, 1969.

Lee—Smith

Reverend Alexander Calder officiated at a double-ring ceremony in Oak Bay United Church at 2 p.m. on August 9th, 1969, when vows were exchanged between Beverley Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. J. Smith, 914 Runnymede Place, Victoria, B.C., and Mr. Kenneth Dwight Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Lee, Campbell River, B.C.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a short gown of peau d'elegance entrain with scalloped lace yoke and bell sleeves, a tiered tulle chapel veil held in place with matching lace and satin roses headpiece. She carried a bouquet of talisman roses and stephanotis. Her twin sister Barbara was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Lee, sister of the groom and Miss Linda Prokop, a fellow graduate of Royal Jubilee Hospital. They wore identical gowns of yellow chiffon and carried colonial bouquets of nile green carnations matching the trim on their dresses. Their yellow tulle veils were held in place with a single yellow satin rose.

The best man was Mr. William Murray of Campbell River, and the ushers were Mr. Ralph Einerson and Mr. George Beninger.

Mr. Frank Coles proposed the toast to the bride at a garden reception held at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple left on a honeymoon to the mainland, the bride wearing an aqua ensemble with white accessories and a gardenia corsage. They will make their home at Campbell River, B.C.

Out-of-town guests from Edmonton, Los Angeles, Tacoma, North Vancouver, White Rock, Richmond, Courtenay, and Campbell River attended the wedding.

Campbell—Seeley

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on August 2, 1969, at 3 p.m. in the First United Church Chapel, when Lois Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Seeley, Quesnel, B.C., exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Alexander A. Campbell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Campbell of Victoria. Reverend R. G. Thompson officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in her floor-length gown of white peau d'elegance and French lace, with long lace sleeves. The neckline and sleeves were finished with matching lace trim. Her tiered veil was shoulder length and she carried a bouquet of white gladiolus, pink rosebuds and heather. Maid of honor, Miss Joan Seeley, and bridesmaid, Miss Anne Seeley, sisters of the bride, and Miss Maureen Campbell, sister of the groom, wore identical floor-length capri blue gowns and carried bouquets of blue and white carnations.

Best man was Mr. David Hodgson and ushers were Messrs. Colin Seeley and Rich Senkler.

The bride's mother wore a pink sheath dress with a pink lace coat and matching hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of deep red roses and a sprig of heather. The groom's mother chose a peach ensemble, matching hat and grey accessories. Her corsage was of pastel colored roses.

The reception was held at the Olde England Inn; Mr. D. South proposed the toast to the bride. For a honeymoon trip in B.C., the bride wore a two-piece outfit of daffodil yellow with black accessories and a gardenia corsage.

Out-of-town guests were from Saint John, N.B., Quesnel, Kamloops and Vancouver.

Lironi—Maconachie

Mrs. Roy J. Maconachie of 831 Newport Avenue, Victoria, and Mrs. Thomas V. Lironi, of Hudson's Hope, B.C., and Chester, England, announce their wedding at St. Patrick's Church, Oak Bay, Victoria, on Saturday, August 16th, 1969.

The marriage took place in the presence of their four sons, one daughter and immediate relatives. The bride was given in marriage by her brother John Watson of West Vancouver. The best man was Mr. Eric Marsden of West Vancouver. The bride's eldest brother, Bradley Watson and his wife travelled from New Jersey to attend the wedding. The ceremony was conducted by the Reverend Father Jackson. The reception was held at the home of the bride.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to extend my thanks and appreciation to the friends of the late Mrs. Ethel Fielding for their acts of kindness shown to her during the past few weeks. Also my sincere thanks to those who attended the Service. — Niece Winnie.

THIS IS TO SAY THANK YOU TO our many friends and neighbours for all your kindness. The beautiful floral tokens, so many of them from your gardens. To all of you who came to the service and to the Legion Ladies and Comrades. A special thanks to the Doctors, Nurses and staff at the Veterans Hospital for all the wonderful care. To Mr. Whitmore for his kind and sincere words. — Mrs. A. G. Deverson and family.

WE WISH TO EXPRESS OUR heartfelt thanks and appreciation to all our friends and neighbours for their kind expressions of sympathy in the recent loss of our dear daughter and sister, Lorraine Ostler. Also Father Jackson, Dr. Simpson, Dr. Perry, Dr. Hamdi, Jubilee Hospital Nurses. — Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hall and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HAMP — IN LOVING MEMORY of my dear husband, our father, and grandfather, Ernest Alfred, who passed away, August 24, 1964.

True was his heart, his friendship sound.
Loved and respected by all around
He left us suddenly—his thoughts unknown,
But he left us, a memory—
we are proud to own.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, we know not when.
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
—Too dearly loved ever to be forgotten, your loving wife and family.

McLAUGHLIN —In loving memory of Anna G. McLaughlin, who passed away August 23, 1961.

Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just, to the end of her days;
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind
—Ever remembered by her son, Gordon.

MORINO — James Morino — Aug. 1st, 1969.

God gave to him
Eternal life
And he shall live
within his son.

Jim—I will never believe what I have been told. I know you're just away and we will be together again. Honey—I love you.—Linda Morino.

NICHOLSON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Evelyn Sylvia Nicholson, who passed away suddenly August 23, 1959.
—Always remembered by Reg, sons Roy, Monte and Bob Preston and brother Del T. Morrison.

RANKIN — Dorothy. Loved and missed.
There is a link death cannot sever,
Love and remembrance last forever.
—Neil, Marlene and family.

ONLY $31,900—TERMS

When you enter this home the warmth of it is immediately felt. I don't know if it is the open cathedral entrance or if it is the beautiful wallpaper which is to me in perfect taste. The wall-to-wall carpeted living and dining room is complemented by bookcases on either side of the fireplace plus a 16 ft. long mantle. The kitchen is a housewife's joy, bright, compact, with lots of cupboards and a nook. A carpeted hall leads to the 3 bright cheerful bedrooms and to the lovely 4-pc. bathroom complete with fan.
Downstairs is the man's domain, drive-in garage which has shelves for storage. A workshop complete with bench and more shelves and the crowning glory a beautiful Tudor designed rumpus room complete with a wet bar and a two-piece bathroom. The home is wired up and down for stereo, also cablevision in the rumpus room. The property matches the home, 175 ft. deep with fishpond and wired for outdoor lighting it is fully fenced in the rear. TERMS—$29,500—TERMS

This is the only home we have in Victoria under $30,000 and it is a steal. 3 bedrooms, large living room with fireplace on feature wall, dining room with sliding glass doors leading to large sundeck, the kitchen is large enough for the whole family and yet designed so as to make the preparing of meals a breeze. The bedrooms and bright, 4-pc. bathroom run off a long hall way which also houses the linen and coat closets. The floors on the kitchen and bathroom are beautiful hardwood which are treated so as to eliminate waxing, the kitchen and bathroom are laid with cushion-floor which is also designed for minimum waxing. The full basement is a joy. Designed for a 4th bedroom, rumpus room, workshop and laundry area, it is rough plumbed for a half bathroom. Completed by driveway and carport and set on a good level lot this has to be the best buy in Gordon Head. With school starting soon this home will move quickly, don't delay, try your down payment you may be surprised.

Crime Loophole Removal Urged

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA (CP) — Police need removal of various legal roadblocks favoring the criminal—including anti-wiretap rules—to gain the upper hand in the fight against organized crime, William Kelly, former RCMP deputy commissioner, said Friday.

He told an interviewer that without radical changes in criminal procedure, police would be unable to effectively combat sharply-rising organized crime. He favored a lessening of the rights of an accused person.

Now retired after 36 years with the RCMP, Mr. Kelly said that "organized crime in its entirety is a mass of conspiracies."

Large numbers of trained investigators were needed to investigate such crime properly and to gather information on the criminals' methods of operation.

Police forces must co-operate closely so that criminals cannot take advantage of divided jurisdictions which may hamper investigation.

But with crime increasing at the rate of 18 to 20 per cent a year, he said, police forces need help. They would not meet this challenge through manpower increases alone.

'REMOVE LOOPHOLES'

Legal loopholes, such as protection against self-incrimination, should be removed.

"If all criminals had got together to form a rule of evidence for their own protection they could not have formed a better rule than the one which says that they cannot be called to explain their actions in court even after a prima facia case has been made out against them."

Suspects should have to appear on the witness stand to be questioned. If they refused to testify, the judge and prosecutor should be allowed to emphasize this fact to the jury, a right denied them under present law.

He also advocated abolishing the requirement of a unanimous jury for a conviction, replacing it with a requirement for only a simple majority in favor of conviction.

The system of preliminary hearings, which waste the time of expert investigators who are called to testify, he said, should be discontinued.

Police should be able to use wiretapping, "a tool that should not be denied the police as long as it is done under appropriate authority."

Manitoba Studies Marine Insurance

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP)—Premier Ed Schreyer said Friday his New Democratic Party government will investigate the possibility of underwriting marine insurance for vessels using the port of Churchill.

Mr. Schreyer said the royal commission report on northern transportation, tabled in the legislature last week, found that government-operated marine insurance in Sweden resulted in lower rates from private companies.

Million-Dollar Hobby Is Goal of Divers

By MARGARET BARNARD

HALIFAX (CP) — Charlie Doucet, 29, sales manager for a television station, and Tom Kramer, 32, a management consultant, are turning a scuba-diving hobby into what they hope will be a million-dollar business in less than two years.

They dive for pieces of wood and bits of metal from vessels wrecked off Nova Scotia's coast 100 years ago.

They also bring up antique bottles from the ocean's bed to sell to tourists and the local carriage trade in their gift shop on downtown Hollis Street — a shop that sells only authentic Nova Scotia items, with a nautical theme.

Diving expeditions in their Cape Island fishing boat also yield sea urchins, crabs and hermit crabs in their shells and starfish which they preserve by secret formula to sell.

Wood from old wrecks (they call it wreckwood) embodies the romance of the sea. Studed with brass and bronze nails, and formed into fascinating shapes and textures by sand and sea action, it sells for from $7.50 for a one-foot piece to $200 for a ship's rib.

Mr. Kramer sees the business he and Mr. Doucet have incorporated under the name Nova Nautical Decor Ltd., as growing into a "$1,000,000,000 industry in less than two years."

SELL HOME KITS

As well as supplying 12 other Nova Scotian gift shops, Nova Nautical Decor has branched into decorating. It provides marine decorations for "one out of every two convention banquets" in the city and is redecorating in nautical themes several hotel restaurants.

The company sells a packaged home decorator kit containing a 10-foot by seven-foot net, fishermen's corks, sea shells and starfish, and next year hopes to market a low-cost home decorator kit through a department store chain.

The shop opened last December and makes enough to pay two full-time employees and one man part-time. They are all experienced divers who dive several times a week to maintain stocks.

Mr. Doucet and Mr. Kramer, who met shortly after the latter came here from Ottawa, put all the money they make back into the business.

"One of the reasons we went into the gift shop business was to give tourists something made in Nova Scotia," Mr. Kramer said in an interview.

On his first trip to Nova Scotia he had been disappointed to find a souvenir lobster trap made in Japan. Now Nova Nautical Decor sells authentic-looking lobster traps made by a Nova Scotian.

DEVELOP HANDICRAFTS

The two business partners work closely with Ellis Rolston, handcraft director for the Nova Scotia education department, to develop native handcrafts which they sell in their shop.

"We're hopint to force all other gift shops to carry only Nova Scotian-made handcrafts," Mr. Kramer said.

With bottle collecting becoming a major hobby, next to stamp and coin collecting, "half our retail business is in bottles," he said.

The divers follow the old ferry routes to pick up bottles people threw overboard up to a century ago. Many of the soda-pop bottles found were made in Nova Scotia from 1836 to 1900.

Antique bottles, including medicine and wine containers, sell for from 50 cents to $100.

A poem led to one of the divers' most exciting finds. It mentioned the depth of water in which a former French man-of-war, LaTribune, sank off nearby Herring Cove in 1797.

Mr. Doucet found the depth on an old chart, and today brass nails from LaTribune, made into cuff links, are being sold in Nova Nautical Decor.

This Symphony . . . Sounds as Suite

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Rustic Wedding Symphony; Goldmark; Bernstein, New York Phil; MS7261.

When is a symphony not a symphony?

The theme and variations form of the first movement and the five movement-shape of this work has roused spasmodic controversy as to how it should be classified. Which tempts me to suggest that this symphony, by any other name would sound as suite.

Karl Goldmark, (1830-1915) one of twelve children of a poor Jewish cantor, suffered years of abject proverty and privation so who would know better than he how simple country people enjoyed the feasting and festivities occasioned by weddings?

SMALL, QUIET

Contemporary descriptions of Goldmark suggest that he was small and quiet, almost diffident even when he achieved fame and popularity.

Perhaps Max Graf exaggerates a little when he writes "This famous composer looked like a mushroom, almost disappearing under his broad felt hat."

From his years as a violinist in a small, somewhat shabby theatre orchestra, Goldmark learnt the characteristics of each section which allowed him to bring such brilliance and variety of tone-color into his orchestration.

FOLK TRADITION

Though rich and full, his orchestration is never thick or puddingy, and in this recording, each strand in the close-woven web is clearly distinct.

Firmly rooted in the folk tradition of Hungary, his native land, the work abounds in simple appealing melodies. In several sections the rolling breadth of Smetana's Moldau and the timeless rocking of the Volga, describe nature's basic role in music.

Humor, a sort of innocent merrymaking is accentuated throughout.

SOUNDS ECHOED

Several variations have the mock pomposity of a circus parade. The third progresses in brassy elephantine strides, the eleventh with its exaggerated slide-step slow march is a pleasing variation of the eighth which is danced by heavily-shod mice.

The plaintive melody of the fourth variation is enlarged upon in the lovely Andante fourth movement, "in the Garden."

A delicate humorous scherzando forms the third movement around a yodelling seranade motif in which fragments are tossed from instrument to instrument as sounds are echoed around by reverberating mountains.

With the bright finale dance the symphony introduces a sonata movement more conventionally associated with a first movement.

Full of undemanding charm, beautifully orchestrated, this symphony suite provides delightful leisurely listening, particularly when as well-recorded as on this disc.

Summer University Proves Big Help

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) —Eighty - eight above - average students who spent six weeks of their summer holidays at Brock University have found it has paid off in releasing them from 10 months of drudgery in Grade 13.

Dean Arnold Lowenberger said Tuesday that all but 15 of 103 students who participated in a unique summer program will skip Grade 13 and be admitted to Brock in September.

Brock arranged a special summer course to assess the adaptability and eligibility of the students for immediate entrance into university in the fall term.

Last year 59 Grade 12 students were accepted, and university figures show they had a 79.3-per-cent pass record compared to 61.5 per cent for students who came by the normal route.

In fact 6.8 per cent of the group passed with first-class honors compared to 0.8 per cent for their classmates.

While the new system is paying off academically for Brock, there is a financial penalty. The Ontario department of university affairs has refused grant money to the university to help pay for its Grade 12 students.

"It's rather infantile," said Alan Brown, an Oakville student.

"Last year most of the students got to feel offended by the department of university affairs because it did not recognize the Grade 12 students," says Donald Munroe, 19, a freshman last year.

SOME BELOW STANDARD

"The department is fast to tell people they are very progressive, but when something comes along that is progressive, they won't support it."

The students come to the course on the recommendation of their high school teacher or guidance counsellors.

"One student came to us last summer with averages that were lower than university admission standards," said Dr. Arnold Lowberger, director of the course.

"He came because the school guidance counsellors and teachers felt he wasn't working up to par—and he wasn't. Here he did well."

"I didn't do well in high school," said Munroe. "There was an inhibiting atmosphere there. In fact, they had to wait before sending me to the course last year until after the promotional conference so they could be sure I passed."

For many of the students, the seminars and discussions of the summer course are a revelation.

"Here you can develop a rapport with a figure of authority," said Brown. "It's not the teachers up here and the students grovelling below."

"Brock," says Rick Cunninghamm, 18, of Toronto, "is a very human university."

300th Ascent

CHAMONIX, France (Reuters) — Rene Claret-Tournier, a 52-year-old French alpine guide, has completed his 300th ascent of Mount Blanc, Europe's highest mountain. He made his first climb to the summit of the 15,770-foot mountain 25 years ago.

More About Eaton's

There's a new mood affecting a lot of people and places right now . . . a fresh approach to things with just the barest hint of fall creeping in . . . and Eaton's Young Flair Shop is moving ahead of the mood with the pared down, paired up look in dresses to take you back to school in the kind of style you were made for. Dresses simple enough to whisk you through the day and important enough to stay with you through the evening.

Two great looks . . . the clean, uncluttered, close-to-the-body dress interpreted by designers through fabrics with the fluid look of crepes, jerseys, knits -- or through the cut—lines that define the body crisply; with perhaps a detail at waist or shoulder and A-line skirt to keep things fair.

Or the layered look of separates. The jumper dress with shirt or sweater and possibly a fling of scarf. Dresscs with a contrast of colour or fabric for a look of more things than one.

Colours are subtle autumn, eggplant, pumpkin, earth tones, burgundy or fir-green unexpectedly exploding into the bright, primary colours: reds, blues, yellows.

The Bright Brisk Skimmer

Snap up a hint of a military tune with this pretty green, silver-bright buttoned dress. Important seams define the shape with the help of a self-covered back belt. The bonded-wool-blend fabric means it keeps its shape at any pace. This dress, by Pantel of Montreal, in sizes 5, 11 for 22.00

The Soft Layered Look

Here's a softy! This grey and brown herringbone tweed jumper with languid grey crepe blouse. Bow-tie collar spills down the "pearl" buttoned jumper front for a flowing, feminine line. Outfit by Joseph Ribkoff of Montreal: jumper a bonded wool blend with crepe blouse, in sizes 7 and 11 for 40.00

Airlines Mark Co-Operative Half Century

MONTREAL (CP) — Fifty years of world airline co-operation is about to be marked by the 103-member International Air Transport Association, with headquarters in Montreal and Geneva.

On Aug. 28, 1919, six companies signed an agreement in The Hague creating IATA and in the same year 3,500 passengers were carried by civil air transport services. This year international airlines expect to carry a total of 300,000,000 passengers.

In the last 50 years remarkable changes have occurred. One is an increase in aircraft cruising speeds to 600 miles an hour from 85, while passenger fares and cargo rates have decreased considerably.

For example, a transatlantic round-trip fare in 1939 was $675 —equivalent to a lot more in 1969 dollars. Today, the lowest available New York-London fare for individual travel is $300 round-trip. Special promotional fares are still lower, down to $175 round-trip for group travel under certain conditions.

Fare and rate negotiations, all of which have to be agreed on unanimously by the airlines and approved by interested governments, are only part of the wide activities of IATA in organizing world airline co-operation.

HELPS CUT RED TAPE

The prime purposes of the co-operative program of the public service world air transport industry include promotion of safe, regular and economical air transport, provision of means for collaboration among enterprises engaged directly or indirectly in international air transport service, and co-operation with the International Civil Aviation Organization and other international organizations.

A small but important activity within the IATA technical department is concerned with reducing red tape involving customs, immigration and health regulations, and promoting speed, economy and service to passengers and cargo. The airlines, in co-operation with ICAO, consult with various government inspection services to work out simpler clearance documentation and procedures at airports.

The airlines also co-operate in the medical field to deal with all physiological and psychological factors which might affect the safety, comfort and efficiency of air crews and passengers.

Oak Bay Election Corner

Dr. G. Scott Wallace

In these closing columns I would wish to sum up my policy and to restate my aims if elected to the Legislature. In general, I approve of and support the policies of the Social Credit Government. Under the very able leadership of Mr. W. A. C. Bennett, this province has undergone tremendous expansion and development, bringing a high standard of living and valuable social progress to all its residents. A place of the highest honor in the history of British Columbia is well assured for Mr. Bennett. In my opinion, however, a candidate who has not participated in the present government should not dwell on the accomplishments of the past, however creditable they are, but should offer to the electors, only the positive progressive ideas by which he believes the performance of the present administration can be even further enhanced. It is these ideas I have tried to convey in this column of the past three weeks. My basic political philosophy is I believe in the free enterprise system and the conviction that government should not intervene in or seek to control those affairs of the individual, which he can well manage for himself. Government, however, must preserve a strong awareness of social need and be prepared to provide those essential services which the individual cannot reasonably provide for himself. The most urgent need of this community is the creation of appropriate hospital facilities to provide the appropriate level of care to all patients. As a practising physician, all too well aware of the present need, and willing to face the vagaries of political office, I believe that I can render to the people of the Oak Bay East Saanich riding, indeed of this whole area, a useful service by contributing my energy, interest and experience towards a solution of this problem.

My further aims would be to encourage the continuing development of a first class system of education and to support those measures which by preventing and controlling pollution, will create an even healthier environment for every resident. As an Alderman on Oak Bay Council, it has been my constant aim to remain informed, alert and outspoken. This would be my continuing aim as a member of the Legislature. "Our future may be beyond our vision, but need not be beyond our control."

Oil Pickets Hit Airport

Court Halts Pickets

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia Supreme Court injunction halting picketing at Vancouver International Airport was granted the department of transport today.

Airport officials said pickets were dispersing.

Airport Manager W. L. Inglis said the pickets started to move off as soon as the injunction was served.

He said all airline workers were back on the job again and were trying to get things back to normal as quickly as possible.

The busy airport was thrown into confusion when the pickets, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, appeared in the early morning hours, forcing cancellation of several flights and delaying most of the others.

Long queues of passengers stretched across the floor inside the main terminal as the long wait started.

Flights of B.C. Airlines were cancelled and CP Air said passengers were being accepted as facilities permit. One CP Air flight left the airport this morning but other flight plans remained indefinite.

STAFF STAYED

There were delays to Air Canada flights and the company's overnight staff remained on the job, on overtime.

United Air Lines, with no union personnel at the airport, continued regular flights.

Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union said

B.C. TEL MONOPOLY ATTACKED BY TORY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Telephone Company should neither be taken over by government nor continue to operate as a private monopoly, John de Wolf, B.C. Progressive Conservative leader, said Friday.

"We want the monopoly franchise of the B.C. Tel ended forthwith," he said. "And we want the regulations governing rates and profits of the B.C. Tel ended forthwith."

Grits Besieging Phil's Jericho

By BOB MITCHELL, Times Staff

KAMLOOPS — It was the Battle of Jericho Friday night.

A Liberal army of some 2,000 supporters, in more than 350 vehicles, wound through the streets of downtown Kamloops beneath the hilltop residence of Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi.

The massive, horn-honking demonstration, which included provincial Liberal leader Pt McGeer and four Interior Liberal candidates, brought closer to reality the party's hopes of toppling Gaglardi out of the Kamloops seat which he has held for 17 years.

Wackiest Political Event

"It's fairly obvious that Mr. Gaglardi is going to be defeated by a fairly wide margin," McGeer said as he marched through the city.

"It's game over—it's gotta be game over," said McGeer's ecstatic campaign manager Ray Torresan as he surveyed the five-mile cavalcade from a bridge over the North Thompson River.

It was the biggest and wackiest political event in the history of the town of 35,000. Credit for the parade's success and for Liberal enthusiasm generally must go to Jarl Whist, campaign manager for the Kamloops Liberal candidate Mac Bryson.

It was Whist who masterminded the Liberal defeat of Progressive Conservative Davie Fulton during the 1968 federal election and put Len Marchand into the House of Commons.

Since the election was announced four weeks ago, Liberal campaigners have distributed 11,000 Bryson bumper stickers, 8,000 Bryson buttons, 1,000 posters reading "Bryson Cares" and 4,000 four-by-eight plywood signs.

That's in a riding with some 22,800 eligible voters. Organizers said Friday they have 2,000 active workers involved in Bryson's campaign.

Young Liberals Abound

Many, including Bryson and his wife, were out on Kamloops roads at 6 a.m. every morning this week to hold up signs urging work-bound residents to "Vote Bryson."

The most noticeable feature of the parade was youthfulness. Children and teen-agers carried signs, rode on floats or played in one of three bands.

There was a remarkable number of girls, most of them too young to vote, clad in shorts or bikinis. A girl on horseback leading the parade held the bridle of a colt wearing a banner that read "Young Liberal."

There were clowns, cars decorated with Bryson posters, ribbons and balloons, and the racket of hundreds of honking horns.

Many of the cars in the parade came from neighboring ridings of Shuswap, Cariboo and Yale-Lillooet.

Victoria Street, the city's main thoroughfare, was lined with Friday night shoppers who sat on their parked cars, many apparently enjoying the demonstration.

McGeer darted periodically out of the parade to shake hands with spectators, some of whom did not realize who he was until after he had resumed his place in the parade.

Local Gaglardi supporters were few and far between but there was the occasional "Yea, Gaglardi" shout from children and adults. A biplane pulling a "Vote Gaglardi" slogan circled above Kamloops for two hours during the parade.

It would have been interesting to read the former highways minister's thoughts as he surveyed the noisy cavalcade passing beneath his hilltop residence.

'Get Gaglardi' Main Issue

The question of defeating Gaglardi at the polls next Wednesday makes all other issues in the Kamloops riding seem minor.

Gaglardi resigned his portfolio 18 months after questions arose about land deals in which his sons were involved. Earlier this week Premier Bennett announced he would give Gaglardi a portfolio if a Social Credit government is re-elected.

Kamloops Liberal supporters were incensed at the announcement, and while they generally concede their party doesn't stand a chance of forming the next government, they see the election as their chance to end the Socred's political career."

The parade ended with a rally in a North Kamloops shopping centre where McGeer and the four Liberal candidates made brief statements to the cheering crowd.

The candidates included Lloyd Askew from Shuswap, Dr. Lorne Ross from Yale-Lillooet, Dave Zirnhelt—UBC student president last year—from Cariboo, and Bryson.

Only Solution Force—Nasser

CAIRO (Reuters) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt said today the Al Aksah Mosque fire showed force is the only solution to the Middle East situation.

In a message to the Egyptian armed forces, the president said he had thought a great deal about this "horrible crime" and come to the conclusion that there is no alternative, hope or path other than force.

"I have long waited and reflected about the terrible crime which has been committed against the holy of holies of our religion, our history and our civilization," the president said.

"In the end I found nothing but a reaffirmation of the facts that were clear to us from the first day of our cruel experience, namely, that there is no substitute, no hope, no way but Arab force with all it could mobilize, all it could direct and all it could pressure with, until, with God's will, we emerge victorious."

Nasser told his armed forces they were facing "an enemy who has not challenged man, but, in his arrogance and foolhardiness has stretched his arrogance to the sanctities that God has chosen as his houses. . . ."

Meanwhile, the secretary-general of the Arab League, Abdel Khalek Hassouna, today invited foreign ministers of the 14 member states to meet here Monday to discuss the Al Aksah Mosque fire and other Arab issues.

League sources expect most member states to accept the invitation.

The agenda for the meeting Monday night would also cover latest developments in the conflict with Israel and a call by Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization for an Arab summit meeting, the sources said.

A hand grenade exploded today in a Gaza Strip vegetable market that remained open during a general strike over the fire at Islam's holy Al Aksah Mosque. Two Arabs were killed and 15 injured.

All other stores in the teeming Gaza Strip remained closed. The grenade exploded at a market in Rafiah, in the southern part of the Israeli-held strip.

Israeli paratroops and all security forces were on the alert and most Arabs remained indoors in the strip, in towns along the occupied West Bank and in Jerusalem.

Troops and police patrolled near the walls and in the narrow alleys of the Old City. No clashes were reported, but the entire area was tense.

Two units of paratroops were drafted into the occupied section

'Judge Our Record' WAC Tells Nanaimo

By JOHN DRISCOLL, Times Staff

NANAIMO — Tom Berger was only a stone's throw away here Friday but Premier Bennett was not in a stone-throwing mood.

Not a single wild charge.

Not one baleful hint of impending doom.

He just laid out the accomplishments of the last 17 years and said: "Judge."

Bennett told an overflow, friendly crowd at the 650-seat Capitol Theatre he was not going to knock any political party.

"We don't claim ourselves to be perfection," he said. "But with your help we'll strive toward perfection."

Earlier in the evening, Bennett had checked into a hotel room and napped while Mayor Frank Ney fretted in the lobby below.

Bennett slept through a scheduled meeting at an Indian reserve. He arrived at a Moose Lodge convention with Ney in time to shake hands before rushing away to the rally.

There were a few hecklers present but they found Bennett's positive style difficult to argue with.

"When I crossed the floor of the House we were the number one have-not province in the nation. Now we are the number one have province."

Bennett called the Columbia River Treaty with the United States "the best international deal ever made.

"Nobody but B.C. could have made such a deal with the Yankee traders. Isn't it nice to have the United States $600 million in debt to us?

"We took the money in advance at 4.5 per cent interest and we're now investing some of it at 8.2 per cent," he said.

Bennett listed the balanced budgets, surplus and the lowest tax rate in Canada as Socred achievements.

"It's not a question of where the money is coming from for new programs. It's where the money went before, my friend."

Bennett claimed his financial policy has saved the taxpayers "tens of millions of dollars. Seventeen years is a very short period of time," he said, pointing to Alberta where Social Credit has held sway for 34 years.

Bennett dropped the hint that the Nanaimo area would

Bennett, Berger Beaten by Bingo

By JIM HUME

NANAIMO—It was Berger, Bennett or Bingo in Nanaimo Friday night.

And bingo, with $2,500 riding on the final card of the night, outdrew the two political leaders four to one.

While W. A. C. Bennett jammed 650-plus into the Capital Theatre for a night of "the good life," and Tom Berger, leader of the New Democratic Party, led 650-plus into the Quennell School gymnasium, 2,300 gamblers clutching bingo cards swamped the civic arena.

Berger Backed by First Line

But if bingo won in the crowd, it lost in the big name and polticial promise game.

Berger, flanked by former provincial leader Bob Strachan, National Leader Tommy Douglas, and candidates Johnny Squire of Port Alberni, Harry Harris of Comox, and Dave Stupich of Nanaimo was at his best before the capacity crowd of the faithful.

While signs and banners flashed and cheers echoed through the old gym, Berger, not unexpectedly, promised a government car insurance plan if the NDP is elected Aug. 27.

It would, said Berger, be based on the Saskatchewan government auto insurance program, and save insurance purchasers up to 30 per cent in cost.

To back his promise, Berger said the Saskatchewan plan, fathered by Douglas, now was acknowledged as the best in North America — "even by the Wall Street Journal. And if it's good enough for the Wall Street Journal, it's good enough for me."

Berger said his insurance scheme would not force private companies out of business.

"They will," he said, "have the right to compete with the government scheme.

"Right now, B.C. has 188 auto insurance companies. But

Ulster Officials Put Ban On Paisley Protest Parade

BELFAST (CP)—The Northern Irish government today banned a Protestant extremist motorcade about an hour before the first cars were scheduled to leave the cathedral city of Armagh for riot-scarred Belfast.

The Ulster attorney-general ruled that the proposed motorcade, organized by militant Rev. Ian Paisley to protest the virtual disarming of the controversial B-Special police reserves, would be in defiance of a government ban on public meetings made after riots wracked the country last week.

Paisley, leader of the extreme Protestant Free Presbyterian Church, intended to lead his supporters to Stormont Castle, seat of the Northern Ireland Parliament, and hand in a petition to Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark.

The petition condemns a British military order Friday putting the police reservists' weapons under tighter control.

PAISLEY
. . . planned petition

Meanwhile the B-Specials, an almost wholly Protestant force hated and feared by Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority, today began handing in their guns to Belfast's central armories as they went off duty.

British troops were reported standing ready today along the 42-mile route of the parade which would have taken the Protestant cars through several parts of the province where more than half the population is Roman Catholic.

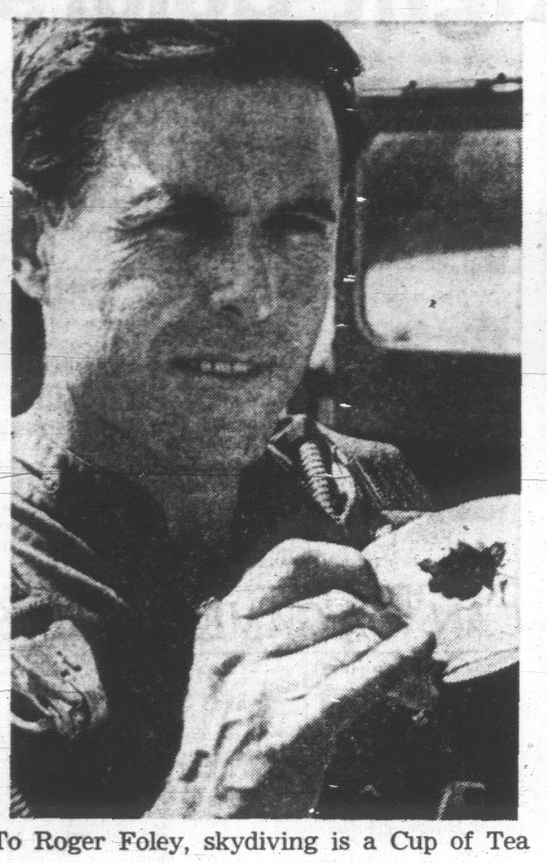

The British-appointed security head in Northern Ireland, Lt.-Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, said in his order Friday the B-Specials would get their guns back only on his command. Observers here said extreme Protestant factions saw the move as a direct threat to their safety.

To Roger Foley, skydiving is a Cup of Tea

Skydiving: It Awes the Trash-Filled Mind

By ED GOULD

"Don't let your mind wander and allow it to dwell on inconsequential things, like your parachute not opening, or you'll end up a quivering jellyfish in the back of the plane by the time you're ready to jump."

Roger Foley was speaking to six students and one reporter at a classroom demonstration of parachute jumping.

The reporter, who was considering taking the course, was suffering airsickness at the thought of hurling himself out the open side of an airplane.

"Just remember, it only takes about 10 minutes to get from the ground to 2,200 feet so put all your mental effort into remaining positive. Concentrate and don't let any trash creep into your mind."

The reporter tried to stop the raw, naked, unreasoning fear that was creeping into his trash-filled mind.

"Now that you've attained this mental attitude, I can do nothing more for you. The rest is up to you and the equipment."

Foley, who recently broke his right ankle while trying for the world's record in parachute jumps in one day, is a firm believer in the old adage that you can't keep a good man down.

"Especially when he has to get up to make a living," he said.

Although he cannot jump yet and is not able to pilot his Cessna 180, Foley is continuing classroom sessions at a hall on Quadra and accompanies his students to Duncan airport for their moment of truth.

While the reporter with the trashy mind tried to get rid of his quivering jellyfish, Foley directed the rest of the students into the next step: a classroom free fall into space.

He held his arms out to demonstrate how the body should fall from the airplane.

"Just as an airplane is controlled by air passing over its surfaces, so your body can be guided by the same rules of aerodynamics."

He spoke of full turns, 180-degree urns, 45-degree turns, cross-country motions, loops and rolls. The newsman was no longer airsick. He was seasick.

The class rose as one to take part in the exercises. Body bends, back bends, arm bends.

"Stomach out, head back," Foley said.

The overweight reporter who had risen with the class found for once his protruding waist-line was in fashion. He could tell people he was practising his free falls.

"Countdown to the moment you open your parachute is important," Foley said. "People are often misled by the length of time they have actually been floating through the air.

"Some misjudge and pull their ripcord too soon; others think it is not time at all and find themselves looking tinto frightened upturned faces."

That frightened upturned face belonged to the reporter.

"Get up off the floor," Foley said.

"There are no telephone poles to whiz by like on the ground to let you have a rough idea of how fast you are going. Count 1,000, 2,000, 3,000, 4,000, 5,000—pull."

The reporter wanted to know what if your parachute still hadn't opened when you finished counting to 5,000.

"You do not count to 5,000," Foley said, sitting down and trying to shut out the memory of it all.

"You count to five, but you say 1,000, 2,000, and so on. If you count to 5,000 you have reached China the hard way. Through a hole in the earth."

Foley stood up and patted an auxiliary chute in the bundle he had packed around one of the shapelier female students.

"If, after waiting a decent length of time, you see nothing flapping around above you, don't wait, open this reserve chute."

Especially if you see chickens running towards you yelling: "The sky is falling, the sky is falling."

"Some people don't wait long enough before they open that second chute and end up coming down with two chutes."

Silly, silly. On the other hand, the reporter thought he'd rather look silly with two chutes flapping than with no chutes flapping.

"Mistakes rarely happen, that's why parachute jumping is the safest aerial sport and much safer than skiing or many other land sports," Foley said.

"Besides, you are not going to be asked to jump until you feel you are ready for it."

The reporter felt a warm glow of confidence. He knew he would never be really ready. Never. But he was interested in why the other students, who looked remarkably sane in other respects, wanted to throw themselves into space.

The students, all from Victoria, gave these reasons:

Vic Wood: "I have always been interested in aircraft and skydiving. This was my first opportunity to take a class and here I am."

Rick Nicholson: "I have never been in the air before. Not even in a plane. This will be a double thrill for me."

Marta Sutherland: "A girlfriend of mine does it. It seemed like a good idea. If she can to it, why can't I?"

Henry Skriety: "I fly with the Victoria Flying Club. You never know when knowing how to jump properly might come in handy."

Mrs. Ferne Downey: "My son Gary dives. I'm getting old so it's almost too late for me to do anything as exciting."

Jim Bartlett: "I have a couple of friends who took this course. There's a certain element of danger but that doesn't appeal to me. It's the floating sensation. It's also the least expensive air sport."

"This is a sport anyone can enjoy," Foley said. The age limit at the low end of the sky is 17 but the sky's the limit at the other.

The reporter decided to take a few more lessons to get his mental attitude just right. To get in the mood he went straight home, turned the thermostat up to 90, assumed the fetal position and pulled a typewriter cover over his head.

Old Saanichton Fair Fares Far From Foul

B.C. fairs fare foul, except Saanichton Fair, which fares fair. In fact, better than fair. It thrives.

While the number of country fairs in B.C. dwindles slowly, the Saanichton Fair levels on. It's the biggest fountry fair in B.C., boasts president Bud Michell, and the oldest continuous one in Canada west of Halifax.

When it swings into action next Saturday it will be for the 101st time — livelier than ever, and with more features and entertainment than it's ever had in its more-than-a-century of existence, Michell predicts.

Creativity of all kinds will find an outlet in competitions at the fair. Home cooking, sewing and knitting, flowers and art are just a few of the areas of competition.

Applications will be acceptable as late as Monday afternoon for most classes of competition for the fair, and it looks like it's going to be a bumper year for just about everything, Michell said.

With Nanaimo and Luxton fairs closed up for good, interest is bound to be greater all over the Island in the Saanichton Fair, the organizers reason.

Determined to be prepared, they've anticipated even larger crowds than last year's 100th anniversary fair drew.

The parking-lot problem will be solved by a free bus shuttle service from a parking lot at East Saanich Road and Mount Newton Cross Road, about a quarter-mile from the fair grounds. Parking at the lot will be free, but parking at the fairgrounds will cost 25 cents.

Midway rides, pony rides and a host of small active animals will provide an attraction for small children at the fair. Food will be available at breakfast, lunch, tea and dinner time all three days, in the newly-built dining room in the basement of the main hall.

A popular feature of the fair is the auction of livestock at 5 p.m. Monday, Aug. 1. Steers and lambs, and some piglets, are the principal animals to be auctioned.

A purse of $400 will be put up for cutting horse competitions which will run Saturday and Sunday with entries from as far away as Edmonton, Washington and Oregon.

Sunday afternoon patrons of the fair will have their ears tickled by music for all ages by the 55-piece Delta Municipal Band, starting at 2 p.m.

VICTORIA GIRL DASHES TO GAMES GOLD MEDAL

A pretty 17-year-old Victoria girl ran the fastest 200 metres of her life Friday afternoon to defeat two Olympic veterans and win a gold medal at the Canada Summer Games in Halifax.

Anne Langdale, a graduate of Mt. Douglas High School this year, pulled off a spectacular upset of 28-year-old Irene Piotrowski, the reigning Canadian champion at the distance, and second fastest woman in world history over the hundred.

The same afternoon, Penny May, a curvaceous blonde, 19-year-old classmate of Miss Langdale, won a silver medal in the 100-metre hurdles and a bronze in the women's pentathlon.

Worried Chamber Issues Call to Vote

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce is urging its members not to be complacent about their vote.

People in Manitoba were complacent, especially those who supported the Conservatives, and the New Democratic Party swept into power, President Clare Copeland said today.

"We can't be partisan, but we can be concerned," he said. The Chamber of Commerce charter does not allow them to favor any political party.

DEPTH REQUIRED

Copeland said a memo made to all chamber members Friday does not attack any particular party when it says British Columbia is "a multi-billion-dollar organization which demands a depth of administrative competence."

It doesn't matter which party wins the election, he said, as long as they have the business skill to run the province.

"A business should be run by people who are experienced. We're concerned about handing over a business to people who aren't responsible enough to run it."

MIDDLE GROUP

It's important that the middle group of people, those who are too busy to take an active interest in politics, got out and vote, he said.

These people "are enjoying the fruits of the economy," and expect it will continue.

In Manitoba, before the NDP won the provincial election, "everyone thought things would continue. But they didn't. They were shocked."

The Chamber's legislative chairman, Dave Fraser, who wrote the memo, termed this "a most important and critical election."

'COMMON SENSE'

He said "we in the chamber should encourage all to vote according to our dictates and common sense." Most of all, they should "get out and vote."

"People should consider the impact and consequences of their vote this time," Fraser said, noting that many "impractical statements" had been made by candidates of all three parties.

He urged all election promises by viewed in perspective and it would be seen that some are incompatible with what can be done.

COPELAND
. . . 'not partisan'

Pensioners Wary Of Promises

Peter Peterson, a 66-year-old Victoria pensioner, believes New Democratic Party Leader Tom Berger will make good his promise to give Victoria's pensioners free bus transportation.

A "CCF supporter from way back," he also believes in the NDP and the efficacy of politicking.

He was the only one of a number of pensioners interviewed in Centennial Square this morning who wasn't skeptical about the whole campaign-promises routine.

"I'm getting about $107 a month and that's not enough. I have to take odd jobs sometimes to fill that out.

"I'm just not satisfied with the present government."

EAGERLY AWAITING

He's predicting and eagerly awaiting an NDP win and he said: "I think a lot of young fellas feel the same way as I do this time."

A 75-year-old man who has watched the election "with some interest" said Berger's promise is just another example of the "promise-the-anything" brand of politics.

"The government's doing all right," he said, but indicated distaste for the fuss which surrounds campaigning. He said he's been a Social Credit supporter since the party started in Alberta.

Two elderly women with curly silver hair and lined faces who are visiting from Vancouver said they are annoyed that Premier Bennett is blamed for everything.

As for Berger's party: "If the NDP can give us free bus rides all the more power to them," said one.

Both doubted this would ever happen.

ON RIGHT TRACK

"Besides we have good privileges here and good roads and the government is doing well. What we need the most is a good opposition to keep them on the right track."

They'd been following the election they said but, "not as much as we used to."

One 84-year-old man reacted energetically to Berger's promise of free transportation.

"What!" he exclaimed, gesturing with his cane," Is someone giving us an extra 60 cents a month. We won't know what to do with it."

His 73-year-old friend laughed.

"We're both NDP supporters," he said. "We're rabid socialists from way back."

Advance Poll Tally Increases Slightly

Victoria advance polling figures continued just slightly higher than the average for previous years in the Victoria area ridings.

In Victoria, advance polling on Thursday, the first day, reached about 400, and Friday's votes brought the total to about 850.

With advance polls open until 9 p.m. tonight, the total in Victoria is expected to top the figures from the 1966 provincial election of about 1,000 in three days.

Advance poll for the four Greater Victoria ridings is at 930 North Park Street.

Oak Bay's figures showed a total of about 600 advance polls for the first two days of voting, compared to 600 votes for the first day alone in the 1968 Oak Bay by-election.

In Esquimalt, 165 votes were cast Thursday compared to 153 for the whole three days of polling in the 1966 election. Fugures for Friday were unavailable at press time.

About 100 voters cast ballots in Saanich and the Islands advance polling station in Sidney, at the Anglican Church Hall, on 4th Street.

No Start For Lecture

Youth conferences shouldn't start before noon. The Victoria Youth Council organizers of the First Vancouver Island Youth Conference found out the hard way today.

Clearly printed in the conference schedule was the information: Saturday, 10 a.m., YMCA, keynote speaker to be announced.

By 10:10 a.m. the speaker, Dick Martin, a lecturer in the Philosophy Department at the University of Victoria and six young people had arrived.

Martin, it seemed, was to speak on "society as an organism" as soon as enough people had arrived.

"Everyone must have slept in," apologized Victoria Youth Council worker at 10:30. Three more had joined the small audience.

Sometime between 10:30 and 11 a.m. the keynote speaker slipped away, unnoticed.

Alaskan Governor To Speak

The Alaskan view of Pacific Northwest trade, tourist and transportation development will be presented here next month at the 1969 convention of Pacific Northwest Trade Association.

Governor Keith Miller will be one of five featured speakers that include former attorney-general of B.C. Robert Bonner, now executive vice-president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.

Keynote speaker will be William Lane, publisher of Sunset Magazine, while John D. Gray, president of Omark Industries, Portland, Ore., will talk on trade, and H. A. Carter, assistant to the vice-president of Boeing Company's commercial airplane division, will deal with transportation.

Official theme of the conference, expected to be attended by 300 delegates at the Empress Hotel, is Tourism, Transportation and Trade — Everybody's Business.

Cars, Garage Wrecked; Driver Fined

Pleading guilty to impaired driving, Reggie S. Mushansky, CFB Esquimalt, was fined $400 in provincial court today. He was also prohibited from driving for an indefinite period.

"Do you realize you are lucky to be alive," Judge William Ostler told the accused.

Mushansky lost control of his car and caused damages totalling $5,000 to two cars and a carport.

He was driving south in the 400 block Beach Drive when he mounted the curb, sideswiped a car on the left side of the road, smashed into a carport at 488 Beach Drive, knocking down the roof pillars, and wrecking the car inside.

Mushansky suffered cuts to his face and neck.

"You came close to entering the house," Judge Ostler said. "You were extremely lucky."

Area Candidates Planning Final Pre-Election Push

Area candidates in Wednesday's election are tapering off meetings and appearances, but most will make at least one more showing before voting day.

Biggest shows will be the Liberal Party's Central Park salmon barbecue for party leader Pat McGeer Sunday, beginning at 5 p.m. and the New Democratic Party's rally, Sunday at 8 p.m. in Oak Bay Junior High.

Besides NDP Leader Tom Berger, rally speakers will include former leader Robert Strachan and welfare critic Dave Barrett. All area NDP candidates will make appearances.

ALL COMERS

National NDP leader T. C. Douglas will assist Victoria candidates Peter Bunn and Phil Fawcett and Oak Bay candidate Jack McKenzie Monday. The group will visit Kiwanis Village, where they will have tea and discuss voting and polling station problems with village-dwellers.

Douglas will take on all comers in Centennial Square Monday noon and at 7:30 p.m. he will talk to campaign workers at Victoria constituency headquarters at 1018 Blanshard.

Victoria NDP candidates Bunn and Fawcett will address a meeting of the Gyro Club Monday at 2:10 p.m. in the Empress.

NDP candidate for Esquimalt James Gorst will attend a coffee party at the home of Tom Money, 5577 Medberry Close, Sunday at 2 p.m.

Saanich and the Islands candidate for the NDP Don Johannessen will attend a coffee party tonight at the home of A. E. Richardson, 1950 Hovey Road.

All candidates for Saanich and the Islands are expected to appear at a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the Sidney Hotel, sponsored by the Sidney Cramber of Commerce.

Liberal party candidates for the Victoria ridings will attend the free salmon barbeque at Central Park.

GRASSROOTS TOUR

Victoria Liberal candidates Ian Stewart and Mel Couvelier will attend a coffee party Monday evening at the Colonial Inn on Government Street. They were to make a grassroots tour of Royal Athletic Park during the Mounties baseball game this afternoon.

Fred Phillips, Esquimalt Liberal candidate, will meet 12 Sooke residents Monday night to discuss water and fire hazard problems.

Allan Cox, Oak Bay Liberal candidate, will attend an informal neighborhood meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in St. George's Church Hall.

Victoria Social Credit candidates Waldo Skillings and William N. Chant planned short addresses at a youth rally at Kinsman Park today at 2:30 p.m. A car caravan to suburban shopping centres will be followed by a youth rally and dance at youth headquarters at 900 Fort tonight.

Other Socred candidates, Dr. G. Scott Wallace of Oak Bay and Herb Bruch of Esquimalt will attend no more public meetings before the election, confining themselves to personal canvassing.

Reg. Pring, Victoria Socred campaign manager, said he did not know Premier Bennett's plans for the next few days but did not expect the premier to visit Victoria.

Arthur Mayse . . .

GO NORTH, GO SOUTH, go practically anywhere in Greater Victoria these fair blue days, and you will come on an all too familiar scene. Its components are a mound of earth, a gaping hole, a slalom course marked by red cones, and a hard-hatted toiler with circular paddle in hand. One side reads 'Stop', and I've heard a rumor that 'Go' is lettered on the other.

Since spring, the municipalities have been picking up their streets and laying them down again, and if you are lucky enough to miss Little Thermopylae in Saanich, they'll trap you in Oak Bay.

It's summer-time, when the blacktoppin's easy, and the driver without a gravel peck or tar stain on his chariot is as rare as a provincial Conservative candidate.

Since much of the digging and filling will lead to smoother-flowing traffic, patience is the watchword.

Only, once in a while, as I wait patiently for my turn to run red-cone narrows, I spare a thought for the Roman road-builders of old . . . and I don't mean Philipus Gaglardius, either.

No blacktop for Caesar's road crews. They built 'with stone, and they built 'em to last until Doomsday!

A SCOUT IN THE SEETHing heart of our city tells me that a strange bird-call has been creating mystery and even suspicion down around Douglas and Johnson.

The sound, says he, seems to come from everywhere and nowhere. He insists that it is the mating cry of the travelling crane, but adds that it could be mistaken for a brisk, appreciative wolf whistle.

"I'm not a girl-watcher," our informant goes on, "but I like to keep track of what's passing. When that whistle cuts loose, I see them give the least little start, and maybe turn their heads after a few steps . . . You know the way they do."

He then enlarged his possibly exaggerated account by saying one party had enquired about the whistle at City Hall, and been told it might be the cry of the wuffle-bird.

"Well, I asked him, what makes it?"

"The crane," he said. "The one working on the new bank. I never heard a signal like that before."

I dropped down to confirm, and can report that a sure enough yellow crane is perched a fair hike above street level on the bank a-building.

But, though any number of well-shaped stems passed by, it didn't once whistle.

NO RENTAL OFFERS FOR the woman who must find another place for herself and her three children by the end of the month; but a call from hard-working Saanich Alderman Mrs. Edith Gunning.

When the mother in question mentioned "low income rental," the alderman explained, she was referring to the Housing Registry. This service is located at Spencer House, and has been operated since last Dec. 1 by a staff of two men who came out of retirement to take on a very hard job indeed.

This is to find quarters for just such people in trouble as Mrs. X if they can.

It's frustrating work, and a score to date of one applicant placed from each five applications underscores a national distress story. Too many old houses being torn down to make room for apartments, and ever fewer roofs for low income renters.

The situation is rotten bad now, and getting worse.

Coming up for the victims, one hell of a winter.

OAKLAND HOOP TEAM GOES TO WASHINGTON

NEW YORK (AP)—The American Basketball Association has announced the sale and transfer of Oakland Oaks to Washington lawyer Earl Foreman for $2,600,000.

Executive director Thurlo McCrady of the ABA and Foreman will meet in Washington to work out details of the transfer.

Coach Alex Hannum, led the financially-ailing Oaks to the league championship last season.

Foreman said he and Hannum will meet in San Francisco next Tuesday "to talk about coaching plans for the Washington club."

Saanich Club Takes Island Boxla Crown

Saanich UCT rambled to the Vancouver Island midget "A" lacrosse crown Friday at Braefoot Park by clipping Victoria Home Lumber 14-9 in the deciding game of a best-of-three playoff.

Saanich and Victoria, the host team, enter the B.C. championship, a four-team, double-knockout series, next Saturday and Sunday at Memorial Arena. New Westminster and North Burnaby are also entered.

Norm Baker and Jim McCreesh, with four goals each, led the winners. Mark Patterson, with two, and Mike Jacobs, Mike Wilson, Rusty Ralston and Kurt Robb, with one each, completed UCT's scoring.

Don Ferguson scored three goals and Rick Sylvester and Danny Green scored two each for Victoria. Ron McGinnis and Jim Neme had one goal each.

Olivares Wins Title

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ruben Olivares of Mexico City, displaying a vicious left hook, captured the bantamweight title of the world Friday night, knocking out Australia's Lionel Rose at 2:24 of the fifth round.

Olivares, unbeaten in 52 fights, scored his 50th knockout with a hard right that sent Rose sprawling on his face. Referee stopped the bout without counting.

Leaders Settle For Ties

LONDON (CP) — Halfback Tom Smith whipped in a goal from 25 yards today and earned Liverpool a 3-3 draw against Burnley in a day that ended with all the top soccer teams losing their unbeaten records in the First Division of the English League.

Smith's goal left Liverpool at the top of the standings with nine points from five matches.

The Merseyside team grabbed that late equalizer—in the 77th minute—before a crowd of 52,000 fans.

Liverpool is tied with Everton and Wolverhampton, the other unbeaten teams before today's matches, who also wound up with draws.

Ian Bowyer, Manchester City's forward, headed in a great goal in the 55th minute to give his team a 1-1 draw against Everton and Wolverhampton had to be satisifed with a goalless draw against Manchester United.

Ian Ure, signed from Arsenal for £80,000 earlier in the week, did a lot to Bolster United's defence.

UNITED STILL LOSING

United, the former European Cup champions, with such stars as Bobby Charlton, Denis Law, George Best and Pat Crerand, still has to win a match.

Coventry City moved into fourth place with a 1-0 victory at Ipswich on a goal by inside left Willie Carr in the 61st minute.

Defending English League champion Leeds United was held to a 1-1 draw by Newcastle, the reigning European Fairs champions.

A goal by winger Jim Scott in the 61st minute earned Newcastle the draw.

Derby County, promoted along with Crystal Palace at the end of last season, held Stoke City to a goalless draw and has seven points—the same as Leeds.

Go Ahead — CUT UP THIS NEWSPAPER!

It's YOURS to clip, rip and tear out the advertisements from its pages every day!

The readers of Victoria's daily newspapers are always clipping out parts of pages and tucking them away in pocket or purse, to be used later as ready reference for shopping.

It is a common practice!

Budget-minded readers make a habit of "shopping the ads" even though they may not be searching for a specific item.

In fact, studies prove most readers prefer newspaper advertising as part of their daily reading. It is a welcome feature of their paper.

Advertising—National, Local and Classified—presented daily in local daily newspapers, is the best shopping guide a consumer has. If you are among the many readers who enjoy clipping the paper, keep it up. If you are not, why not start now?

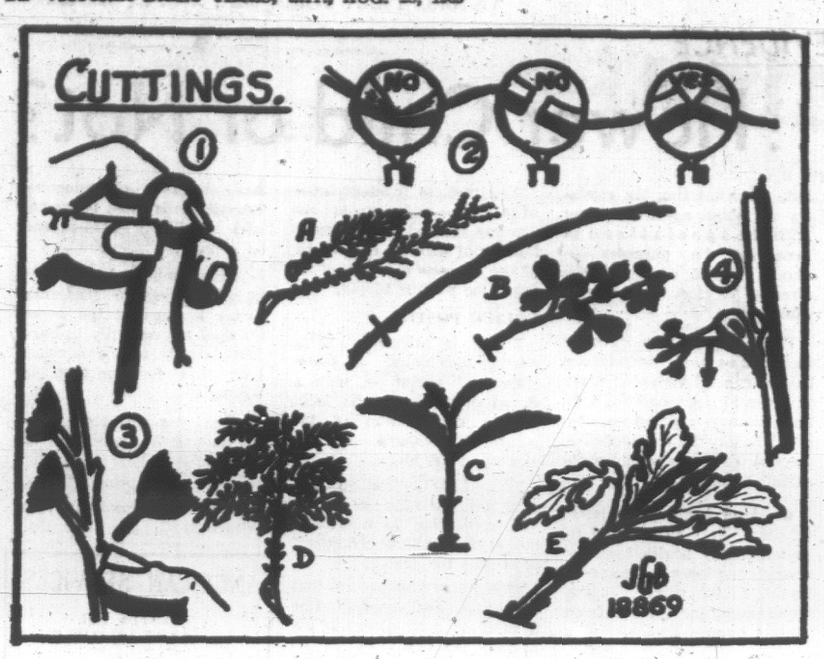

Advertisers Note:

THERE ARE 71,000 VICTORIA NEWSPAPERS PLACED IN CIRCULATION DAILY! Of this total, over 61,000 copies are purchased each day by subscribers in the Metropolitan Area (DBS).

These people read the paper from front page to last, usually discuss its contents and CLIP OUT advertisements to assist them with their shopping. Your advertising saves them endless time in shopping around and making selections. It's easy to understand why the advertising is so WELCOME!

Make sure your advertisements are clipped for shopping reference by advertising in the 'Welcome Medium'—your

'Cutting' for Propagation Depends on Environment

By JACK BEASTALL

This is another in our series of illustrated articles for beginners. It deals with the removal of a small piece of a plant for the purpose of making a new plant. The piece is called a "cutting," the method is by "cuttage."

Jack

TYPES: Softwood, taken in early spring of new growths. Root easily but wilt rapidly unless in a propagating case.

Half-ripe, taken from late July to mid-September. A little slower in rooting but easier to handle.

Hardwood, taken October to December. Limited to certain kinds of plants.

For this article, we are concerned with half-ripe cuttings which are successful with the majority of plants.

TIME: There is no calendar date for taking cuttings, everything depends on previous weather conditions, water and food available, and the general health of the plants.

TESTING: Figure 1 in illustration shows how to determine if a shot is in condition to make roots reasonably quickly. For clarity, leaves are not shown.

The shoot is bent over the first finger and squeezed with thumb and finger to a hairpin shape. One of three things will happen as shown at 2; the shoot will flatten if too soft, break in two if too hard, or crack part way through when in what is believed to be the ideal condition.

Shoots receiving noon and afternoon sunshine ripen ahead of those in morning sun only. Try shoots from different positions on the shrub.

This test is used on all leaf-losing and evergreen broad-leaved shrubs grown for their flowers or foliage.

NOTE: The above test does not apply to plants of the conifer group (cedars, pines, arbor-vitae) because these are trees although they may only grow to three feet in dwarf forms. They are not evergreen shrubs.

HEEL CUTTINGS: These are taken as shown at 4 by pulling downwards to obtain a heel of the old stem. Heather cuttings (A) and conifer cuttings (D) are taken this way.

LENGTH: The average cutting is three to four inches in length when finally prepared for inserting into the rooting medium. A piece 12 to 36 inches long is a branch, not a cutting.

When collecting cuttings, take five or six inches of growth, making a new cut just below a leaf node (see B, C, and E).

Remove lower leaves (whether large or small) so that about two inches of bare stem can be put into the medium. Don't tear off the leafs, this damages the stem and sometimes removes the cells that produce the roots. Place thumbnail at base of leaf stem (3) and pull leaf over nail.

Shown at A are two heather cuttings. The short winter flowering is only one to two inches long; the longer summer flowering about three inches.

Two kinds of broom (B), one more or less leafless and five inches, the other with leaves about three to four inches long.

The only cutting shown that is taken in spring of soft growths is the chrysanthemum at E, a young growth about three inches long, taken from the roots of an old plant.

Tips For The Home Gardener

WEEK'S WORK

Before end of month, pot up freesias using an extra deep pot and a well drained soil mixture, slightly damp. Keep outdoors in a cool place until top growth shows.

To flower in a cool greenhouse in spring, sow seed now of schizanthus, 10-week stock, mignonette. Snaps can also be sown for early setting out next spring.

Put hyacinth bulbs into pots. Roman hyacinths are a good idea, for they have many slender stems of flowers. The pots go into a dark cool place for rooting period of about seven or eight weeks.

The Clear Crystals pansies for winter bloom which were sown a month ago should be pricked out into good soil of vegetable plot for quick growing until October when final move to flowering beds is made.

Fall blooming acidanthara (Abyssinian-lily) and schizostylis (Kafir-lily) can both have a liquid feeding of balance fertilizer if growing in containers outdoors.

Vacant spots wanted for later planting will be in better condition if watered occasionally, and cultivated lightly to destroy weed seedlings as they sprout.

No pruning on shrubs which have bloomed since July, or will bloom from now on, but faded flower heads can be removed.

When digging or pulling onions, allow them to dry in sun for several successive days, taking them in early each evening or on damp days.

Divine Healing Seen At English Burrswood

By GODFREY ANDERSON

GROOMBRIDGE, England (AP)—It isn't a bit like Lourdes but the same sort of people are there. They come on their aluminum crutches, bent over wooden canes, huddled in wheelchairs, with faces stamped by suffering and eyes still lit by hope.

This is Burrswood, Church of England centre of divine healing—the place where they tell you miracles do sometimes happen.

It's little more than 40 miles from bustling London, in 230 acres of idyllic peace in rural Kent County. People come here from all over Britain, Europe and even North America to seek a cure which some will say they find.

Here medicine and religion work side by side. Burrswood itself, a grey stone mansion, once an English stately home, is a 42-bed clinic where the doctors and nurses rule. The little church of Christ the Healer, built beside it, is where the sick undergo a priest's laying-on of hands.

In the spring and summer, people come by the coachload for thrice-weekly healing services. Nine thousand came last year alone. They represented Christian denominations from Roman Catholics to Pentecostals, those from other faiths and those with no faith at all.

ALL FIND HELP

"They all take something away with them—if only peace," says Rev. Garth Bawtree-Williams, Burrswood's resident chaplain.

"Sometimes, of course, no physical cure follows the laying-on of hands. But the person is made whole in his personality, so he can better accept his situation."

Father Garth, now 68 and with two decades in the church's healing ministry, says he was cured of blindness due to diabetes when another priest laid healing hands on him.

"That was what really brought me into the healing ministry," he said. "Of course, some priests are hostile; some doctors are against it. They say: 'Miracles don't happen.' But when one has happened to you and when you see them happening, there's no argument about it."

The Church of England has no elaborate means of checking claimed cures such as the Roman Catholic Church has in connection with Lourdes.

Dr. Edward Aubert is in charge of the medical end of Burrswood's partnership of religion and medicine.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to extend my thanks and appreciation to the friends of the late Mrs. Ethel Fielding for their acts of kindness shown to her during the past few weeks. Also my sincere thanks to those who attended the Service. — Niece Winnie.

THIS IS TO SAY THANK YOU TO our many friends and neighbours for all your kindness. The beautiful floral tokens, so many of them from your gardens. To all of you who came to the service and to the Legion Ladies and Comrades. A special thanks to the Doctors, Nurses and staff at the Veterans Hospital for all the wonderful care. To Mr. Whitmore for his kind and sincere words. — Mrs. A. G. Deverson and family.

WE WISH TO EXPRESS OUR heartfelt thanks and appreciation to all our friends and neighbours for their kind expressions of sympathy in the recent loss of our dear daughter and sister, Lorraine Ostler. Also Father Jackson, Dr. Simpson, Dr. Perry, Dr. Hamdi, Jubilee Hospital Nurses. — Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hall and family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HAMP — IN LOVING MEMORY of my dear husband, our father, and grandfather, Ernest Alfred, who passed away, August 24, 1964.
True was his heart, his friendship sound.
Loved and respected by all around
He left us suddenly—his thoughts unknown,
But he left us, a memory—
We are proud to own.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
—Too dearly loved ever to be forgotten, your loving wife and family.

McLAUGHLIN —In loving memory of Anna G. McLaughlin, who passed away August 23, 1961.
Loving and kind in all her ways.
Upright and just, to the end of her days;
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind.
Beautiful memories she left behind
—Ever remembered by her son, Gordon.

MORINO — James Morino — Aug. 1st, 1969.
God gave to him
Eternal life
And he shall live
within his son.
Jim—I will never believe what I have been told. I know you're just away and we will be together again.
Honey—I love you.—Linda Morino.

NICHOLSON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Evelyn Sylvia Nicholson, who passed away suddenly August 23, 1959.
—Always remembered by Reg, sons Roy, Monte and Bob Preston and brother Del T. Morrison.

RANKIN — Dorothy. Loved and missed.
There is a link death cannot sever.
Love and remembrance last forever.
—Neil, Marlene and family.

HOW TO REGISTER

Classes are open to all persons 15 years of age and over who are not attending day school.

Registrations may be made in two ways:

(1) Students may register early for all courses. This reserves a position in the class for the first who apply, the remainder being accepted if room permits. To register, fill in the Application Form or send a letter giving the same information—name, address, telephone number, course, fee and evening (if possible). Registration may be made in person in the Adult Education Administration Office (Ewing Building), Lansdowne at Richmond.

(2) Unless previously registered, a student may register at the centre on the evening the class opens if space is available.

FEES

Fee for the full course must be paid at the time of registration.

REFUNDS and TRANSFERS

No refunds will be made after classes commence. However, any person who wishes to withdraw before classes begin may be given a refund, less a charge of $3.00. Students who wish to transfer from one class to another must pay a $3.00 transfer fee.

CLASS CANCELLATION

The Director of Adult Education reserves the right to discontinue any class in which enrolment is less than 15 persons, or in which the attendance or progress is unsatisfactory, or postpone classes when inclement weather conditions exist.

SATURDAY CLASSES—Will not be held on long weekends (i.e., when the Monday following is a holiday).

STATUTORY HOLIDAYS—Schools are closed.

EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES—Common tools and equipment normally supplied by the schools may be used by the evening students. However, specialized tools, materials, books, etc. must be supplied by the student unless otherwise noted.
